"The Travels of a Grain of Wheat" was graphically depicted in this Purity Flour and Purity Oats exhibit. The moving wagon, train of cars and boat attracted throngs.

Purity Flour in Unique Display

ONE of the most unique and artistic exhibits in the Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition this year was that of the Western Canada Flour Mills Company—featuring their well known and generally preferred lines—Purity Flour and Purity Oats.

The novel scenic features, lighting effects and striking appearance of this display made it the cynosure of all eyes and drew thousands of flattering comments from the throngs that daily surrounded it.

A miniature stage setting occupying the central display depicted the progress of the grain from the fields by all methods of transportation, which by the way were tiny model wagons, boats and trains which actually moved down the road from the fields, glided along the waterways and over the tiny rails to modern elevators and mills. Framing this scenic feature were pillars of wheat sheaves, with pyramids of Purity Oats and Purity Flour, while a central display case filled with the most tempting pastries, cakes, etc., baked with Purity Flour by ladies of the city, caught the admiring eyes of most every housewife.

Many thousands of handsome booklets containing scores of useful recipes were passed out to the crowds of visitors as well as hundreds of Purity Painting Books for the children. Altogether the Purity Booth was a remarkable one and one that will indelibly associate the name PURITY with good flour in the minds of merchants and consumers alike.

The exhibit of Willards Chocolates, Ltd., was the centre for crowds at all times during the Canadian National Exhibition—It was one of the prettiest booths in the Pure Food Building.

Many Innovations at the Willard Booth

WILLARD'S Chocolates made many new friends with their wonderful exhibit in the New Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition. The "Originators of Swiss Style Milk Chocolate" certainly displayed their wonderful products under the most unusual and pleasing environs. The 36 ft. booth was brilliantly illuminated and the rich color scheme of the dainty decorations told a quality story that was a credit to the Canadian Chocolate and Confectionery Industry. The display was literally bubbling over with innovations—New goods of merit with a charm that suggested many novel selling thoughts to the thousands of retail merchants who personally inspected the booth.

Willard's chocolates represent purity, flavor and variety. They have won a lasting place in the esteem of the connoisseur of real confections. It must be a Willard, and this assertion was never more truly spoken than during the two weeks of the big Fair. When one witnessed the throngs of both young and old, of both children and adults, that gathered around the Willard booth, it was possible to estimate something of the tremendous strides that these lines have made towards the complete capture of popular opinion.

"There are none just like them," was a remark heard in front of the booth. "They are always fresh." It is just this maintenance of quality and high standard of excellence that have made Willard's the chocolates of the people.

One of the most attractive display cases in the exhibit contained Willard's new Swiss Style Bulk Chocolates. This line was displayed in handsome maroon colored boxes with gold printing which were beautifully packed with a superfine grade of Chocolates.

Another delightful spot to connoisseurs was a showcase displaying a very extensive assortment of new Packages. Something entirely different in gift boxes and novelties.

In the 5c and 10c line a display of some seventy different varieties were on exhibit. This display presented some of the most original products, for which Willard's are justly famous.—5c Swiss Bud Tubes, 5c Humpty Dumpty Bar, 5c Oh Min Bar, 5c Sunny Jim Bar and dozens of other wonderful combinations under their well known Swiss Style Labels and different attractive wrappers.

One Package in particular claimed an entire display case.—The name of the Package is "Chocolate Irresistible" and it embodies everything that the name implies and will immediately appeal to connoisseurs who are especially particular.

Illustrating the beautiful booth of The Cowan Co., Ltd., where thousands of people saw cocoa in its native state growing in the pod on the tree.

Cowan's Cocoa Grove Attracts Thousands

WERE YOU a visitor to the cocoa grove in the Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition? Of course if you were at the big Fair at all, you could not miss this beautiful exhibit, for it was the subject of admiration from the thousands who daily thronged the Food Show. It was none other than the exhibit of The Cowan Co., Ltd., Toronto, manufacturers of cocoa and chocolate.

From the standpoint of originality, educational value, and real artistic merit this booth was outstanding, and further enhanced the popularity of Cowan products. Showing the cocoa tree as it grows in tropical climes, was a revelation to the public. Against a background of tropical scenery in lovely and harmonious colors, depicting the far away countries where the cocoa beans grow, hung these cocoa trees laden with the pods in their natural state. The educational feature of this exhibit was something for everyone at the Exhibition to profit by, and children as well as "grown-ups" manifested a keen interest. Few people were aware of how cocoa is obtained. They learned through the enterprise of this firm that it is a tree whereon grow the pods from which the cocoa bean is obtained. Unlike bearing trees in this country the pods grow from out the trunk and limbs, the light branches serving merely as shading. When the pods are ripened they are cut from the trees by means of a forked knife set on the end of a long pole. They are then gathered in heaps and left on the ground for 24 hours, after which the beans are removed and taken to sweating houses where they undergo fermentation and are cured. What happens after the beans reach the Cowan factory is interestingly told in an illustrated booklet that was given to the people who called at the booth.

The value of cocoa as a food, its satisfying qualities, within the reach of rich and poor alike, were all stressed by the courteous attendants who sought to enlighten visitors. That thousands went away more convinced than ever of the place cocoa and chocolate should hold in the average household, there can be no doubt, and you, Mr. Grocer, more than ever before, are going to be asked for Cowan's cocoa. See to it that your stock is equal to this increased demand that is bound to evidence itself in your store.

Cowan's maple buds, bars, and other chocolate confections were more than ever popular, particularly with the kiddies and younger folk, who would have none other.

Patterson Candy Booth a Magnet for Crowds

THE PATTERSON Candy Co.'s booth in the Pure Food Show at the Canadian National Exhibition was one of the most attractive and artistically decorated of the many admirable exhibits in the splendid new Pure Food Building, and during each day of the entire two weeks of the Exhibition proved a magnet for record crowds who were all eager to sample the famous Patterson's, Toronto, Candies.

Pictured on a beautifully decorated background were the three feature Patterson lines that have done much to build up the confectionery departments of thousands of grocers from coast to coast—

PATTERSON'S CHOCOLATES—"A matter of good taste;" MOONLIGHT MELLOS; and PATTERKRISP CANDY—that "Tastes Like More." Most every grocer will remember with what phenomenal success these last two live-sellers were introduced to the trade, while it is a generally known fact that Patterson's delicious chocolates have won premier laurels wherever good candy is appreciated.

Patterson's Chocolates are of a quality which has held a foremost position in the Candy world for over a quarter century—a quality welcomed and appreciated by the candy lovers from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The daintiness of the packages has made them eagerly sought after by the highest class of trade in the Dominion. These popular and always pleasing packages were attractively displayed in glass showcases at either end of the booth. On the centre counter a complete variety of 5c and 10c chocolate bars were featured—special attention being called to the delicious new Swiss Style Milk Chocolate Bars that are rapidly making a name for themselves as trade winners wherever displayed. Rows of glass display jars contained the samples of the Patterson's comprehensive line of Satin Finish and Gloss Goods, Assorted Fruit Jellies, and many other varieties of specialties that have gained favor among the trade—completed an exceedingly effective display—one that drew many complimentary remarks from the vast numbers who viewed it.

A most pleasing and gratifying feature of the Patterson Exhibit this year was the large number of merchants who called at the booth and expressed their keen delight in the quality of Patterson's lines and their appreciation of the prompt and courteous manner with which they had been served.

Patterson Candy Co.'s success is largely due to the close co-operation with their customers that places their products at the topmost line among confectioners—the assistance they render to their agencies in the way of display matter, signs and samples—the guarantee of their chocolates—and the superb quality of the goods.

Dealers who get behind these popular Patterson products will find them all fast sellers with an unusually generous profit margin.

Where the "Made-in-London" Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes were exhibited—one of the real busy spots in the new Pure Food Building.

Kellogg's Made-in-London Corn Flakes

ONCE again Kellogg's "made-in-London" Toasted Corn Flakes (the corn flakes with that different flavor) made a big hit with the throngs of visitors at the Canadian National Exhibition. Many thousands of sample packages of this nationally preferred breakfast food were passed out from the Kellogg booth in the new Pure Food Building by a staff of demonstrators who explained to housewives just why they should specify these original "Kellogg Baked" and "London Flaked" Corn Flakes—just why they should insist on the old familiar red and green package with the words "Made in Canada" and "London, Ont.," printed in red on the face of the carton.

Most grocers know what this "Made in Canada," "London, Ont.," means to them. They don't need to be told that these five words are still the safest guide to the best corn flakes as they have been for the past thirteen years.

The London, Ont. plant where these superior corn flakes are processed is one of the most modernly equipped of its kind on the continent. The corn used in their preparation is the finest that money can buy and every detail throughout their manufacture is carried out under the watchful eyes of experts. To this careful, special processing of the best corn, is due their different flavor—a flavor that has always brought greater profits and greater satisfaction to merchants who featured them.

Specify these "Kellogg Baked," "London Flaked," all Canadian corn flakes next time you order. "There's a difference" that makes it worthwhile being particular.

Exhibit of Jack Frost Refrigeration Systems where their economical characteristics were explained to hundreds of interested merchants at the Exhibition.

Jack Frost Refrigeration Systems

MORE than six hundred interested merchants visited the exhibit of the Jack Frost Refrigeration Systems in the Industrial Building at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, and went away convinced that the Jack Frost method of refrigeration for stores where meat and other perishable foods are kept for sale, is the ideal one.

Many facts were presented by those in charge of the exhibit to show the economical value of Jack Frost Refrigeration. Its first cost is the biggest cost, but after that the expense of operation is so much less than the cost of ice that it immediately appeals to the merchant who is anxious to give the best service to his customers at the least expense to himself. The response to the exhibit this year greatly surpassed that of a year ago. The reputation of Jack Frost has been steadily growing and those who have heard during the year of its wonderful economical value spent a great deal of time at the Exhibition this year in going thoroughly into the equipment and in visualizing the duties it can perform in their own stores.

In the center of the booth was installed a standard size butcher's refrigerator and at one end was an eight-foot glass top-display counter. These were operated by a one-ton Jack Frost Unit, which is capable of cooling a space to the amount of twelve hundred cubic feet.

The refrigerator and display counter were appetizingly arranged with fresh meats and vegetables and were just as fresh and tasty in appearance at the end of the two weeks of the Exhibition as at the beginning.

The Jack Frost System is unique in many respects. It can be readily installed in any show window, which makes it a valuable asset to the retail merchant who is desirous of displaying to best advantage his cooked meats, bacon and green vegetables during the hot days of the year.

It must not be considered that Jack Frost is a refrigerator. It is a cooling system that can be easily attached to any type of refrigerator, show case or counter in any center where there is a supply of electricity and water. Jack Frost keeps the cooling box at an even temperature throughout the entire year. It never varies. The thermostatic control, a special feature with the Jack Frost System, automatically keeps the temperature at the degree decided upon. It is only necessary to set the Thermostat at a certain point ranging from twenty to forty degrees, turn on the power and Jack Frost does the rest. The System removes all worry in connection with keeping food products until they have been sold. When the desired temperature in the refrigerator is obtained, Jack Frost instantly ceases to operate, but the minute that the temperature rises to as much as one degree the machine is again snapped on.

Many tests have shown that the cost of operating Jack Frost is more than 50 per cent. less than the cost of ice, and the majority of cases have shown that the cost has been in the neighborhood of 25 per cent. of the cost of operating by ice.

The Jack Frost Ice Machine Company, Limited, is located on Dundas Street, Toronto, and any merchant who was not fortunate enough in seeing the demonstration at the Exhibition this year should get in touch with the company. A booklet describing the System in detail will be sent to any enquirer.

The log cabin in the centre made entirely of Old Tyme Maple Sugar was one of the chief attractions in the Canadian Maple Products booth.

Throngs Stop to See Maple Sugar "Log Cabin"

THE HUNDREDS of retail merchants who attended the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto recently, will recognize the photograph reproduced here, as the exhibit of the Canadian Maple Products Company. It is certain that no dealer failed to see this booth in the new Pure Food Building where a big "log cabin" built entirely of maple sugar was a unique feature. Without exaggeration, hundreds of thousands of people stopped to admire the exhibit and to sample the Old Colony Maple Syrup, the Old Tyme Maple Butter or the delicious maple sugar of which samples were generously distributed. Many carried bottles of syrup or jars of maple butter home with them and the outcome is sure to be a big demand from those who have sampled the products. Many dealers who had not previously stocked these lines, stopped to make inquiries and on talking with the representatives in charge of the exhibit, promptly gave orders. In fact, no dealer could have done otherwise when he witnessed the interest women showed. The demonstration of the various uses for Old Tyme Maple Butter attracted housekeepers particularly. They eagerly crowded about the demonstrator, as she explained her quick and economical method of icing cakes.

Old Colony Maple Syrup and Old Tyme Maple Butter are made of none but the first run of sap from the famous maple syrup province, Quebec, thus absolutely guaranteeing the quality. Critical government analysis has proved it 100 per cent. pure. These facts were not lost sight of by the throngs of Canadians who demand perfection in their national product, and many made careful note of the names "Old Colony" and "Old Tyme."

Dealers who are not carrying this line of unrivalled maple products can secure them through the wholesale trade or by communicating direct with the Canadian Maple Products Co., Ltd., Van Horne Street, Toronto.

This exhibit was responsible for getting thousands of samples of Egg-O Baking Powder into Canadian homes.

Egg-O Gets 100 per Cent. Certificate

DIRECTORS of the Canadian National Exhibition gave the Egg-O Baking Powder booth in the new Pure Food Building a one hundred per cent. efficiency mark. This was for appearance and the general tone and character of the booth and the way it was conducted by the men in charge. The background consisted of stucco panels with a beautiful blue decorative border, very pleasing to the eye and denoting purity and cleanliness.

E. G. Willard, president of the Egg-O Baking Powder Company, stated on the closing evening that the exhibit had been a marked success in every way. A large number of sample tins of Egg-O had been provided for the exhibition and all had been disposed of a number of hours before the closing time. Several thousand tins found their way to homes of interested users of baking powder during the two weeks of the Exhibition and hundreds of housewives were in addition talked to about the reasons why Egg-O Baking Powder should be used in their baking. The company had sampled Toronto from January to June and the Exhibition gave the men in charge a splendid opportunity to follow up this sampling work.

With every sample tin of baking powder purchased a cook book and balloon were given. The booklet was entitled, "The Truth About Baking Powder," and contained a large number of special bread, cake and biscuit recipes. The double-action character of Egg-O was explained in the cook book as well as to a large number of visitors at the booth. It was shown that Egg-O contains two entirely different gas-relieving ingredients, one which starts to leaven the cake immediately it is mixed, and the other containing the leavening process after the cake is in the oven. Another page in the book gave a number of facts about baking powder, showing why Egg-O is the perfected result of what scientists now know about this great leavening product.

The work done at the Canadian National Exhibition was done to assist merchants in making it easier to sell Egg-O Baking Powder. Thousands of Canadian women are now more familiar with it and frequent displays on the counter or in the windows will mean additional business to retailers.

The exhibit of Bodley's Ltd., Toronto, manufacturers of choice cakes and confections, in the Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition was the Mecca for thousands of interested visitors.

600,000 lbs. of Bodley Fruit Cake This Year

THE HUNDREDS of people who daily gathered in front of the booth of C. J. Bodley, Ltd., in the Pure Food Building, during the exhibition attested to the popularity of Bodley lines. One of the most attractive exhibits in a great assembly of beautiful displays, it was the centre for crowds at all times, and it goes without saying that the coming months will see a bigger demand than ever before for Bodley confections. It is estimated that 600,000 pounds of famous Bodley fruit cake will go into consumption this year. The immensity of this amount is realized, when it is known that it would take a train of 25 cars to transport it.

The Bodley fruit cake is a cake of quality, and is without a doubt first in its class. The standard of excellence that has long been maintained on this line, has assured for it a permanent popularity, establishing it for all time to come, in the homes of thousands of people. Displayed in a large silent salesman, in the centre of the booth, one of those large fruit cakes caught the eye of the passerby at once, compelling him to stop and gaze upon this toothsome confection, so temptingly arrayed before him. An immense wedding cake, too, in its glistening white icing, was equally inviting and brought forth many complimentary remarks.

Appealing particularly to the children at the Fair were the many chocolate specialties that were shown at Bodley's. The almond bars, the jelly rolls in chocolate, and the many dainties that are shown in these five cent lines, sold in great volume, proving conclusively that the grocer and confectioner will do well to have them in stock at all times. The increased demand for them, as evidenced at the Exhibition, will undoubtedly be extended into the weeks to come. Likewise the animal biscuits in the picture packages were great favorites with the youngsters, and the supply was constantly sold out, inquiry for the same exceeding the quantity available. These confections and cakes are all made by C. J. Bodley, Ltd., 99 Ontario Street, Toronto, under the most ideal conditions.

Attractive booth in the Pure Food Building where the merits and economical character of Crisco Vegetable Shortening were explained.

Fine Display of Crisco Shortening

CRISCO, the modern shortening for all kinds of cooking, was appetizingly displayed in the booth of the Procter & Gamble Distributing Company in the new Pure Food Building during the two weeks and one day of Canada's great National Exhibition. Thousands of Canadian women visited the exhibit and heard the merits of Crisco thoroughly explained by the lady demonstrators in charge.

At the rear the booth was made up to represent the interior of a kitchen with a kitchen cabinet, refrigerator, etc., on which were displayed tins of Crisco. In the foreground attractively arranged on the glass show case were more tins of Crisco, some of them with the covers off, showing to advantage the pure white character of the shortening. Inside the cases were temptingly arrayed many good things to eat, all made with Crisco.

There were Tea Biscuits, Doughnuts, different kinds of Layer Cakes, etc., that were a delight to see. Ferns and cut flowers added to the general effectiveness of the entire exhibit and helped to make it one that will not be forgotten by the Canadian housewives who visited it and listened intently to the story of Crisco.

Crisco has been on the market since 1911 and is used in thousands of households all over Canada. It is no longer an experiment but is now an everyday commodity, held in the highest esteem by particular housewives.

Demonstrators at the Procter & Gamble booth emphasized the point that Crisco was not a substitute for butter or lard but it was a real primary product in itself and a richer and more wholesome fat for cooking. For any ordinary purpose one-fifth less than of other fats is sufficient. An important point explained was that it can be used over and over again in frying all kinds of foods and because the foods absorb so little Crisco it becomes still more economical than even lard.

Canadian merchants are assured of the uniform quality of Crisco. The fact that the Procter & Gamble Distributing Company exhibited it in the new Pure Food Building to hundreds of thousands, demonstrates their confidence in it. Merchants can sell it with the same confidence.

Gunn's striking display at the Canadian National Exhibition which attracted wide interest among the throngs of visitors to the Pure Food Building.

Gunns—Specialists in Good Foods

GUNNS Yellow and Blue, the colors which almost everyone recognizes as emblematic of excellence in Government Inspected Food Products, shone out with unusual brilliance and impressiveness at the Canadian National Exhibition.

MAPLE LEAF and TIP TOP Brands of "Good Food" are so well known, that the merits of the various products need hardly be enlarged upon. The impression of quality conveyed by the attractive arrangement of the demonstration booth of this Company drew many comments of agreeable surprise. Easifirst Shortening was a prominent factor, and as usual won new friends every day, while many of last season's converts stopped to tell of their success with Easifirst during the year.

TIP TOP BRAND MINCEMEAT. "Why of course," more than one visitor remarked, "I will never bother about home-made Mincemeat so long as I can buy GUNNS TIP TOP. It is every bit as good as I could make myself, and, it costs less —to say nothing of one's time."

There was that wonderful new product, GUNNS MAPLE LEAF COOKED SAUSAGE, in sealed containers—one of the most delicious and satisfying foods imaginable. They may be eaten hot or cold —one may keep a few tins in the house all the time ready for lunches or hurry-up meals—for picnics, fishing, or hunting trips there is nothing so valuable and so convenient.

GUNNS YELLOW AND BLUE, aided by the presentation of a delightful Maple Leaf Rhyme Book to the children or their parents, made the booth a popular point of interest, and it is a certainty that not only the products mentioned above, but MAPLE LEAF HAMS AND BACON—MAPLE LEAF FRESH SAUSAGE—MAPLE LEAF CARTON EGGS—MAPLE LEAF BOILED HAMS—and the many other Good Food Products manufactured by GUNNS LIMITED will have won thousands of new friends.

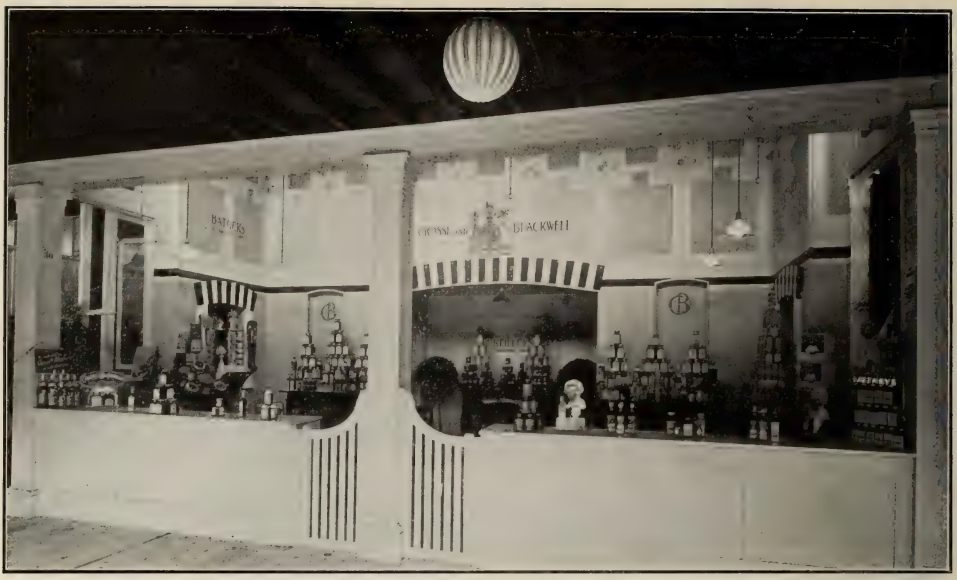

Exhibit in the new Pure Food Building where the quality lines of Crosse and Blackwell, Keiller's, Lazenby's, and Batger's were displayed and introduced to thousands of visitors at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Bowes Butter Cow Attracts Thousands

THOSE who were fortunate enough to be in the new Pure Food Building during the early hours of the 1922 Exhibition saw the finishing touches being made to the Bowes Butter cow which was moulded completely by hand out of Bowes butter. When finished the cow was life size, its Jersey appearance being easily distinguishable. No exhibit in the building drew bigger crowds than this butter cow. It was appropriately termed, "The Foster Mother of the World." Every day of the exhibition visitors flocked to The Bowes Company booth, eager to get a glimpse of this wonderful reproduction.

The sculptor accomplished his work in a refrigerated glass show-case. The soft butter quickly hardened to the frame work and gradually took on the shape of the pure-bred Jersey cow. It was particularly appropriate in expressing to the thousands of visitors the high quality and character of Bowes butter which has gained such an enviable record among those who are judges of real good butter.

The above illustration shows Marsh's striking Grape Juice Exhibit where great crowds daily sampled their famous Grape Juice Punch—the tempting drink that made a decided hit with Exhibition visitors.

Marsh's Grape Juice a Popular Beverage

THE Marsh Grape Juice Company's exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition was one of the most interesting and attractive booths in the splendid New Pure Food Building.

The booth was artistically decorated, the centre arranged in the form of a lattice pergola, which was an ideal background for a display of Marsh products. Many bunches of Grapes, punch bowls filled with Marsh's, and potted ferns added to the attractiveness of the display. At the counter, the famous Grape Juice Punch prepared from Marsh's, was served, from specially constructed aluminum coolers that kept the product ice cold.

Demonstrators were busy serving this delicious punch, and the many thousands of visitors who sampled Marsh's went away with a new idea of flavor and quality in Grape Juice, firmly convinced that "There is another Grape Juice"—an all Canadian Product—that is "Just a little sweeter" and "With a better flavor."

The Marsh exhibit brought scores of favorable comments from the hosts of visitors and created a very favorable impression that will certainly be reflected in a greater demand for Marsh's.

Marsh's Grape Juice is the pure juice of choicest Concord grapes. No manufacturer uses better grapes, in fact Grape Juice of a better quality cannot be made. Every bottle is guaranteed to please your trade.

October is Grape time and very soon the Marsh plants will be pressing the choicest grapes and preparing Marsh's Grape Juice for the 1923 season.

New prices will be announced immediately after pressing.

Many new lines were a feature of the display of biscuits by the Telfer Biscuit Co. Ltd., in their exhibit this year at the Canadian National Exhibition.

"Telfer the Buy-Word for Biscuits"

"TELFER the buy-word for Biscuits" meant everything the slogan implies at the Canadian National Exhibition this year. Consistently maintaining their high quality, the Telfer Company are continually offering the trade new and distinctive varieties. In their artistically arranged exhibit were featured this year their three newest lines, Radio, Molly-O and the new Kiddie-Kraft Animal Package.

Startling news broke through the ether from Coast to Coast when Telfer broadcasted that their new Radio Biscuit had been enthusiastically approved by a Special Women's Advisory Board. The popularity of this biscuit is assured and its broadcasting still goes on. Mr. Grocer, "tune in" and order Radio Biscuits to-day.

KIDDIE-KRAFTS are of course for the children and every time they take home a ten cent package they have a piece of furniture for their doll's house. There is a piano, writing-desk, kitchen-cabinet and dresser. They are filled with delicious Animal Biscuits and will be a wonderful specialty line for the grocer.

Molly-O Biscuit is now an established line throughout Canada from Coast to Coast and its high quality shall be maintained.

Other lines featured at the Telfer Booth were "Duplex" Soda, Pineapple Delight, Puff Cream, Thin Arrowroot, Creme Fruit, Duplex Cream and many others.

Where J. H. Wethey Limited, St. Catharines, showed their products in the New Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Wethey Jams and Mincemeat are Superior

A BEAUTIFUL picture effect in the rear wall, most artistically arrayed with jams and marmalades, their clearness and appetizing character showing up by means of concealed electric lights around and at the back of them, was the chief feature of the beautiful exhibit of J. H. Wethey, Limited, in the new Pure Food Building. The bright glass jars of marmalade and the darker jars of jam were so placed that the contrast produced a most pleasing effect and one that compelled attention from everyone. On the show cases were displayed most attractive jars of marmalade and jam as well as packets of the Wethey Condensed Mincemeat, the original product made in the Wethey daylight factory.

A most energetic sales force showed the merits of these various lines to thousands of visitors during the two weeks and one day of the great Exposition. Naturally these thousands have gone home with a bigger and better idea of the Wethey products, how carefully they are made, how appetizing they are and the pleasing character of the jars and labels and mincemeat containers.

J. H. Wethey Limited, was established back in 1883 so that the company has years of experience in making good food products. Originally only mincemeat was made in their factory. This meant specializing in the one product for many years in consequence of which Wethey's mincemeat is known to-day from coast to coast not only to the wholesale and retail trade, but to the great majority of consumers.

In 1914 the new daylight factory of the Wethey company was erected, containing more than 60,000 square feet of floor space. The making of the first kettle of jam in the new plant was an historic event. It was in August, 1914, that the company began to pack both jam and marmalade and on the 4th of that month the boiling of the first kettle of jam coincided with the firing of the first gun in the great European war which lasted until 1918. Unlike the war, however, which is now being forgotten in the course of events, the manufacture of Wethey's jams and marmalade goes steadily on, developing from year to year.

J. H. Wethey Limited, is situated in St. Catharines, Ontario, which is considered one of the most beautiful of the smaller cities in Canada. It is located right in the midst of perhaps the best fruit-growing district in the country so that fruits are always preserved when they are fresh from the field. The Wethey factory is a model of cleanliness, every product turned out being absolutely guaranteed from the purity standpoint. The Canadian trade can sell no better products than Wethey's mincemeat, Wethey's jams and marmalades. The demonstrations at the exhibit in the Pure Food Building have made many new friends for these goods and merchants throughout Canada will doubtless find increased turnover in these high grade lines.

The Toronto agent, Mr. Thomas of Scott & Thomas, was in charge of the exhibit.

Junket Products were more popular than ever at the Canadian National Exhibition this year. The exhibit in the new Food Building, as reproduced here, attracted crowds daily.

Junket Products in Beautiful Display

WITH its pure white counters and background and its attractive array of Junket products, the exhibit of Chr. Hansen's Canadian Laboratories stood out so that it quickly caught the eye of visitors in the new Pure Food Building.

For two weeks and a day several lady demonstrators, dressed in white, talked to thousands of visitors in the new building about Junket Tablets, Junket Powder and the tempting desserts that can be made from these two lines. While Junket is a comparatively new product as far as Canada is concerned, its reputation as an easily digested perfect food was known to the Old Country many years ago. Chr. Hansen's Laboratories have been the leaders in making Junket in America for a long time so that their goods are known from coast to coast. Many visitors at the Exhibition took home with them packets of Junket Tablets and Junket Powder the first week and during the second week took home with them still larger quantities.

Chr. Hansen's Junket is an indispensable food in case of weak stomach and is used in hospitals all over the country as well as in the homes of thousands and thousands of people.

Junket Tablets are made of the purest digestive Rennet Ferment found in the stomachs of calves, with a little table salt added. The tablets are so easily made into Junket dessert that even a child cannot go wrong. An important feature about Junket Tablets and Junket Powder is that to make the dessert milk is used and everybody knows the food characteristics of milk. When milk is taken as Junket it is much more easily digested, as it is eaten so much more slowly than when gulped down clear.

The demonstrators also showed how Junket is used for the making of ice cream. Junket Powder is made in four different flavors and is sweetened ready to use. These flavors include raspberry, vanilla, chocolate and lemon. Hundreds of booklets were given away to visitors who took home with them lasting impressions of Junket Tablets and Junket Powder. These booklets provide scores of recipes in which Junket Tablets and Junket Powder form a part. The work done at the exhibition in conjunction with the recipe booklets, is sure to mean that a great many more people will be interested in these products, so that it would be good business on the part of merchants to keep them prominently displayed.

Buttermilk Tablets for making buttermilk at home were also shown at the booth. The difference between Junket Tablets and Buttermilk Tablets is that the former contain the rennet ferment which curdles the milk when sweet, while the Buttermilk Tablets act by means of the lactic acid bacteria which sour the milk by converting the milk sugar into lactic acid. Buttermilk Tablets are very handy in the home where buttermilk is relished, and a display of these together with the other Chr. Hansen lines will certainly bring in more business to the merchant.

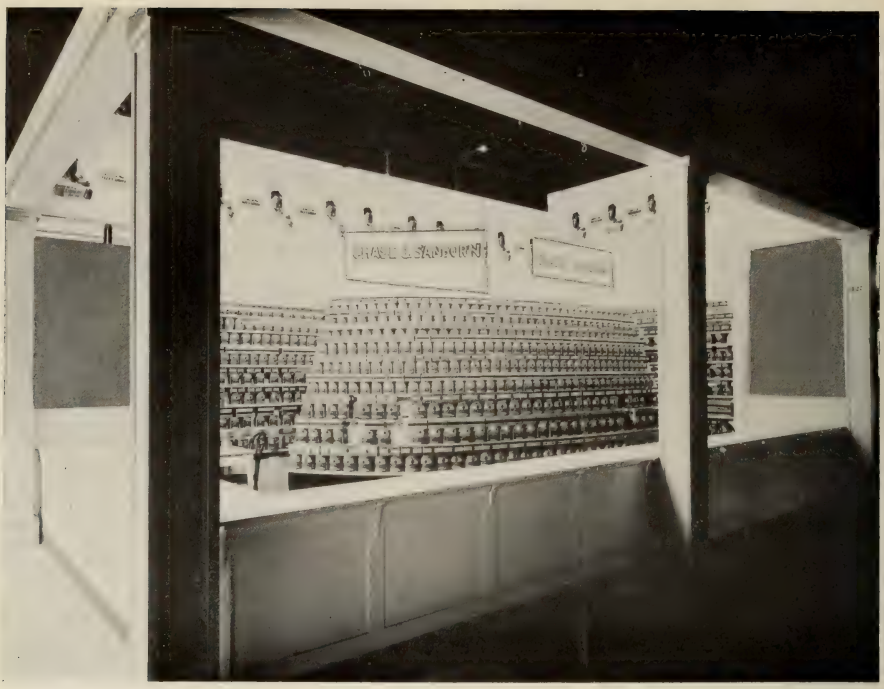
Loggie, Sons & Co., 32 Front St. West, are Canadian selling agents for the Chr. Hansen lines.

The above illustration shows the attractive Jeffress Booth where many thousands of visitors sampled that popular sandwich filler, "Olive Butter."

Jeffress "Olive Butter" a Great Favorite

A FAINTING woman or the arrest of a pickpocket could scarcely have gathered larger crowds than those which daily surrounded the JEFFRESS' BOOTH in the Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition. Here the feature attraction was that old favorite which most good grocers know to their profit—Jeffress' Olive Butter.

Scores and scores of Exhibition visitors each day elbowed their way to the front of the Jeffress' Booth, tasted the generous sample of this incomparable sandwich filler, smacked their lips in approval and in most cases walked away with a jar tucked under their arm. Demonstrators were kept busy describing its many uses for making sandwiches, salads, salad dressings, etc., and explaining how it is hygienically made from the finest selected olives, pimento, pure spices and the best malt vinegar.



Many thousand jars of this delightful dainty were passed out each week of the Exhibition, as well as many hundreds of bottles of Jeffress' popular Blue Seal Mushroom Catsup and Jeffress' Worcestershire Sauce, two lines that are rapidly making a name for themselves with grocers everywhere as fast, profitable sellers.

Jeffress' Blue Seal Products need no introduction to grocers. Their unusual profit possibilities and high quality have long been familiar to merchants who cater to the better class of trade.

Mr. Jeffress' many friends in the trade will be glad to learn that the factory which he opened in Detroit, Mich., about the first of this year is already operating at full capacity and indications point that these popular Jeffress' Products will prove just as big a success in the United States as they have in Canada.

The Jeffress' Exhibit was in charge of R. C. Blackburn of 60 Front St., West, Toronto, sales representative for Jeffress' Blue Seal Products.

Your wholesaler will quickly supply these sure selling Jeffress' lines.

Showing the unique display of Chase & Sanborn, of Montreal, in the New Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition.

The Chase and Sanborn Exhibit

AN IMPOSING circular row of tins of Seal Brand Coffee and packages of Seal Brand and Superior Tea built up in receding tiers formed the feature of the display in the exhibit of Chase and Sanborn in the beautiful new Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition.

The bright colored labels on both the coffee and tea stood out so that the booth was plainly visible a long way off. This was evidently responsible for the crowds that continually lined the counters every day during the two weeks It was readily noticeable that the great majority of visitors were familiar with the Seal Brand Products as it required very little persuasion for the salesmen in charge to induce thousands of them to carry home samples of the coffee and tea. This demonstrates how well known the name of Chase and Sanborn has become.

This was the first year in which Seal Brand and Superior Tea were exhibited at the Canadian National Exhibition and in many instances those who had taken home samples the first week called for larger packages the second. One woman came back for 5—1 lbs. packages of Seal Brand Tea, she liked it so well.

Altogether during the two weeks between 15,000 and 20,000 people purchased samples. The attention given the exhibit greatly exceeded expectations as it was during the first week that the entire supply of sample packages set apart for the whole exhibition were used up and a further and larger shipment had to be made to the grounds.

The display carried a great deal of advertising prestige and it will be significant to merchants that Chase and Sanborn products will be accepted more readily in future when on display in stores or suggested to customers. The whole exhibit was an extraordinary success all the way through. Its effect will be felt all over Canada as visitors were there from every province.

The booth was in charge of three representatives of Chase and Sanborn—H. Scruton of Montreal, E. F. Whittemore, Toronto, and S. C. O'Neill of London.

Headquarters for the New Klim Whole Milk and Klim Shake—the delightful, wholesome drink that proved so popular with Canadian National Exhibition visitors in the new Pure Food Show.

Klim in Great Demand at Exhibition

BELIEVING that the best way to convince any one of the quality of Klim is to have them drink a good glass of it. The Canadian Milk Products, Limited, were very successful this year in converting thousands of people to the quality and palatability of their powdered milk.

"Have a Real Drink," was the call of the Klim exhibit and it certainly proved a real drink judging from the expressions of delight of thousands of people who clustered about the Klim booth. On every side it was heard that the Klim drinks were the best to be found on the grounds.

The Klim exhibit this year was again a feature attraction among the displays at the Exhibition, but this year was located in the splendid new Pure Food Building. The real drink that proved so popular was an ice cold "Klim Shake" made in two flavors from a Klim formula, which was handed out to all who had a drink. This formula was as follows:

To a cup of water in a lemonade shaker, add 6 level tablespoonsful of Klim Brand Powdered Whole Milk and a quantity of cracked ice. Then add fruit syrup or any other flavor desired and shake vigorously for one minute. Strain into a tall glass.

A staff of dainty white-clad demonstrators introduced the new Klim Brand Powdered Whole Milk from the attractive Klim booth and attracted much attention as they made up Klim shakes for the people. Klim Brand Powdered Whole Milk is a new product, the sale of which is increasing because of its quality. It is a rich full cream milk in powder form with only the useless water removed and is packed in 4 oz., 1 lb., 2½ lb., and 5 lb. tins with brown and yellow labels.

The other milk products of the Canadian Milk Products, Limited, were demonstrated to the people, including their several infant preparations. Many manufacturers were attracted to their booth and were interested in their bulk milk in powder form.

Klim Brand Powdered Whole Milk has not yet attained a nation wide sale and up to the present time is sold only by a few selected high-class grocers, who are building up a fine turnover on it. Every grocer is familiar with Klim Powdered Skimmed Milk as sold in the blue and white tin. This Klim is a very useful cooking milk but because of the absence of fat is not found suitable for infant feeding. The new Klim Brand Powdered Whole Milk is a fine pasteurized milk in powder form suitable for absolutely every purpose. It is not handled by the wholesaler trade because it must reach the consumer without delay, due to the high percentage of butterfat in it.

The Canadian Milk Products, Limited, invite inquiries from the trade on this new product and are now in a position to handle steadily increasing business of their new full cream powdered milk.

The scales manufactured in Canada by the Canadian Toledo Scale Co., Ltd., at Windsor, Ont., were shown in this booth in the Industrial Building at the Canadian National Exhibition.

"No Spring—Honest Weight" Toledo Scales

THOUSANDS of visitors to the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto this year lined up daily, in order to get an accurate count of their weight. This was made conveniently possible for them in the Industrial Building, where the Canadian Toledo Scale Co. Ltd., placed at their disposal the Toledo Personal Weigher scale. This matter of getting weighed has for some years past been a popular feature of the exhibition, and attracts thousands of people to the Canadian Toledo booth every day of the big Fair.

Occupying its usual prominent position in the Industrial Building, the Canadian Toledo Scale Co., Ltd., had one of the finest displays at the exhibition. This Company are the largest automatic scale manufacturers in the world, making over one hundred styles of automatic scales weighing from a fraction of an ounce to thirty tons.

Representing the last word in computing scales, hundreds of retail grocers manifested great interest in this exhibit, and it is an assured fact that as a result of this comprehensive display of automatic scales, the Canadian Toledo, has won increased prestige with the retail grocery trade of Canada. More than ever before the grocer is going to consider the Canadian Toledo before buying a scale, irrespective of capacity required, for the Toledo is to be had in all sizes and styles.

Practical demonstrations and explanations of this "NO SPRING" scale were given by expert attendants at the exhibit and no effort was spared to give detailed advice as to just what the Toledo will accomplish for the retail grocer, or, in fact, for any merchant who requires scales in his business. Automatic computing scales covering the wide variety of sizes that are embraced in the machines of the Canadian Toledo serve every manner of need where scales are required, and the absolute guarantee of accuracy makes the Toledo the desirable scale for all purposes. No worry of overweight nor shortweight will be the grocer's if he installs the Toledo. Rapidly computing values, the merchant is assured of correctness, and on this account alone, apart altogether from the labor-saving device that a Toledo constitutes, the financial outlay represented in the purchase of a Toledo is soon returned to the retailer in the money it saves by assurance of "HONEST WEIGHT."

The presence of these "NO SPRINGS —HONEST WEIGHT" scales in a store lends a finish to the place. It is a decorative as well as a very desirable piece of equipment and guarantees a square deal on both sides of the counter. Eminent satisfaction will be found in the Toledo, and the grocer will do well to investigate their merits when contemplating the purchase of scales. These scales are manufactured in the plant of the Canadian Toledo Scale Co. Ltd. at Windsor, Ont., and thus they constitute Canadian-made products of the first order.

Another feature of the exhibit was the showing of the improved Van Berkle meat-slicing machine. The Canadian Toledo Scale Co. Ltd. have now selling privileges for this machine in Canada.

The exhibit of W. G. Patrick & Co. in the Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition was a unique arrangement, facilitating the serving of the thousands of visitors who called at this booth.

Exhibit of H. P. Sauce and Midland Vinegar

NOTHING but most favorable comments were heard on all sides about the original and effective design of the W. G. Patrick & Co. booth in the handsome new Pure Food Building. It was divided into six sections, each constructed along similar ideas and each exhibiting attractively one of the six feature lines which the company represents. The Patrick booth was situated to the north of the centre open courtyard and occupied an entire square.

In addition to the display of "the one and only H. P. Sauce," Garton's Custard and the other products of the Midland Vinegar Company, W. G. Patrick & Co. also demonstrated the well-known "Crossed Fish" sardines, packed by The Stavanger Preserving Co. of Norway; "Certo" made by the Douglas Packing Co. of Cobourg, Ont.; Sharp's Kreemy Toffee; Golden Sweet Corn in tins packed by The Carll Canning Co. of Gorhm, Maine; and Clarnico Orchard Fruits, made by Clark, Nicholls and Coombs Ltd. of London, England.

Many thousands of the more than the million and a quarter visitors at the great Exhibition were either served at one or another of the six counters and listened intently to what the demonstrators in attendance had to say about the various products. Samples were taken away every day to be tried out in the homes of the people and it was very significant that in scores and scores of instances those who had sampled them at home came back for more.

The Midland Vinegar Co. lines include H. P. Sauce, Garton's Custard, Garton's Pure Pickles, Midland Malt Vinegar and a new line—English walnuts in H. P. Sauce. All these are standards of excellence and have gained enviable reputations in different parts of the world. H. P. Sauce is a name which practically every Canadian merchant connects with the highest type of thick sauces, is always saleable and always uniform. W. G. Patrick & Co. have been Canadian agents for it for many years, having introduced it from coast to coast to the Canadian trade. The English walnuts in H. P. Sauce proved a popular addition, being enthusiastically talked of wherever sampled. "Crossed Fish" Sardines occupied the next section of the booth. Demonstrators there showed how a tasty and appetizing dish can be relished by a combination of H. P. Sauce and Crossed Fish Sardines. The latter have become so popular with the Canadian trade that the company in Norway have not been able to ship the quantity required to satisfy the demand.

The great amount of work accomplished at the Patrick exhibit in making the six above mentioned lines more familiar to so many thousands of Canadian people, means much to the retail merchant who is stocking them. His work of selling is lightened. Customers always accept more readily, goods the retailer recommends if they already know something about them.

FLOUR EXHIBIT OF McLEOD MILLING CO. A SPLENDID DISPLAY

THE McLeod Milling Company's exhibit proved a center of attraction for thousands of housewives who visited the "Made in Stratford" section in the Coliseum at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Featured in the attractive exhibit was a large pyramid display built up of sacks and barrels of the following well-known McLeod flours:—"Union Jack," "Sunrise," "Classic," "Hercules," and the two old favorites, "Special" and "Our Chief," while samples of McLeod flours and feeds displayed in glass jars conclusively told the story of their sterling quality.

Few flours are better known and better thought of by grocers, bakers and housewives from coast to coast than these two high-grade economical flours.

McLeod demonstrators explained to the crowds of visitors which daily surrounded the booth just which brands were best for bread making and which most economical and efficient for pastry.

Taken altogether the McLeod exhibit did much to further the popularity of these fast-selling McLeod flours—brands that grocers can recommend with absolute assurance of complete customer satisfaction and 100 per cent. repeat orders.

Exhibit in the new Coliseum where products of the McLeod Milling Co. were on display.

Sabine's "Rustics" Win New Friends

AN attractive painting of a woodland scene in the background and one real log hanging in the foreground to impress upon visitors in the new Pure Food Building, the name of his leading line "Rustics," were the compelling features that brought thousands of people to the booth of Frank J. Sabine, confectionery manufacturer, of Toronto. In the evening the name "Rustics" stood out strongly in one log in red letters by means of an electric light. In addition to "Rustics" the two other prominent lines of Mr. Sabine's were shown—Queen's Delight and Mackay's Butterscotch. Queen's Delight is a delicious Turkish Delight made in assorted colors. Queen's Delight also forms the center of the "Rustics" confection. A cube of "Rustics" Delight is covered with nut filled chocolate coating. Hundreds of people purchased samples of these two lines during the first few days of the Exhibition and were frequent visitors later on and carried away with them considerably larger samples.

This attractive exhibit drew thousands to its side, where visitors partook of the delicious "Queen Delight" candy shown here.

Mackay's Butterscotch needs no introduction to the Canadian trade. It has been on the Canadian market for a long time and is one of the finest butterscotch confections made. Mr. Sabine looked carefully after the wants of the many visitors and was assisted by several young ladies.

The confectionery factory of Frank J. Sabine is located at 5 Fenning St., Toronto, established since 1893.

The attractive booth from which thousands of sample boxes of Paterson's high grade biscuits were passed out to Canadian National Exhibition visitors.

Paterson Biscuits Draw Big Crowds

ONE of the outstanding exhibits and attractions in the new Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition this year was the Wm. Paterson, Limited, exhibit of high class biscuits and delicious candies.

Artistically arranged in every detail with a background of soft blue velvet hangings and amber colored lights, the Paterson booth presented a strong appeal to the artistic as well as those interested in the best in biscuits and confectionery.

The big feature of the Paterson Exhibit was the distribution of a special carton of fancy assorted Paterson biscuits made up of those famous Mary Pickford Biscuits you've heard so much about, Dot Shortbread, Vanilla Wafers, Social Tea, Apple Blossom, Countess, Mellocremes, Oval Arrowroot, Thin Arrowroot, Cocomels, and Orange Slice. Many thousands of these sample boxes were distributed by dainty white clad girls in the Paterson Booth and if complimentary remarks and repeat calls for the feature box were any indication of popularity, these Paterson biscuits made a big hit with Exhibition visitors.

On a separate show case an eye-catching display of DOT SHORTBREAD, the biscuit that made the name Paterson famous, drew the attention of most everyone passing, and judging from the comments and expressions of the scores who sampled it, it well deserves its outstanding popularity. Another feature section of the exhibit was the display of a full line of chocolates, creams, etc., of the better kind, a full line of Pan Goods, including Jelly Beans, Scotch Mints, etc., and popular 5c lines including the Paterson 5c Blue Ribbon Toffee Bar.

All Paterson Biscuits and Confectionery are made in Brantford, Ont., in a large, modern, sunlit factory from the purest ingredients under the most hygenic surveillance.

Their fine flavor, appearance and quality is bringing exceptional profits and steady repeat business to thousands of merchants. If your customers are particular and you are anxious to please them, try PATERSON next time you need biscuits and confectionery. They're just a little better.

The exhibit was in charge of E. J. A. Kennedy, the Toronto representative of the company.

No more popular lines were shown at the Canadian National Exhibition this year than were the "Oh Henry" and "Oh Mabel," chocolate bars. This booth was popular at all times.

"Oh Henry" and "Oh Mabel" Draw Big Crowds

AUNT May's "Oh Henry" visited the Canadian National Exhibition along with his sister "Oh Mabel" and during the entire two weeks of their stay with headquarters in the Crothers' Exhibit in the Pure Food Building, they met with a reception that is seldom accorded to their kind. With the young and old, in fact, with most every one in the great crowds that daily surrounded the artistic Crothers' booth they made a decided hit.

To those who were not fortunate enough to attend the exhibition we will describe this sensational pair. "Oh Henry" was a delicious 10 cent nut bar—a delightful combination of nut caramel dipped in rich milk chocolate and a whirlwind seller that is proving the rage wherever good candy is sold. "Oh Mabel" is a dainty little bar that sells for 5 cents, a none the less popular seller than its brother "Oh Henry."

Hundreds of thousands of these two favorites were passed out from Crothers' booth and with each one went a little advertising novelty in the form of a comic nose with a pair of eyeglasses attached. From the opening of the exhibition grounds in the morning until the closing time in the evening "Oh Henry" and "Oh Mabel" kept the Crothers' staff of demonstrators busy passing them out to scores and scores a day, many of whom returned for "more of those dandy bars."

Grocers who feature these two live ones will find them just as popular with their customers as they have proved everywhere they have been introduced.

From the artistic point of view the Crothers' booth was worthy of special mention. Attractively arranged displays of a full line of Crothers' famous fancy biscuits along with the Crothers' comprehensive line of tempting pan goods, confectionery and jellies formed an eye-catching background and many flattering comments on the Crothers' booth and their products were audible in the throngs that passed.

The death of Edward J. Belch, one of Picton's pioneer business men, occurred a few days ago. Mr. Belch was born at Belleville, but for the last fifty years had been in the grocery business in Picton. He was 72 years of age. Three sons survive him, Fred at Vancouver, and Harry and George, who conduct the grocery business in Picton.

British Sample Train Will Tour Through Canada

Montreal.—British manufacturers are demonstrating their intention to further their interests in Canada and improve their position in the Canadian market by sending out an exhibition train carrying samples of a great variety of British goods which will cross the Dominion, leaving Montreal at the end of October. The tour will last ten months. Two hundred and ten firms will participate in this exhibition and the train will be known as the "British Train Traders Limited."

None of the Dominions were officially represented at the National Food Exhibition opened at Olympia last week. Only three Canadian firms were exhibiting, the Maple Leaf Milling Company, which recently opened an office in London, W. Clark Limited of Montreal, showing canned goods, and a manufacturer of wire goods.

Montreal Office of Coca-Cola Co. is Robbed of $1,578

Montreal (Special).—On Saturday night or early Sunday morning last, professional safe blowers entered the office of the Coca-Cola Co., at 27 Vallee St., Montreal, evidently by using a skeleton key, blew open the company's safe and got away with $1,578 in cash.

They were evidently well acquainted with the building as they made use of an electric drill that was kept in the basement of the building. With this they bored a hole in the steel and then blew open the door with nitro-glycerine. So well and so quietly did they accomplish their feat that nothing was known of the robbery until C. H. Elliott, the local manager, happened to call at his office on Sunday afternoon.

Fire Does Much Damage to Swift Canadian Co. Plant

Toronto, Sept. 11.—Fire that broke out in the northwest wing of the Swift Canadian packing plant, Keele and St. Clair, on Friday last, did damage to the extent of $145,000. The sausage and lard rooms were in this section, and between 200,000 and 300,000 pounds of lard made fierce fuel for the flames. Large stocks of sausages just prepared for heavy week-end shipments were destroyed along with a hundred carcasses of beef, besides other meats. Two thousand carcasses of lamb which were in the coolers adjoining the building were destroyed by heat and smoke. The building was badly damaged.

ONTARIO PEACHES ON THE ENGLISH MARKET

Toronto, Sept. 13.—For the first time in history Ontario peaches will be offered in large bulk on the English market this season. A shipment of 1,000 cases of the finest Niagara fruit left for Montreal this week and will be in England 10 days later. It is the expectation of the Department of Agriculture that the peaches will be sold before their arrival.

CANTELOUPES ARE GROWN ON ALBERTA FARM

Vauxhall, Alta., Sept. 13.—The Canada Land and Irrigation Company, owners of the famous Vauxhall district, have this year devoted two acres of ground at their home ranch to the raising of canteloupe. The fruit is ripening fast now and will be ready for the market in about two weeks. It is expected that the plot will yield 100 to 150 cases of fine canteloupes containing about two dozen to the case. Last year a small canteloupe patch was grown and this matured and yielded such a fine crop of the luscious fruit that it was decided to raise a small acreage for marketing purposes.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THIS week sees little change in the majority of grocery markets, but in some directions a tendency to easier levels is noted. Sugar is unchanged as far as refiners' quotations are concerned, but there is still a report of selling from second hands. Another reduction is reported in flour in some quarters, the market adjusting itself to the new crop conditions. The likelihood of a scarcity in Grecian currants is reported, due to the unsettled conditions in Greece at the present time, and already advances are reported in some places. Shipments of goods from Smyrna have been cancelled, and only small lots were cleared before the port was closed. Sultana figs and raisins have also been advanced, due to this situation. California raisins are being quoted in some places at lower prices, due to the likelihood of easier quotations on the new crop later on. Packers of evaporated apples announce a reduction of a cent per lb. from the opening prices on the new pack as published last week. Teas and coffees continue to show a strong situation, and the former at primary points made another sharp advance last week. Rice is also very firm, and spices are in good demand, with quotations showing strong levels. Cloves particularly show a tendency to advance, and are reported scarce. Canned goods are moving in moderate volume, with some easier prices quoted on certain lines. Cereals are inclined to be easy. Fruits and vegetables continue in abundance, and prices are at attractive figures.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, September 14.—The grocery market shows some improvement in the movement of stocks, but there is as yet no sign of heavy buying. The demand from day to day is better, and wholesalers express some satisfaction in the improvement but confidence is lacking. Although there is a genuine firmness to raw sugars, the wholesaler prices are still much below the refiner's nominal list price. The molasses and syrup market is steady with a limited demand. Teas are all firm but without any new feature. The coffee market is marking time with prices unchanged. Spices are more active but wholesale prices are steady. There is no new feature in canned goods. The rice market is quiet and lower prices are expected for the fall. The situation in Greece is working unexpected changes in the dried fruit market. Shipments of goods from Smyrna are cancelled and only small lots cleared before the port was closed. Already sultana raisins and figs have been advanced in primary markets and it may affect the prices on California fruits. Many orders for figs and raisins will go unfilled. There is no change in the nut market. Vegetables are plentiful and prices are easy. Fruits are also easy in price, fluctuating from day to day.

CANNED GOODS QUIET

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—There is no feature of note in canned goods apart from the lower price quoted on the new pack of canned fruits. Canned plums are particularly low and peaches will be a little easier. The only new prices on canned goods are in canned peas which are a little easier and the trade is looking forward to easier prices on canned tomatoes when the canners issue their list. Some French firms have discontinued canning peas on account of the small supplies available and the high cost of the vegetable and consequent prohibitive price at which it would have to sell. Norwegian sardines are scarce and the prices higher.

CURRANT PRICES HIGHER

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—The feature of the dried fruit market is the situation in the east and the consequent strength of currants, raisins and figs. The English market quotes one shilling advance on currants as a result of the situation in Greece. Shipments of figs and raisins have been cancelled and only those supplies now on the sea are apparently available for the trade this fall. There is no doubt that the price on figs and raisins will be higher as a result. The new prices on prunes are easier but spot stocks are light and quotations are strong. Local wholesalers are doubtful about a reduction in the price of prunes when the new crop reaches this market since high freight rates greatly increase the coast prices.

PACKAGE GOODS ARE UNCHANGED

Montreal.

PACKAGE GOODS.—There is no change in the package goods market. Cereals are steady and are likely to remain so at least until the new crop is on the market which will not be for a couple of months at least. Even then millers are doubtful about a reduction in price of package rolled oats.

LOWER RICE PRICES SOON

Montreal.

RICE.—Rice prices are steady at present but lower prices are expected and importers and wholesalers are unanimous in the opinion that easier prices will rule for the fall. Tapioca is high in price and sales are hurt by recent figures quoted on stocks to arrive. Some of the better grades show an advance of 1 cent this week.

FUTURE SUGAR FIRM

Montreal.

SUGAR.—The sugar market shows no change although latest figures indicate that there must be strength in the market which is due to develop before the end of this month. Still the refiners nominally retain their price of $7.25 a hundred but wholesale grocers are quoting $7.00 and in some cases sales have been made at even a lower figure. Wholesale grocers are well unloaded of their stocks and are now buying from hand to mouth. They claim that there is an increased demand and that the market will show strength between now and the 15th of October, but between the 15th of October and the 15th of November they expect an easy tone although none venture to predict a price lower than $7.00. On the other hand in the United States raws are showing a stronger tendency and the consumption is heavy.

FIRM TONE TO SPICES

Montreal.

SPICES.—There is no feature of note in the spice market. Prices are steady with an improved demand. Primary markets report a particularly strong feature in cloves for spot stocks but futures show an easier tone.

MOLASSES MARKET FIRM

Montreal.

SYRUP.—The market for syrup is steady with a fair demand for small lots to meet immediate requirements. Molasses is firm in price and all wholesalers are adhering to list prices. Molasses for shipment to country points is quoted at 67 cents a gallon in puncheons, 70 cents in barrels and 72 cents in half barrel lots. For the city trade 70 cents a gallon in puncheons is quoted.

SMALL PRICE FOR PLUMS

Montreal.

FRUITS.—During the past week a record low price was quoted on fruits. At the fruit auction large baskets of plums were sold for 15 cents a basket. The market is glutted at the present time. Peaches are easier in price as a result of the particularly hot weather in the growing districts and the large quantity of fruit that ripened quickly. Lemons still have an easy trend with large supplies offered although the demand is keeping up well.

VEGETABLE PRICES EASY

Montreal.

VEGETABLES.—Large supplies of vegetables feature the market and prices rule easy and fluctuate from day to day. There has been a good crop of potatoes in this district and they are selling as low as 90 cents a bag.

LAMP CHIMNEYS LOWER

Montreal.

MISCELLANEOUS.—A reduction is quoted in lamp chimneys and lantern globes. No. 2 lamp chimneys are quoted at $1.15 a dozen in half gross lots.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Sept. 13.—In the markets for grocery commodities this week, the feature is another sharp decline in the price of flour. In the adjustment of prices to new crop conditions, a further reduction is announced of 40 cents per bbl. Millfeeds also show a decline. No change is reported in refiners' quotations on sugar, although second selling is reported under this figure. In dried fruits there is a tendency to offer raisins at lower levels, in anticipation of the new crop which is likely to sell at fairly easy figures as compared with last year. In canned goods, prices show little change, although some dealers are offering canned tomatoes at easier levels. Teas continue their upward trend, and coffees too are inclined to be high. Spices are active, with cloves, Jamaica ginger and nutmegs all showing strong levels. Fruits and vegetables continue to arrive freely. Peaches are plentiful and are selling at reduced prices.

NO CHANGE IN BEANS

Toronto.

BEANS.—There is very little change in the situation as far as the bean market is concerned. No change has taken place in prices and demand is quiet. Canadian hand-picked beans are quoted by some wholesalers at $4.40 per bushel.

SOME CANNED VEGETABLES EASIER

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—Prices on the new pack of tomatoes are not yet announced. Packing is now in progress and as the crop is heavy, the pack is correspondingly so. Quotations now ruling on the old pack are inclined to be low, and some dealers are quoting 2½s as low as $1.45 per dozen. However a more prevailing quotation rules from $1.65 to $1.75 per doz. Standard peas continue unchanged at $1.42½ per doz. Sockeye salmon is selling at $5 per doz. for 1s and at $2.75 for halves. Alaska reds in 1s are easier at from $3.75 to $3.95 per doz. Offerings of salmon are in fairly heavy supply and prices are inclined to be easy. Jams and canned fruits are unchanged as compared with a week ago. The demand for these lines is a little quiet at the present time.

DRIED FRUITS HOLD STEADY

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—Changes in the market for dried fruits are few this week. There is a tendency to offer raisins at reduced prices in anticipation of the lower quotations that are likely to rule on the new crop where it comes on the market in November. There is likely to be a big demand for raisins this fall and winter, and particularly dealers state in view of the situation that has developed in the market for currants. Fighting that is now taking place between the Turks and Greeks is likely to mean delayed shipments of Grecian currants and Smyrna Sultanas. Other lines of dried fruits are steady and unchanged with a moderate inquiry for the same.

CEREALS INCLINE EASIER

Toronto.

CEREALS.—Easier prices are ruling on bulk cereals, in anticipation of a plenteous crop. Some wholesalers are quoting rolled oats in 90s at $3.15, and others are asking $3.25. Other cereals are holding at fairly easy levels, and there is only a moderate inquiry for the same. The general situation is weak, although prices for the most part show no change.

TEAS CONTINUE HIGHER

Toronto.

TEAS.—The market for teas is still an advancing one, and according to reports higher prices are quoted this week at primary points. Another jump of five cents per lb. is reported on some of the finer grades, and in fact all teas are in a strong position, and are showing higher levels. Quotations on spot are still unchanged, because of supplies bought at lower figures being still available. However with these teas cleared up, the market is bound to advance.

SUGAR IN BETTER DEMAND

Toronto.

SUGAR.—No change is reported in refiners' quotations on sugar, the basis of $7.59 per cwt. delivered, Toronto, still ruling. However some second-hand selling is still reported under this figure, at approximately thirty cents under refiners' quotations. The raw market in New York is more or less unsettled, the demand last week being remarkably small. Sales were made at 3⅝ c. & f. for prompt shipment. The refined situation on the other side continues very easy, prices ruling at from $6.50 to $6.75 per cwt.

PEACHES SELL LOWER

Toronto.

FRUITS.—The market for fruits shows a number of declines this week. Peaches are now arriving freely and lower prices on the same are ruling. Large baskets are quoted at from 60 to 75c per basket, and the small ones at from 30 to 35c. Pears are also plentiful and inclined to be easier, as are also plums. In California fruits, oranges show higher levels, being quoted at from $9 to $11. Lemons are firm at $5.50, and grapefruit is moving in good volume at from $6.25 to $6.50 per case.

VEGETABLES CONTINUE PLENTIFUL

Toronto.

VEGETABLES.—Easy prices continue to rule on most vegetables. Receipts are in heavy volume, but the demand for the same is very active. Potatoes are selling at from 70 to 75 cents per bag. Onions are quoted as low as $2.25 per 100 lbs., and Spanish onions in large cases are from $4.75 to $5.25 each, with the half cases quoted at $2.50 each. Green peppers are quoted at from 40 to 50 cents for the large baskets, and sweet peppers are offered at 50c per basket. Corn is plentiful and in big demand at from 15 to 20 cents per doz.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG.—As threshing continues, it becomes evident that the yield is surpassing all expectations. Wheat in many fields throughout Manitoba is running 35 bushels to the acre and oats as high as 60. As the volume of grain arrives on the market a high average of quality is noticeable.

The feature of the grocery market has been the naming of new prices on California prunes, but when compared with Oregon prices they do not look favorable to the trade. Coffees and teas are ruling firm and tendencies are for higher prices. All lines of canned goods are ruling steady under a seasonable demand. Flour has declined in sympathy with the lower prices on wheat. Spices are active. Fruits are somewhat lower due to the heavy offerings. Vegetables are in good demand at lower quotations.

COFFEE PRICES STEADY

Winnipeg.

COFFEE.—The primary coffee markets are ruling firm and quotations are tending towards higher levels. Wholesalers report no change in local prices and stocks are becoming low.

CANNED GOODS STEADY

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—New arrivals of popular brand of sockeye salmon are stimulating sales. Norwegian sardines will be late in coming on the market as the catch so far has been poor and higher prices are expected. Lobster prices are firm as the summer pack is practically cleaned up and wholesalers' prices are on a basis of the late fall pack as packers are asking a premium on this line. The sale of canned vegetables especially tomatoes, corn and peas continues fair and prices are unchanged. New early fruits are arriving on the market and on account of good supplies and reasonable prices of fresh fruits, sales are limited. Indications are that the late fruits such as plums, peaches, etc., will be lower in price.

PRUNE PRICES NAMED

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUITS.—The feature of the dried fruit market has been the naming of new prices on California prunes. When compared with Oregon prices they do not look favorable to the trade. Raisins at the low levels are selling well. Peaches and apricots are in fair demand.

Alberta Markets

FROM CALGARY, BY WIRE

Calgary, Sept. 13.—A decline of 25c. per cwt. is noted in sugar, the price now ruling here being $8.59. Flour also shows a reduction at $6.50 per bbl. Tomatoes, 2½s are from $3.50 to $3.75 per case. Currants are very firm, and are likely to advance owing to war conditions in Greece. Some brands of pink salmon are slightly higher in price. Package rolled oats are easier, as are also some brands of canned meats. Honey too shows lower levels.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, September 14.—The produce and provision market shows more activity with strength and weakness in the different lines which adds to the interest in the market. Live hogs show no change and have a steady trend although quotations on smoked meats and cooked hams are lower in price. Smoked meats show a reduction of one cent a pound throughout. There is a better demand for fresh meats. Butter is stronger and in some cases shows an advance of one cent a pound. The cheese market also shows strength, although there is no change in wholesale prices. The production of eggs is falling off and consequently prices are advanced. The fish market shows a better demand and prices are firm. Low prices are quoted on honey on account of the large supplies offered on the market.

BUTTER MARKET STRONGER

Montreal.

BUTTER.—A stronger tone is evident in butter and higher prices would not be surprising late this week or early next. The market has been unsettled in the past few weeks but although receipts are heavier the export market is more brisk and the more interest manifest abroad has had a strengthening effect here.

CHEESE MARKET IS FIRMER

Montreal.

CHEESE.—Although there is no change in wholesale cheese prices and the export market shows no marked improvement, there is a better tone to the local trade with a firming up of prices Prices quoted abroad are stiffer and this to some extent is responsible for the quiet state of the export market but the business must come within the next month.

EGG PRICES ARE HIGHER

Montreal.

EGGS.—The production of eggs is falling off and on account of the increased demand for selects and No 1's the price shows an advance of one cent this week. New laid eggs and specials have advanced two cents and still have a strong position. A further advance in this price would not be surprising unless through the week the local receipts are heavier.

A SUBSCRIBER FOR THIRTY-TWO YEARS

John Forsyth, who has been in the grocery business in Dartmouth, N.S., for a great many years, is retiring from business on account of ill health. He is being succeeded by John F. Kane, who has been with him as a salesman for about thirty years.

Mr. Forsyth is one of Canadian Grocer's oldest readers. He first subscribed for the paper in 1890—thirty-two years ago. He started in business on August 22 of that year.

He was a good business man who held his trade through giving good service and good goods. He frequently took a trip to other centres to secure as much information about the business as possible. A few years ago he visited the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto and honored Canadian Grocer office with a visit at that time. This paper joins with his many friends in wishing him a speedy recovery to good health.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, September 13.—The feature of the produce markets in Ontario this week is the tendency to lower levels in quotations on live hogs. Lower prices are ruling this week, and practically all pork products reflect the easier position. Fresh pork is lower and sharp reductions have taken place in smoked meats. Cooked meats too are lower. Lard remains unchanged. The butter market is quiet, with little export inquiry. Cheese is inclined to be a bit easier. Eggs are strong, with receipts light. Poultry is showing heavier receipts, and prices are firm. Wholesalers state that there is a better ...uiry for fish and look for more active business in the fall months.

BUTTER MARKET IS QUIET

Toronto.

BUTTER.—The butter market is steady, prices showing no change as compared with a week ago. Export demand has been quiet, and domestic buying is only moderate. Wholesalers are quoting creamery prints, number one, at from 38 to 40c, and creamery prints, number two, at from 35 to 37c.

BUTTER—

How Canadian Potatoes Must Now Be Graded

Ottawa, Sept 11. (Special).—In accordance with the amendments to the Root Vegetables Act, assented to on June 28, 1922, the Department of Agriculture, at Ottawa, has had printed a number of notices, outlining the salient features of the changes in the Act, which notices will be posted in public places throughout the Dominion. The changes outlined are as follows:

1. Potatoes offered for sale in Canada (including imported) shall be graded Canada A, or Canada B, or Canada C.

2. Onions offered for sale in Canada (including imported) shall be graded fancy, or choice, or standard, or boilers, or sample.

3. All potatoes and onions offered for sale in Canada shall be marked in accordance with the provisions of the Act.

4. All potatoes, onions, artichokes, beets, carrots, parsnips and turnips offered for sale shall be sold by weight and the standard pound avoirdupois shall be the unit of weight used.

5. All potato barrels manufactured in Canada, for sale in Canada, and all barrels containing potatoes for sale in Canada, shall contain as nearly as practicable 7.056 cubic inches, (this requires a barrel of exactly the same dimensions as the present standard apple barrel).

6. The provisions of this Act do not apply to:—

(a) New potatoes when shipped between the first day of June and the 30th day of June.

(b) To seed potatoes.

(c) To what are commonly termed green onions.

(d) To any potatoes or onions for export where compliance with the said provisions would prevent the sale or exportation of such potatoes or onions to any foreign market.

A foot note advises that full information regarding definitions of the potato and onion grades, or details of any of the regulations contained in the Root Vegetables Act, may be obtained upon application to the Dominion fruit inspector or to the fruit commissioner, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Sure, Iron Sinks

A jovial individual saw an announcement in an ironmonger's window the other day. It read, "Iron Sinks," and he went in and told the man that he knew iron sank.

"Yes," said the smart shop-keeper, "and time flies, but wine vaults, grass slopes and music stands; Niagara Falls, moonlight walks, sheep run, Kent hops and holiday trips; scandal spreads, indiarubber tires, the organ stops; the whole world goes round and the trade returns."

The jovial one bolted.

Then he returned, put his head in at the door, and remarked:

"Yes, I know; and marble busts!"

The Right Curb Pump Builds Bigger Business

Motorists will buy regularly where they can be sure of dry gasoline, which means most mileage and least carbon.

The Bowser centrifugal water separator extracts all moisture from gasoline as it is being delivered into the car.

Thus, motorists who patronize Bowser Chief Sentry pumps get better gasoline for their money, and come back to Bowser-equipped filling stations and garages over and over again.

Bowser Pumps are nationally advertised, too, so that the motoring public know that, if they patronize Bowser pumps, they will get most mileage for each gasoline dollar spent.

The new Bowser air-driven Chief Sentry is the best curb-side business builder that money can buy. For full details as to mechanical perfection, and its ability to earn the largest possible returns on pump investments, ask for Booklet C-11.

SHIPMENTS OF FIGS WILL BE DELAYED

Discussing the situation as regards market conditions in figs a report from Smyrna says:

"Situation is critical, Packing plants are all shut down, and business is impossible. With the country adjacent to Smyrna being overrun with Turkish troops all business will be at a standstill, and how long this condition will remain is a problem. The first express shipment of layers which also includes a few 30-pound boxes of 2 and 3 crown, and some choice 30-pound bags is due on the Cretic inside of two weeks. There are also a few cases en route by the Themistocles, and certain quantities are also in lighters in the harbor of Smyrna awaiting shipment. The situation is very unfortunate, and also a very disastrous one for the operators and packers in Smyrna, as no doubt many have made advances to growers against shipments which, unless brought into the market within the next few weeks, will deteriorate and probably be a total loss. A few sample boxes of the new crop have been received in this market, and show up of unusually fine quality. Should the Turks get control of Smyrna, and an armistice be declared, the figs in the country would be immediately brought into the city to be disposed of, and certain of the packing places would no doubt be opened, allowing business to go along as usual."

THE "WANT" AD.

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life into one of the great necessities of the present day.

Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.

The "want ad." gets work for workers and workers for work.

It gets clerks for employers and finds employers for clerks. It brings together buyer and seller, and enables them to do business though they may be thousands of miles apart.

The "want ad." is the great force in the small affairs and incidents of daily life.

To Holders of Five Year 5½ per cent. Canada's Victory Bonds

Issued in 1917 and Maturing 1st December, 1922

CONVERSION PROPOSALS

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers to holders of these bonds who desire to continue their investment in Dominion of Canada securities the privilege of exchanging the maturing bonds for new bonds bearing 5½ per cent. interest, payable half yearly, of either of the following classes:—

(a) Five year bonds, dated 1st November, 1922, to mature 1st November, 1927.

(b) Ten year bonds, dated 1st November, 1922, to mature 1st November, 1932.

While the maturing bonds will carry interest to 1st December, 1922, the new bonds will commence to earn interest from 1st November, 1922, GIVING A BONUS OF A FULL MONTH'S INTEREST TO THOSE AVAILING THEMSELVES OF THE CONVERSION PRIVILEGE.

This offer is made to holders of the maturing bonds and is not open to other investors. The bonds to be issued under this proposal will be substantially of the same character as those which are maturing, except that the exemption from taxation does not apply to the new issue.

Holders of the maturing bonds who wish to avail themselves of this conversion privilege should take their bonds AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE, BUT NOT LATER THAN SEPTEMBER 30th, to a Branch of any Chartered Bank in Canada and receive in exchange an official receipt for the bonds surrendered, containing an undertaking to deliver the corresponding bonds of the new issue.

Holders of maturing fully registered bonds, interest payable by cheque from Ottawa, will receive their December 1 interest cheque as usual. Holders of coupon bonds will detach and retain the last unmatured coupon before surrendering the bond itself for conversion purposes.

The surrendered bonds will be forwarded by banks to the Minister of Finance at Ottawa, where they will be exchanged for bonds of the new issue, in fully registered, or coupon registered or coupon bearer form carrying interest payable 1st May and 1st November of each year of the duration of the loan, the first interest payment accruing and payable 1st May, 1923. Bonds of the new issue will be sent to the banks for delivery immediately after the receipt of the surrendered bonds.

The bonds of the maturing issue which are not converted under this proposal will be paid off in cash on the 1st December, 1922.

W. S. FIELDING,
Minister of Finance.

Dated at Ottawa, 8th August, 1922.

Thousands of New Friends for the DAYTON and ROYAL Lines

Many of those who visited the above exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, were old customers, but there were also many who for the first time learned the meaning of DAYTON and ROYAL service.

Many new friends were made for DAYTON Scales, Meat Slicers and Cheese Cutters, and for ROYAL Coffee Roasters, Coffee Mills and Meat Choppers. Proof was again given that a merchant has only to inspect one of these famous machines to become convinced of its value to his business.

We wish to point out that similar complete displays of DAYTON and ROYAL products may be seen at any time at our Show Rooms in any of the following cities, where representatives will gladly explain to you, without obligation, the merits of these famous machines.

Quaker Talks

What is YOUR position In the big drive to move Quaker Oats More Quickly?

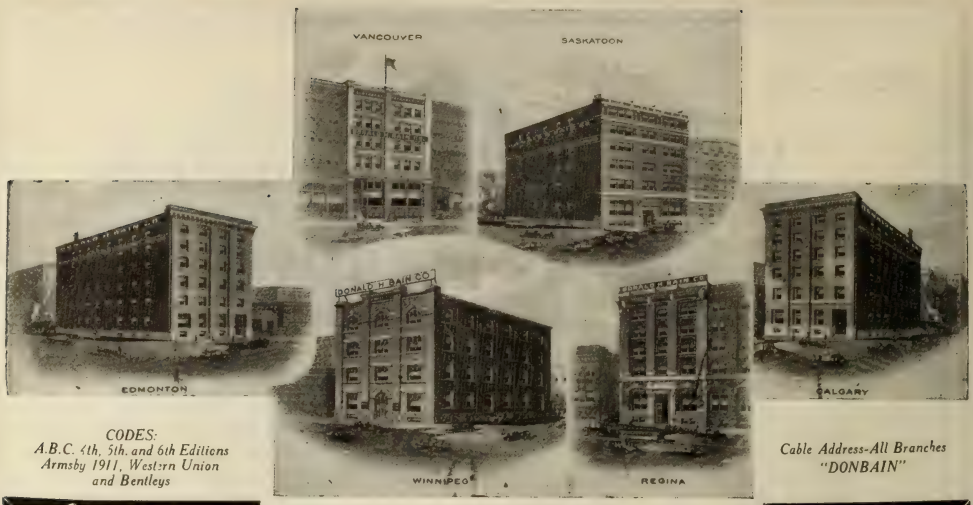
OUR big newspaper advertising campaign throughout the length and breadth of Canada is now under way—and already Quaker Oats are moving more quickly.

The jobbers and our salesmen are feeling the effect of the newspaper "ads" which have already appeared—we ourselves at the Quaker Mills are feeling it.

But the campaign has only just begun! The "skirmish" of September is to be followed by a "heavy artillery" attack in October and from now until Christmas, the Big Drive will steadily increase in force. The increased demand of September is but a fraction of what will follow in the next few months.

HAVE you considered your position? Have you figured what this campaign means to you—to your store—your sales—your profits?

Your customers are reading the advertisements—and so are the customers of other stores. They will all want Quaker Oats—and you can get more business and more profits out of this campaign if you want to. All you have to do is to push Quaker Oats out in front, in your windows, in your show cases, and on your shelves.



Push the goods the people are reading about and thinking about—and remember, every package of Quaker Oats you sell is bound to bring the buyer back again for more.

Don't take chances of running out of stock--disappointed customers seldom return to you.

Get another order in to your jobber before your stock runs low.

On SULTRY-HUMID-HOT STICKY DAYS

—how does your refrigerator work? During the past few weeks especially, the hot, sultry weather we have had has been a very severe trial to refrigerator users.

Can you honestly say to yourself that your refrigerator has given you every satisfaction and service? If not, then you need a new refrigerator—the EUREKA!

The Eureka will work more efficiently, satisfactorily and economically than any other refrigerator made. It is so built and insulated that damp hot weather does not affect it or lessen its efficiency.

It works as good on one day as on another; and it always gives satisfaction. Buy a Eureka Refrigerator—it pays in the end!

The above illustration shows the attractive Jeffress Booth where many thousands of visitors sampled that popular sandwich filler, "Olive Butter."

Jeffress "Olive Butter" a Great Favorite

A FAINTING woman or the arrest of a pick-pocket could scarcely have gathered larger crowds than those which daily surrounded the JEFFRESS' BOOTH in the Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition. Here the feature attraction was that old favorite which most good grocers know to their profit—Jeffress' Olive Butter.

Scores and scores of Exhibition visitors each day elbowed their way to the front of the Jeffress' Booth, tasted the generous sample of this incomparable sandwich filler, smacked their lips in approval and in most cases walked away with a jar tucked under their arm. Demonstrators were kept busy describing its many uses for making sandwiches, salads, salad dressings, etc., and explaining how it is hygienically made from the finest selected olives, pimento, pure spices and the best malt vinegar.

Many thousand jars of this delightful dainty were passed out each week of the Exhibition, as well as many hundreds of bottles of Jeffress' popular Blue Seal Mushroom Catsup and Jeffress' Worcestershire Sauce, two lines that are rapidly making a name for themselves with grocers everywhere as fast, profitable sellers.

Jeffress' Blue Seal Products need no introduction to grocers. Their unusual profit possibilities and high quality have long been familiar to merchants who cater to the better class of trade.

Mr. Jeffress' many friends in the trade will be glad to learn that the factory which he opened in Detroit, Mich., about the first of this year is already operating at full capacity and indications point that these popular Jeffress' Products will prove just as big a success in the United States as they have in Canada.

The Jeffress' Exhibit was in charge of R. C. Blackburn of 60 Front St., West, Toronto, sales representative for Jeffress' Blue Seal Products.

Your wholesaler will quickly supply these sure selling Jeffress' lines.

Unique Exhibit at Canadian National Exhibition

Proves Effective Method of Introducing New English Biscuits

"Biscuits as they are made in England" made in Canada by George Weston, Limited, well received and appreciated at the big Toronto Fair.

ALTHOUGH Weston's New English Biscuits have been on the market for a few months past the added impetus given them by this firm's unique display at the Canadian National Exhibition will undoubtedly increase the already brisk demand for "biscuits as they are made in England." Thousands of visitors from all over the country who sampled Weston's "Quest," "Melt-in-Your Mouth" and "Meltise Creams" were unanimous in voting them fully equal to famous English lines and the most delicious biscuits ever produced in Canada. That this will have a strong effect in augmenting the demand is clearly indicated.

Weston's "Olde English Shoppe" at the Canadian National Exhibition

Within the first week of the Exhibition, over 160,000 people visited this unique exhibit, thousands purchasing Weston's specially assorted package of English biscuits. The booth, as can be readily seen, was one of the most interesting attractions in the Pure Food Building.

Some months ago, in addition to their regular biscuit business, George Weston, Limited, decided that to produce "biscuits as they are made in England" and to sell them at lower prices than are asked for the imported lines would fulfil a long-felt want in Canadian homes. It meant the use of exclusive English recipes, the importation of modern biscuit baking machines and equipment and it meant securing master bakers whose skill could and would produce biscuit confections to rival the best English makes—the standard of the world.

After several months concentrated effort all this has been achieved. To-day, there stands, adjoining Weston's main factory at Peter and Richmond Streets, Toronto, a new daylight biscuit bakery, that is easily the finest in Canada. Bright, clean and sanitary, it is the last word in factory construction. The entire machinery used has been specially built for Weston's by T. & T. Vicars, of Lancashire, probably the best-known manufacturers of biscuit machinery in the world. They have built a Dredge Gas Oven, the only one of its kind in Canada, and installed biscuit embossing and cutting machinery that is unique on this continent.

The master bakers who make Weston's new English lines were employed for several years by the most famous of English biscuit firms and their skill helped to create Old Country biscuits of world-wide fame. To-day these men are employed by George Weston, Limited, and, using famous English recipes, they have produced for Canadians such dainty biscuit confections as "The Quest," "Melt-in-Your-Mouth" and "Meltise Creams," which are, indeed, "biscuits as they are made in England." Within a few months popular demand for these delicacies became so strong that Weston's factory was forced to operate on a 24-hour day shift to keep pace.

Then came the Exhibition. In the new Pure Food Building, without doubt one of the most interesting buildings on the grounds, where so many booths of exceptional interest to the grocery trade were housed, Weston's erected an "olde English biscuit shoppe" that was unquestionably one of the most attractive features. Built in 17th century English style, with gabled roof, stout oak beams and diamond-paned windows, its quaint appearance attracted thousands and thousands of visitors who passed through it in an almost unbroken line from the hour the Exhibition was opened. In fact, during the first week alone, over 160,000 people visited this exhibit, thousands of them purchasing the specially assorted package containing "The Quest," "Melt-in-Your-Mouth" and "Meltise Creams" and familiarizing themselves with "biscuits as they are made in England." That such a widespread "sampling" will have a decidedly stimulating effect on the already insistent demand for Weston's biscuits is assured.

From time to time, this enterprising firm, with the unique advantages which it enjoys through its English master bakers and famous baking machines, will introduce new recipes and produce new English biscuits of which those sampled at the Exhibition were merely introductory. "Biscuits as they are made in England"—the world's standard—are now produced and sold in Canada by George Weston, Limited.

Where Countless Thousands Tasted Keepsweet

During the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto this year, thousands upon thousands of people—so many it was utterly impossible to keep count—called at the Keepsweet Booths to taste Keepsweet Cream and Keepsweet Milk. At our booth (shown above) under the Grand Stand, and at our booth in the Pure Food Building, a crowd was always to be found, day and night. It was admitted to be one of the most successful and popular exhibits ever shown at the Exhibition.

At the Ottawa, London, Kingston and St. John Fairs, the Keepsweet Booths were again the objects of great interest and activity, and additional multitudes became acquainted with the merits of Keepsweet Products.

These thousands upon thousands of householders who tasted Keepsweet at these fairs are sold completely, Mr. Grocer. They will buy Keepsweet Cream and Keepsweet Milk if you have it. If you haven't they will buy somewhere else. Keepsweet scored a great triumph at these Fairs. The extent to which you will benefit lies in the extent to which you will co-operate.

CANNED TOMATOES

Throughout the Year for Children and Adults

¶ "NUTRITION SPECIALISTS at the CORNELL COLLEGE of Agriculture are working on a canning budget that will serve as a guide for the amounts of canned fruits and vegetables needed to keep a family of five well nourished for a year."

¶ "The budget RECOMMENDS THE USE OF TOMATOES FOUR TIMES A WEEK, green vegetables six times, starchy vegetables three times, and fruits ten times a week. The quantities of food such a family might well use are about 80 quarts of Tomatoes, 120 quarts of green vegetables, 50 quarts of starchy vegetables, 220 quarts of fruit, and 40 quarts of conserve, jam and jellies."

¶ "Because of the presence of anti-scorbutic and water—soluble vitamines, tomatoes are provided in quantity, but the use of oranges at certain seasons of the year may somewhat decrease the amount of tomatoes used. EITHER ORANGES OR TOMATOES ARE DESIRABLE FOR CHILDREN AND ADULTS THROUGHOUT THE YEAR."

¶ The amount of vegetables stored such as cabbage or celery affect the quantity of green vegetables provided by the canning budget, and the amount of fresh or dried fruits such as apples, prunes and oranges used during the year, must also be considered in estimating the amount of fruit to be canned."

Is It a Good Man You Want?

Wishing and wanting won't get him for you. Advertising probably will. You ask what paper to use? Well, you can waste a lot of good money using wrong papers. The best one to use is CANADIAN GROCER.

This newspaper is probably read by the man you will engage. At any rate, if you want a man trained, the chances are that he sees and reads CANADIAN GROCER. If your advertisement tastes good to him, the chances are he'll answer it. Then it's up to you to land him.

But look for him where he's likely to be—behind some counter or desk in a retail or wholesale grocery house.

You never can tell what's in the mind of men to make them willing to change. Perhaps it's money; perhaps a cranky boss; perhaps climate; perhaps a girl. But it will be something or other.

Sometimes the first insertion of an advertisement finds the man. Sometimes you will have to keep on advertising.

Our part is not to guarantee you answers, or to promise any. We have no control over such things. But we can put your advertisement—and do—into about 6,500 grocery stores, wholesale and retail, all over Canada. This is our part. And surely 6,500 is enough.

Rate is 3 cents a word first insertion and 2 cents per word each subsequent insertion. Numbers count as words. Use a Box Number if you prefer. Five cents per insertion extra for Box Number. Make advertisements brief as a telegram.

Vol. XXXVI TORONTO, SEPTEMBER 22, 1922 No. 38

Maple Sugar and Potatoes Affected

New Duties to be Imposed by United States in Their Import Tax —Now Four Cents a Pound on Maple Sugar and 50 Cents Cwt. on Potatoes—The Quantities We Sell to the States

THE NEW United States Tariff Bill that is likely to go through Congress in the near future has a number of items in it that are of special interest to Canadian merchants and manufacturers dealing in food products. The framers of the new tariff state that it is designed to meet the unusual world's economic situation. It is calculated that it will raise approximately $400,000,000 revenue on the basis of the present volume of import trade of the United States. It is also stated that the level of its rate according to the tariff experts is slightly below the level of the Payne-Aldridge Bill which was the last Republican Protective Tariff but that it is considerably above level of the Democratic Underwood Law now in force.

Among the products that are affected, with the amount of import Duty, are the following:

Bacon, ham and shoulders—2c per lb.

Lard—1c per lb.; lard compounds and substitutes—4c a lb.

Milk, condensed or evaporated—½c per lb.

Butter and oleomargarine and other butter substitutes—8c per lb.

Honey—3c per lb.

Apples—25c per bus.

Peaches and pears—½c per lb.

Peas, green or dried—1c per lb.

Onions—1c a lb.

Potatoes—50c per 100 lbs.

Tomatoes—½c per lb.

Sugar—$2.20 a hundred.

Maple Sugar and maple syrup—4c per lb.

Candy and all confectionery—40%.

Matches—8c a gross.

How Apples and Potatoes are Affected

Of the above the two products that will be affected most perhaps are apples and potatoes. Canada during the past fiscal year sent apples to the United States valued at $2,381,419, and potatoes at $1,204,620. The potato growers in New Brunswick have always found an especially good market in the United States.

The following figures taken from the Government Blue-Book show the Canadian exports on a number of the above lines to the United States with their values:—

Bacon, hams and shoulders, 140,400 lbs. valued at $47,991.

Lard, 1900 lbs., valued at $241.

Honey, 70,590 lbs., valued at $12.268.

Apples, 486,445 bbls. valued at $2,-381,419.

Peas, whole 154,290 bushels valued at $473,921.

Potatoes, 1,822,004 bushels, valued at $1,204,620.

Maple syrup 2,739 gals. valued at $6,749.

Maple sugar 2,052,774 lbs. valued at $158.799.

Matches—none.

Maple Sugar Exports

Quebec Province, the maple province of Canada, may be affected by the increase in duty on maple sugar and syrup particularly the former. United States tobacco interests purchase large quantities of Canadian maple sugar for sweetening tobaccos so that they will now have to pay 4c per pound more for it. While during the twelve months ending in March last, our exports of maple sugar to the United States amounted to only 2,052,774 lbs. valued at $158,799, yet in 1921 the amount was 7,979,970 lbs. valued at $1,956,637. In 1920 the value was nearly as great—$1, 114,304.

This indicates that Quebec exports of maple sugar have depended a good deal on United States purchases. The increased duty, however, may not affect the quantities bought as the Quebec product is so high in quality, it is much sought after in the manufacture of United States tobacco.

Low Potato Prices Likely

New Brunswick potato growers are undoubtedly feeling the effect of the duty handicap on potatoes. Canadian exports during the year ending March 1921 amounted to 4,204,684 bushels valued at $8,328,862 and in 1920, 5,480,-754 bushels valued at $6,819,405. This year Canada has a big crop of potatoes and with the 50 cents per hundred lbs. handicap on them going to the United States, prices are likely to be quite low here.

Can Ship to Southern States

St. John, N. B., (Special.)—Your representative called on R. E. Armstrong, secretary of St. John Board of Trade, with reference to the duty of fifty cents per cwt. placed upon potatoes entering the United States. Mr. Armstrong stated that New Brunswick was a large exporter of potatoes, and had been sending large shipments to the Northern States, but that the new Tariff bill had practically excluded the New Brunswick shippers from this territory, and that our exporters were now going to ship to the Southern States. They were able to successfully place their potatoes there because it was possible to get them in on a much lower freight by using the water ways, and it was felt that they could overcome the duty in this way.

J. T. Donovan of the Atlantic Brokerage Co., Inc., Boston, recently called upon the St. John Board of Trade and stated that about forty-two per cent. of the farm products in Maine were in bad shape. Should this make the price of Maine grown potatoes higher, which it is expected that it will, it may yet be possible for the New Brunswick producers to ship to this point. The price of potatoes in Maine, he said, were ninety cents per barrel, and in New Brunswick, for export purposes, they were seventy-five cents, so should the Maine potatoes jump in price very much, they will soon reach the same level as the New Brunswick potatoes could be sold for.

Potatoes in New Brunswick have suffered some from the heavy rains, but the extent of the damage is not yet fully known.

Your representative called upon C. H. Peters & Son, Ltd., who have in the past been large exporters of New Brunswick potatoes. Mr. Peters stated that this year they were not handling potatoes at all, for export purposes as the producers were exporting themselves. He had been discussing the situation with several of them, and all felt that they would be shut out entirely from the Northern States, but were going to ship to the Southern States, as the routing would give them great freight advantages, and in this way they could overcome the extra fifty cents duty. At the present time there are no exporters located in St. John; some of the largest exporters in the province are Hatfield & Scott, Hartland, N. B.; Guy Porter, Perth, N. B.; Clarke & Son, Woodstock. It was impossible to get in touch with these producers and exporters before this issue was due to go to press.

There is a proposition now before the government to build a new frost proo warehouse for the handling of potatoes in St. John, the cost to be about $20,000. The warehouse, if the project goes through, will be also used for the handling of cattle.

More Sugar is Consumed This Year Than in Any Year Since the War

Estimate of Production Does Not Equal This Year's Consumption—Figures Indicate Stronger Markets for Raws

MONTREAL.—The abnormal surplus of Cuban sugar existing last January has apparently been absorbed, and, in addition, the normal amount of new Cuban crops has been taken. The revised estimate of world production for 1922 is 1,600,000 tons over the earlier estimate, owing largely to the unexpected size of the Cuban crop. But this year's consumption also has exceeded all predictions, both in the United States and in Europe, and even with the revised crop figures for 1921-22 the carry-over for 1922 will be not far from normal. The gradual rise in the C. & S price of Cuban raws to its present level, about double the low figure of 1.75 cents at the end of 1921, has no doubt been due to the replenishing of invisible supplies and the increased consumption, and in particular to European demands.

Rapid Distribution

The rapid distribution of the Cuban surplus since the beginning of the year is shown by the export figures for the first seven months of 1922 and the United States export figures for the same period. Cuba exported 4,000,000 tons including practically all its old crop sugar, as compared with 1,800,000 tons for the first seven months of 1921. Of this the United States imported 3,000,000 tons and Europe 800,000 tons as compared with the corresponding figures for 1921 of 1,540,000 and 160,000 tons. The United States exported 755,000 tons of refined sugar in the first seven months of 1922 of which 85 per cent. went to Europe and in the corresponding period of 1921 it only exported 256,000 tons.

Canada Using More Sugar

In the figures given by the United States Bureau of Commerce for the consumption of sugar in the principal countries of the world, it is shown that Canada has consumed 70,000 more tons of sugar this year than it did in 1914. The United States is now consuming 5,500,000 tons of sugar as compared with 3,800,000 tons in 1914. Apart from this it is interesting to note that both China and Japan use more sugar annually than Canada. While England, Ireland and Scotland show a reduction in this period of 400,000 tons of sugar used, Germany only shows a reduction of 50,000 tons of sugar despite the condition of the industry and the beet production in that country. As will be noted by the accompanying chart, the world consumption of sugar in 1922 was even greater than the world's visible supply in 1921, or the consumption in any period even prior to the war. On the other hand the crop estimates for 1923 together with the carry-over from 1922 is not equal to the consumption of 1922.

Fruit Preserving Co. In Montreal Purchase New Plant

Montreal (Special).—After an hour of brisk bidding, confined to three or four contenders for the most part, the munition plant of the United States government at the corner of Notre Dame Street and Eighteenth Avenue, Lachine, was sold to the Saxonia Fruit Preserving Co., which was represented by Silvio W. Narizzano, the managing director of the firm. The Saxonia Fruit Preserving Co. at the present time occupies a plant at the corner of Ernest and First Avenue, Maisonneuve.

The Lachine plant disposed of has an area of 42,000 square feet of which 39,605 is covered by the building. Its civic assessment is $25,705 for the plant, and $89,050 for the building at the present time. The conditions first offered in the sale were 30 ver cent. cash and the balance in two years with interest at 5½ per cent. On those terms the bidding ran from $15,000 to $30,375 and was finally sold at $32,700, with 10 per cent. cash and the balance payable in five years with interest at 5½ per cent.

At one time in the bidding the auctioneer, Charles Gerth of New York, bet Mr. Narizzano that he would not raise the bid another $10. This Mr. Narizzano did and the auctioneer promptly paid over his bet. The upshot was that the bidding was stimulated to the amount of $150 and the property was knocked down to Mr. Narizzano.

This plant, which was originally built by the Munition & Machinery Ltd., to manufacture light munitions for the United States government, has a sprinkling system, a steam plant, and facilities for any kind of manufacturing except steel and iron work. It is situated on the Lachine Canal and on a siding of the Grand Trunk Railway. It also has a street car connection with Montreal. The Saxonia Fruit Preserving Co. will move their equipment to the new plant early next year and will also install new equipment for the preparation and packing of their preserved fruits.

N. C. R. BUYS NEW PLANT

The National Cash Register Company have purchased a four storey building at the corner of Bloor and Dufferin Streets, Toronto. This new home of the company was erected in 1916. It is of concrete, fire-proof construction, faced with brick. The height between floor and ceiling on each floor is 14 feet clear, with large windows on the four sides for the supplying of plenty of light and ventilation. The company have purchased sufficient property to enable them to increase the plant later on.

Opens Grocery Store Below Street Level on Residential Street

Alex. Nelson, Montreal, Designs Unique Store—Exterior and Interior Are Finished in White to Make Most of Light—Attractive Arrangement of Lights on Shelves

MONTREAL.—Alex. Nelson has built a grocery store at 137 Mansfield St., Montreal, which is unique in design for grocery stores in this city at least. It shows what can be done with a basement site on a residential street. Mr. Nelson only had at his disposal the basement of a large house, and yet he has converted it into a retail store that is attractive, commodious and bright. As. Mr. Nelson said, "it was a big chance but I took it. I have never seen a grocery store designed in this fashion before, but I thought I saw possibilities and so I have carried out my idea and hope it will prove successful."

Down Into the Store

The store itself is below the level of the street. There are about eight steps down but there are two fair sized display windows on a level with the street. The front of the store and the interior is finished with white enamel which does much to brighten up the interior and make the most of the sunlight that comes in through the door, the two front windows and one at the back.

Many Electric Fixtures

There are many electric fixtures in the store and they too are placed in a unique fashion. The brackets are attached to the shelving which lines the walls on two sides of the store. The rear wall is almost completely covered by a large glass front refrigerator.

Overcoming Handicaps

Mr. Nelson realizes that he is handicapped by not having the interior of his store in full view of the passers-by but he is determined to overcome that by having a particularly striking front and well dressed windows. The complete line of groceries and dairy products will be in the store by next week and the store will then be opened for business.

Co-Operation Between Traveller And Grocer Can Be Very Helpful

How a Travelling Salesman Proved the Difference Between Selling and Booking—Grocers Get Helpful Schemes and Ideas From Salesman

MONTREAL.—A short time ago a salesman called on a retail grocer in a Canadian city. The grocer was at that time busy attending to the wants of a number of customers. For about ten minutes the salesman kept himself busy dodging the customers and the grocer, so as not to make his presence objectionable. Finally the grocer, seeing and appreciating the salesman's patience, said in passing him, "Put me down for ten cases of———brand and five of———."

"Thank you," said the salesman, "but I would rather come in when I can have an opportunity to sell you these goods."

"But you have my order," replied the grocer, "what more do you want?"

"I want to sell you these goods, so I had better call again. Mornings the most convenient?" he queried as he started towards the door.

Selling or Booking

Many times during the next two days that grocer wondered what the salesman meant. He could not understand why he had not taken his order. At times he felt rather peeved about it, but when the traveller called a few days later he asked him why he had refused to book the order. "Why," replied the traveller, "I don't want to simply book your order. I want to sell you these goods. I want to make sure that you know why you are buying this soap and to convince you that the more you sell of this brand the better will be your profit and the more satisfied will be your customers. I want to instil into your mind the qualities of the soap I am selling you so that in turn you may do likewise to your customers. If I simply booked your order, the goods would be put on your shelf and we would have to turn around and sell the goods to the public. My task is not finished until I have given you the 'pep' that will make that soap your biggest seller."

The grocer laughed. He understood the difference between taking orders and selling goods and thereafter endeavored to see how much he could learn from the travellers who called to sell him goods. The soap traveller in question had arranged before he left for a window display of his line for the following Monday.

Undoubtedly the retail grocer who does not take full advantage of the selling talks of a traveller is doing himself an injustice. These men who make a specialty of selling, very often have a rare fund of ideas that they glean from the different retail stores in their territory. Their suggestions are often very helpful. They see the grocer's store from the other side of the counter and their knowledge of conditions in a particular territory may give a new aspect to an old problem. Not only can they help the retailer to push the particular line which they represent, but they carry to him new schemes which they have seen worked out on other territories.

Weighing a Salesman

As in every other occupation there are men who cannot be relied upon, but it takes but a little while to classify a man. There are some who glory in bizarre stories that are misleading and often a product of the man's imagination. Such a one however soon loses the grocer's confidence, and labels himself for time to come. The majority, however, can be a great help to the retailer, if the retailer will only take advantage of what the traveller can do for him. Many a grocer has worked out what seemed a novel and successful idea, and when asked where he got it has said, "Oh, So and So's traveller gave it to me." There are too, grocers who rely upon certain travellers for advice in buying goods altogether apart from the lines carried by those travellers. There are a good many travellers on the road to-day who are silent partners in more than one grocery store, in so much as their suggestions and salesmanship have been invested in the management of these stores and there are still many who have much to invest in this way, only needing the grocer's solicitation. It costs little to get this co-operation and it may mean much.

OFFICIAL OF CHAIN GROCERY STORES IS HELD UP AND ROBBED

Detroit, Sept. 18.—W. E. Parker, vice-president of Wright & Parker, chain store grocers, was recently held up by a heavily armed bandit and robbed of between $5,000 and $7,000 as he left one of his firm's stores at Temple and Trumbull Avenues at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The bandit escaped in an automobile driven by an accomplice, and in full view of many pedestrians, Parker reported.

Parker had just left the store with a satchel containing the money. This he deposited on the floor of his car and started his motor. At this juncture a young man sprang out of an automobile parked on the opposite side of the street, rushed over to Parker's machine and pointed a revolver in his face, demanding the money. He snatched up the satchel and ran to his own car, leaped on the running board and climbed inside half a block farther on, as the machine sped down Temple Avenue and disappeared.

Checking Results From Displays

Does the Average Retailer Know Just to What Extent do Window Displays Increase Sales?—He Knows That Displays do Increase Turnover But He Seldom Keeps Any Actual Record of Results—Here Are Some Figures

From the book, "Window and Store Displays," by A. T. FISCHER, President of the International Displays Co., Cleveland, Ohio

IF YOU will ask the average retailer, "Does display increase sales?" you will invariably receive the definite reply, "Yes." But he does not know how much of an increase, any more than does the average manufacturer.

He has not kept actual records to find out what a given display produced, yet he knows that display does increase sales.

Dealers and manufacturers do not have much in the way of definite figures. In one investigation covering more than three thousand retail stores of all kinds ninety per cent. stated that displays had increased sales, but estimates of the average rate increase varied all the way from 25 per cent. to 300 per cent.

In order to determine what increase in sales would result from displays, specific tests have been made under my own supervision, all being conducted in the same way, namely, checking sales week by week for an agreed period without display, then installing a given display and again checking sales week by week for another identical period. A few of these tests will serve for examples:

Drug Store Display Tests

I. The product selected was a well-advertised tooth paste, and the display used was a newly adopted counter display container.

A sales test was conducted in 20 drug stores for three weeks before this new display container was used, to determine the normal sales. A total of 155 tubes were sold.

Then for another 3 weeks, in these same 20 drug stores, a sales test was conducted with the tooth paste displayed on the counter. The total sales for these 3 weeks were 412 tubes of the dental paste.

Thus the increase in sales when this display was in use was 257 tubes or 165 per cent. increase in sales for that product.

II. The product selected was a medical preparation, an herb tea, the goods being by nature "slow sellers." Checking first without using any display, a test in 10 drug stores for 3 weeks showed 26 packages had been called for in the normal course of business.

However, when sales test was made with a counter display, it proved that many persons wanted the product, but never just happened to get around to inquire for it. A test in these same stores for another 3 weeks showed the surprising total of 63 packages sold over the counter, or a 142 per cent. increase in sales.

III. Another medical tea was given a similar counter test in a different list of stores, and, of course, a different display.

First sales were checked in 9 drug stores for 3 weeks without any display, and the result was only 24 packages sold. Then the packages were packed in a counter-display container and placed on top of the showcase. The result, when sales were again checked for another 3 weeks, was 57 packages sold, or a total of 137 per cent. increase in sales.

Grocery Store Display Tests

I. The product was an extract, on the market for fifty odd years, and known to every housewife and enjoying exceptional prestige.

To learn the normal demand, a record was kept in 14 grocery stores for 3 weeks without any display, and the result was 68 sales. Then the very same test was conducted with the product placed in a display container on the counter in each of these 14 stores, and sales were watched for another 3 weeks. The result this time was 154 sales. Here again there was no other form of advertising in use at this time and no special sales plan or customer inducement. The product was a long-established trade staple, and yet the mere fact of dealer display on the counter caused a jump in demand from 68 to 154 bottles or 126 per cent. increase.

II. The product, the largest selling soup in the United States, on the market about ten years, but heavily advertised and enjoying universal distribution.

When a test was made in 21 grocery stores for 3 weeks without any display, the sales showed 365 cans per week sold, or a total of 1,068 cans for the 3-week period.

Then the same test was conducted after placing an attractive display on each grocer's counter. The addition of this simple reminder in each of these stores created an immediate jump in sales, and a 3-week check showed the product was selling at the rate of 608 cans per week or 1,824 cans total for 3 weeks, as against the normal sale of 1,068 cans. This for 21 stores made an average of 70.8 per cent. increase in sales. No additional collateral advertising was in progress during any test period.

III. The product was a new kind of soap, not well advertised and lacking in demand or distribution.

A check on sales for 3 weeks showed only a total of 52 packages disposed of by the dealers.

Then, a small unit display was made in the same stores (on the counter) and the sales for the next 3 weeks nearly tripled—showing 153 packages total, or an actual increase of 194 per cent. in sales.

Similar tests were made for candy, hardware, and haberdasher stores, in each case selecting one given product, and following sales for a list of stores straight through for 6 weeks—the first 3 weeks permitting no display whatever, and the next 3 weeks arranging in each of the stores a uniform display and the comparing sales for the two periods. In brief, they showed as follows:

Dealer's Sales without the help of display; First three weeks:

15 Candy Stores sold total 384 packets of a given 5-cent confection.
10 Auto Supply .....72 plugs
14 Haberdashers .....249 men's garters

Same dealer's sales with help of a specified display; Second three weeks:

15 Candy Stores sold total 1,074 packets of same 5-cent confection.
10 Auto Supply .....125 plugs
14 Haberdashers .....581 men's garters

Increase:

	Increase In sales
In candy test	180 per cent
In auto supply	74 per cent
In haberdashery	233 per cent

These figures show only averages. Of course, the individual dealer increases varied greatly, depending on individual store conditions.

Moreover, the tests were all conducted from a disinterested, purely investigative standpoint, and do not show fairly what could be expected of display if properly pushed in connection with the whole selling and advertising campaign.

For the purpose of demonstrating the value of dealer display when the house salesmen themselves lend their earnest co-operation, the following two detail tests will no doubt be interesting.

The first test was conducted by a corps of disinterested investigators to determine the actual sales of a certain display.

A number of stores were selected and inventory of stock, as well as record of sales, was taken before and after display was used. The stores were situated separately in wide localities.

It was found that total sales in the week before the goods were in view of the customer totalled 53 packages.

In the week during which the display was used, the sales ran almost three-fold —150 packages having been sold, a total increase in sales of 183 per cent. In one instance the increase was as large as 500 per cent. over previous sales.

Very few dealers seemed to have any definite ideas as to how much display material increases sales. They were very much interested in the test and in most instances were willing to co-operate.

The second test was entirely independent of the first, being conducted by the manufacturer of the same product through his own sales force to determine to what extent display would increase sales when used by his own sales people.

A comparative sales test was conducted in 28 stores and the results noted in the following were taken from exact records of stock and sales furnished by the manufacturer.

In one week previous to the display of the material, 36 sales of the article were made, whereas in the week following the display, sales were 297. A total increase of 725 per cent.! This figure does not include the increase in a number of stores where percentages of increase could not be computed because there were no sales originally.

Incidentally these two tests—one made by a distinctly disinterested group of investigators and the other through house salesmen — would indicate how advantageously display material can be used when the sales force is properly sold on it.

As bearing on this same question of what definite results are traceable to the mere fact of display, the following excerpts are quoted from a trade publication:

"A certain large retailer in New York City says that from long experience he can depend on selling from fifteen to thirty-five women's suits and dresses ranging in price from $15.00 to $50.00 on the day he shows these goods in his window.

"A York, Pa., retailer who had a sale of about $15.00 per week on a certain 60-cent candy, found that he had increased its sale to an average of $100.00 per week by devoting a window each Saturday to this candy.

"Last August, a Philadelphia store, during the time of a general furniture sale, placed a particular bedroom set in one of its windows. All the sets of this design were entirely sold out in two days.

"Another New York store one day last summer devoted their three windows, one to sport coats, one to straw hats, and one to women's hand bags. As a result, twenty-two sport coats were sold, three hundred and forty-five straw hats, and $600.00 worth of bags during the day."

I have purposely selected records made during normal times, (as references to 60-cent candy and fifteen-dollar suits show), as these indicate normal reaction to display in ordinary times.

It would pay every manufacturer to make specific tests for himself to see just what increase might be expected for his own product in his own dealers' stores.

Such tests are easily arranged, a little tact in handling dealers and details of checking being all that is required. Properly managed, the dealers and clerks themselves become hugely interested in the tests. However, emphasis must be laid on the fact that the work of checking stock and recording sales, before using and during use of display, must be handled independently of the dealer, and conducted in an absolutely uniform way, so that the results will represent actual facts and not what you may want to prove.

What you want is information, not confirmation of your own foregone conclusions.

Merchants themselves don't know the possibilities in dealer display.

Many manufacturers don't know their own market possibilities.

This has been demonstrated over and over again by manufacturers who have taken the trouble to do a little specific analyzing for themselves in a given territory, and have gone at the problem of fitting a sales and advertising plan which will reach in and ladle out those market possibilities. Too many of us just skim off the top, which is the easiest way.

Too many merchants and manufacturers simply sit back and rest on their oars after a few sweeps and expect the natural momentum, and the economic currents and eddies, to carry salesmanship into safe harbor.

Window and store display is one form of advertising on which you can actually check increase in sales and get returns immediately.

It is safe to say that on the average, the mere fact of dealer display will show a sales increase varying from 25 per cent. to 200 per cent., depending on nature of product, locality, season, etc. With the knowledge definitely established of how much display does increase sales, it remains for the manufacturer to use this principle in his selling and advertising plan.

Wrong Point of View: A young man seated in a train was suddenly addressed by the woman in the seat behind him.

"Pardon me, sir," she said, "but would you mind assisting me off at the next stop? You see I am very large and when I get off I have to go backward, so the conductor thinks I am trying to get aboard and helps me on again. He has done this three times."

How Pluck Plus Originality Wins

Here is a Remarkable Story of Six Years of Progress Made by a Grocer in a Town of 4,000 People—Says the Personal Touch in Advertising Wins

By HENRY JOHNSON, JR.

HERE is a story of a remarkable business. Sales of $250,000 a year, retail, are reported in a town of only about 4,000 people. The writer was shown some of this merchant's advertising. So I wrote asking how it was possible to do such a business, what stock was carried, how much credit and how much cash business, what average margin and expense, how often stock was turned, and what spent for advertising.

In writing his reply, George W. Caldwell had the wisdom to observe what a certain editor told a new writer: "As you are not a writing man, don't try to write. Just tell the story as if you were telling it to your wife." Thus Caldwell has written a fascinating account of how it happened, and I am printing it as written. I include a sample of his advertising, for that illustrates the strongly individual character that stands behind this great success. He writes:

Dear Mr. Johnson:—I am not certain that I can give you anything worth mentioning for to me it seems far from perfect, but if it may be of service to my brother merchants, I shall be glad.

I came here twelve years ago, to a co-operative store. Immediately I was attracted to the grocery business. It was active. There were possibilities, a real chance for work. The store, particularly among farmers, was popular and rated a great success. During twenty-one years, it paid the stockholders 10% dividends and piled up a surplus of $14,000, which was nearly as much as the original subscribed capital. But very little attention was given display or arrangement and practically no advertising.

Having the understanding that I was to work, I soon began to ask questions, make suggestions, trimming windows, arranging stock, and I found we had some stock the people ought to know about. Right there began my advertising experience.

Personal Touch in Advertising Wins

The work was crude at first, but I soon found that the more personal I could make the copy the more response it evoked. We have only a weekly paper, but every week we had an ad, and it was different each time. Very early I found that advertising alone was not enough. It had to be backed up by the whole organization of the entire store. So each week, the window made a feature of the items advertised. The same items were likewise displayed inside the store—on counters, tables and locations convenient to sales people. Finally, each clerk was posted to sell the advertised goods for all he was worth.

After several advertising experiments, I stumbled on the idea of a weekly newspaper within the paper. You will notice that every week the whole thing was different. We have endeavored to make it timely and of such interest to the buyer that he will always read it. We have had many tell us that our ad is read with as much interest as the rest of the paper. Business men particularly have told us that the very first thing they read in the Chronicle is "Take Table Talk."

One thing we are always careful about is to have our sales people informed about the goods we are advertising. Many times we cut samples and let them see just how good the article is. In other words we sell the item to the clerk. Then he is in better shape to sell to the customer. We try many stunts to keep up interest and enthusiasm. One is to assign to each clerk a certain article advertised. He is to feature that item particularly. The fun comes in to see who sells the most of the goods assigned to him. Sometimes we give a prize and sometimes we don't; but we find the idea adds much interest to the whole thing. I have dwelt on this point a little more than may seem necesary, but I think you will be interested since the copies furnished you caused you to write.

I will not dwell much longer on co-operative store history, except that after I had been there about five years and was made assistant manager and buyer, I was asked to take the managership by the board of directors. I very promptly declined the offer, stating that if Mr. Huffman did not even turn his hand he was worth his salary for the success he had made; his name alone gave the concern a credit standing which in itself was worth the money. The matter was dropped for that year but at the next election, one of the board decided he would like to be manager so they elected him and let Huffman out. I was asked to take charge of the floor, which I declined to do.

In Business For Self and Friend

Here starts a new chapter. Mr. Huffman was getting along in years and not anxious to continue in business, but I had just got a good taste of it and was "rarin' to go." There was a little store in the centre of the town willing to sell, so after much persuasion, I got Mr. Huffman to go in with me and we bought the little store. He was to stay with me a year until I could get established with the wholesale world, then he was to step out.

It took money to buy out the store and neither of us had enough to buy a soap bubble, but Mr. Huffman's record was all that was needed; two of our splendid wholesalers advanced the money on that, and off we went. The store had been doing about $30,-

HENRY JOHNSON, JR.
Writer of the business articles appearing in Canadian Grocer each week, has had a long and successful career in business.

HENRY JOHNSON JR. SENDS BIRTHDAY GREETINGS

September Four, 1922

My Friend—Another year has flown. It has brought me renewed consciousness of Friendship and the joys thereof. So once again I send you my Birthday Greetings. I hope Time has been good to you: that you have prospered in all things, but mainly in Spirit. Last year I looked backward over the Way I had come during Fifty-five years. Now I look forward to the Forty-four years yet due me, and, from the vantage point of Fifty-six years of youth, I send you this message of Good Will and Good Cheer, sincerely hoping that you will help me celebrate Forty-four years hence!

000, but the " C. & H.," as we called our store, got off on the right foot and our first year's business went over the $50,000 mark. As agreed, after the first year Mr. Huffman stepped out, I took over his half interest and ran the business alone. It continued to prosper each year, each year the sales being higher. About eighteen months ago I fortunately got another man to join me and sold him an interest. But we have not changed the name, for C. & H. has become a synonym for good groceries in our community and we agree that the name so well established should remain.

Here comes the sequel. The man elected to succeed Huffman as manager of the co-operative store resigned at the end of the year and another was elected to take his place. There was a vacant building just across from the C. & H. so the Co-op. moved and sold its property. They fixed up the new store in fine shape and began to turn the world upside down by cutting prices, giving all sorts of discounts, all kinds of services and in fact doing almost anything to get business from the C. & H. In the meantime we kept plugging. Our business was growing. Every year we showed a profit, so "we should worry."

One day a little bird told us something was doing across the street and we got busy. We needed more room anyway. The board of trade was ready to step in when we made a proposition to our bank. They got in touch with the right people and the wholesalers agreed to settle for a percentage and call it off. So we bought the stock and fixtures of the co-operative store.

Running Over Half a Million a Year

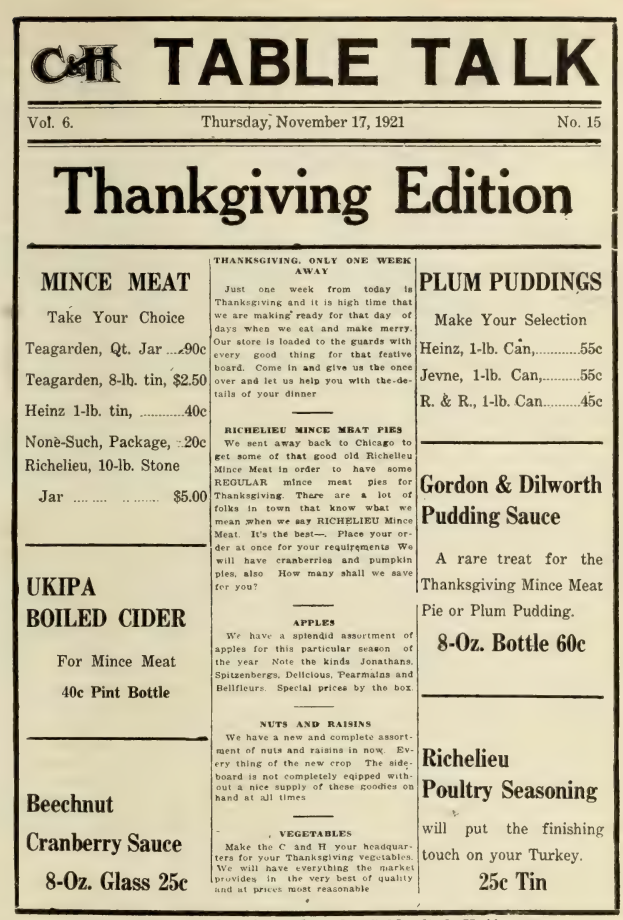
In my statement relative to this year's business running a quarter million, I worked on the basis of our previous progress. Now we have also a groceteria which we operate as a branch. Last year's credit sales were $116,470 and cash sales, $462,530.51. Merchandise carried, $14,000. Advertising, $540. Cost of operation, 18%. Our stock is now a little lower than average, which runs about $16,000.

Our business has grown rapidly from its inception. From the very day we opened we have been undercapitalized. We have had to borrow, borrow, borrow. But there has always come a time for paying back, and we have done that even though we are still borrowing. You will be interested to know that we have long since paid back those two wholesalers who believed in us in the old days, and I assure you their favor will never be forgotten. I have paid Mr. Huffman for the half interest I bought from him. Mr. Watt paid his interest out of his profits. I have a nice home, an automobile all paid for and aside from owning our respective interests in the business we have undivided profits of nearly $16,000. My own personal worth at this time is $30,000.

If we have made a success of our business, we attribute it very largely to four things: advertising, turnover, hard work and co-operation with our help.

This history covers six years. It has been our custom for several years to take stock twice a year and have an auditor prepare a statement so Bradstreets and Dun as well as our bank can have all the facts about us at all times. This practice makes it possible for us to keep in close touch with ourselves too.

In all our merchandising we have made it a rule to attend to our own business. If our competitor wanted to give away his profits, that was his business. We have always featured full values, quality and service. We find that price is not everything.



I expect you have found the foregoing long and tiresome, but I have told it to you in my own way. If it is of any service to you I am glad. If not, throw it in the waste basket. No doubt you can see many flaws in our methods. If so, we will deem it a favor if you will point them out.

Should This Go Into The Waste Basket?

I should like to leave it to my readers whether this should go into the waste basket. Assuming the vote is negative—emphatically so—I shall comment very briefly, merely by way of bringing out a few points in as high relief as possible.

Note the splendid way in which the Fall and Winter Trade

WITH THE Autumn season now at hand, merchants begin to feel a fresh stimulus to business, and prepare for an active fall and winter trade. Summer vacations are over, the hot weather has passed, and there is a general feeling that it is time to put forth effort to secure bigger turnover. During the summer there is a disposition on the part of the public to withhold from indulging in heavy foods, and are inclined to limit the diet to fresh fruits, vegetables and other light stuff. They do not as a rule eat as much.

The crop movement is heavy. The products of the soil are being moved to the various industries to be manufactured into various things. Everybody is laying in supplies for the winter. This being the general condition throughout the country, the time is opportune for the grocer to get his full share of this increased buying. With the retailer putting forth his best efforts to stimulate trade, other industries are helped and the result is a general return of activity and prosperity.

When Numbers are Misleading

EACH YEAR the management of the Canadian Exhibition strives to set up new records for attendance. The impression is given, says The Financial Post, that the number of people who can be jammed through the turnstiles is the measure of the fair's success. Hon. Manning Doherty very effectively told the directors as their luncheon guest that the idea of over-filling the grounds and buildings was a poor one if the effect was to have entertainment seekers crowding out those who would benefit by the exhibits from an educational standpoint.

The mistake of being carried away by mere numbers, of over-looking quality in striving for quantity, is a common one. There are many business men who are otherwise sane and sound in the conduct of their business, who are imposed upon by big circulation statements when buying advertising. The manufacturer or wholesaler with a few thousand customers, makes a great mistake when he pays big prices for advertising space on the basis of a hundred thousand circulation.

The Retailer Must Be Helped

ROGER W. BABSON, one of the world's leading business diagnosticians is telling his vast clientele that the first business need of the hour is a movement to restore the confidence and efficiency of the retailer. Mr. Babson says:

"Boost your retailers. Offhand critics are fond of knocking the retailer as a man of limited foresight and ability. We do not agree with this view, but even if it were true, it would be far better to help him than to knock him. Moreover if he really is a light-weight, then so much the worse for the manufacturer, because his success or failure lies in the hands of the retailers who sell his goods."

Retailers sell 85 per cent. of all the goods bought in the country. Yet with all this important turnover concerned, all science and human ingenuity have been contributed to production while distribution has been left to look out for itself.

As a result, manufacturing costs have been cut to a fraction of what they were fifty years ago, but the percentage of distribution has largely increased in the past fifty years.

Business is on the eve of a great general improvement, Mr. Babson points out. But the retailer, instead of girding up his loins to win, is fearful and on the defensive, says the Vancouver Sun, pointing out that the problem is to show retailers their place in the business cycle and to show them that courageous activity at this time is all that is necessary for prosperity.

Given the same statistical information as the producer and backed up with the same resources of government and private research the retailer can make as much progress as the producer has.

The burden of action is on the manufacturer, the government and the consumer.

The retailer must be helped to make business go.

Food Costs Are Compared

THE COST of food in July in the United States was two per cent. higher than in March, 1922, and still 42 per cent. higher than before the war, according to a recent investigation. Since the peak of food prices in July, 1920, they have declined 35 per cent. The increase since March, 1922, is probably seasonal, since in former years a slight upward movement at this period was usual. The Far West, says the report, generally shows the smallest advance in retail food prices. All but one of the 51 cities from which information was collected by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported a decrease in the year, from July, 1921, to July, 1922. The largest decreases reported within the year were for raisins, evaporated milk and corn flakes, cabbage and eggs. The most important increases were in the price of navy beans, onions, oranges and canned tomatoes.

1922 Victory Bonds

HOLDERS of 1922 Victory Bonds who have decided to exchange their maturing bonds for new bonds carrying the same rate of interest, under the proposals of the Minister of Finance, would do well to surrender their bonds at once, rather than delay until September 30 approaches. When the bonds were first issued in 1917, the 1922 maturity was a favorite with small investors, many of whom were buying bonds for the first time. Consequently, there are many, many thousands of individual holders and it would be a great help to the banks and the Department of Finance in carrying through the conversion expeditiously, as well as a convenience to the holders themselves, if they would turn their bonds into the banks as early as possible.

Editorials in Brief

GENERALLY speaking, business is better performed by a man who devotes all his time to it instead of by one to whom it comes as a mere incident.

A PRICE of $120 per ton was paid in Santa Rosa, Cal., the other day for a shipment of Alicante grapes for New York. This is five times the average price before prohibition.

Let Candy Day Open the Season

Grocers Should Lose no Time in Making Preparations to Get Off to a Good Start on the Fall and Winter Candy Season—October 12 Should be About the Right Time—Suggestions That Might Come in Handy

CANDY DAY, which has been set for Thursday, October 12, in Canada, has been timed to synchronize well with the opening of the Fall Candy Season. The coming of cool weather means on increased demand for sweet things and the grocers of Canada should begin right now to use Candy Day as the opening for their Fall and winter trade in candy.

A very attractive showing of a single kind of candy was made recently by a merchant who featured cocoanut kisses. On a mass of red velvet, with a sheet of waxed paper to prevent the candy sticking, was a huge cocoanut kiss, 18 inches in diameter, and a foot high, stuck full of small flags. Cards said, "The largest cocoanut kiss of which we have any knowledge." At one end was a mass of shredded cocoanut, "The best cocoanut for each kiss," and at the other a mass of fondant, "Vanilla or chocolate fondant for our superfine cocoanut kisses."

Money in Small Confections

In the rear, on pedestals, were boxes of the mixed vanilla and chocolate kisses, between which was a card announcing them as "To-day's Special—60c. a pound." A card of invitation suggested, "Would you like a generous sample of this dainty confection? If so, we would be pleased to give you one." In the other window were girls in white, wrapping the cocoanut kisses in waxed papers, and above their heads was a card, "Do you want a kiss?"

One of the most profitable, but at the same time most commonly overlooked opportunities in candy selling is the pushing of the handy packages of confections put up by various manufacturers. Mints, gums, chocolate bars, peanut candies and the like, which can be bought all wrapped, require no trouble to weigh or wrap. With this elimination of a greater part of the cost of selling, the profits on these candy goods are usually excellent. In fact, an assortment of these candies placed in a convenient place in the store, near the soda fountain or the cashier's desk, acts as an automatic salesman. The display has only to be kept filled and the sales collected along with the other sales.

But whether it is the aim to feature the fancy two-dollar box candy, or the thirty-five cent candy or the penny peppermint sticks to children, the grocer must display his stock so that it will appeal to the appetite of his prospective customers in such a way that it stimulates them to buy. Candy displays, whether in the window, or the counter or in the case must be tastily and daintily arranged. They must look fresh and tempting, or they linger long in stock.

The candy counter must be so arranged and the goods so displayed as to create a desire to buy. No merchant can just pile the candy in a case on the side of the store and expect to double candy business.

A good arrangement for the candy case in a store which cannot allot more than one case to candy is to have the bulk candy in trays on the bottom of the case and the box candy on the shelves, with the five and ten-cent confections on the top of the case where the customers may help themselves and not be delayed in waiting for the clerk to weigh out the candy.

Quarter Pound as Minimum

In some stores a strenuous effort is made at all times to do away with the selling of small quantities—these, of course, are not discouraged but are kept at a minimum. Not a few merchants make a quarter-pound of bulk candy the minimum quantity sold. In selling they follow the practice of quoting the pound price first, and selling nothing less than a quarter-pound. This works out well, sells more candy, and surprises the merchants with an occasional sale of a pound or a half-pound where he had only expected a quarter.

For displaying chocolates in the window one merchant has adopted a platform that rests on the window base near the front glass and then rises to a height of nineteen inches in the back. This platform holds thirty-three five-pound boxes and presents a good mass display. The sides and any bare spots are covered with crêpe paper. Loose bulk candy is thrown on top of this platform and allowed to fall against the glass, making it seem as if there were three or four times the actual amount present.

Business From the Window

On another occasion this same merchant put the platform in the window and on it dumped two barrels of salt-water kisses. These wrapped in bright-colored papers showed up well. A shallow wooden box, holding about ten pounds, was covered with green crêpe, piled with kisses and tilted on the counter, with a small price sign on it. The price card used read: "Salt Water Kisses. 29 cents a pound, 15 cents a half-pound, 10 cents a quarter-pound."

The quarter-pound price was put at 10 cents to discourage small sales, but in spite of this a lot was sold, bringing in 40 cents a pound.

Shortage of Figs and Sultana Raisins is Probable Owing to War Situation

Currant Prices Already Show Advances, Due to Troubled Times in Greece—Smyrna Has Been Taken, and Business is Suspended There—Few Small Shipments on the Sea

MONTREAL (Special). — The Turks have captured Smyrna. The whole of Greece is in a chaotic condition and the armies have been disrupted. Apart from the political significance of this it has a very important bearing upon the grocery market and the future of prices here. In a cable from Smyrna to a local importer of dried fruits, dated September 9th, it was stated that business had been suspended and all shipments were cancelled.

Small Shipments at Sea

There are, however, some small shipments which got away before the sea ports were in danger. Some of these are now on their way to Montreal but they have all been booked. Those who purchased early at the opening prices on the new crop of figs and raisins were fortunate. The importers here are refusing to quote now on figs and raisins and what stocks they have left they are holding. The crops in Greece were this year excellent and prices were running low. The effect of the low price on raisins was no doubt a factor in determining the price of California raisins and therefore with Smyrna supplies cut off a stronger market for raisins is evident throughout.

Packing Stocks

As the packing season in Smyrna starts September 1st and runs until October the 20th the war with the Turks is coincident with the busiest season in the packing houses. All attention has now been turned from commercial pursuit and with the cities taken over by the Turks, packing and shipping has been suspended. Local importers express the opinion that the Turks will seize the crops and turn them over to their own use and there is little hope that contracts and orders will be filled.

Current News of The Week

Canadian Grocer Will Appreciate Items of News From Readers For This Page

Maritimes

D.A. Porter has opened a grocery store at the corner of Waterloo and Peters Street, in St. John, N. B. The name of the new enterprise is the Progressive Store.

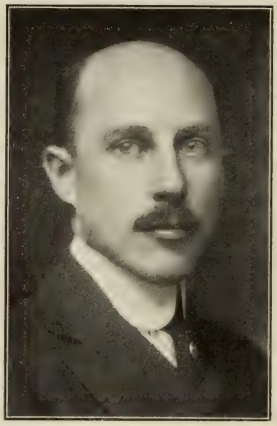
McPherson Bros., one of the oldest grocery firms in St. John, have re-opened for business at the old stand, Union Street. The McPherson building was badly gutted in July by fire which also partially destroyed the adjoining building to the west. The McPherson building has been repaired, so that it is just as good as new.

C. E. Luck, proprietor of two grocery stores in Fairville, N. B., has disposed of one of the stores, namely the Main Street shop, retaining the Church Avenue store. Mr. Luck and his wife have recently returned from a trip to the former home of both in England.

G. T. Richardson has opened a new grocery store at Prince Edward and Brunswick Streets in St. John.

Barker Bros. operating two retail grocery stores in St. John for many years, the main store on Princess Street, and the other on Prince Edward Street, have now opened a large store on Main Street at the corner of Portland Street, in the old Court Bros. meat and grocery store.

John De Angelis, formerly in the fruit business on Prince William Street, and also on Charlotte Street, St. John, N. B., is now in the grocery business at Coldbrook, N. B. Mr. De Angelis opened his store there recently. The store is a large one and on the main road between St. John and Moncton.



Quebec

The Piggly Wiggly Company Ltd. are opening three more stores in Montreal within the next two weeks. The first will be in Lachine and the second on Victoria Ave., Westmount, near the corner of Sherbrooke St. The third will be on Park Ave., near Laurier Ave.

J. N. Hunter, who for the last few years has been Montreal manager of the California Raisin Growers' Association has been moved to the Boston office of the company and Alex. McLeod has taken his place in Montreal. The new office of the company is in the Shaughnessey Building on McGill St.

Ontario

North Toronto Business Men's Association held a party the other evening with the members of their families in attendance. The party took the form of a corn roast. A very enjoyable time was the result.

GEORGE SLATE, JR.
Who goes to New York in charge of sales for The Shredded Wheat Co.

General Sales Mgr. Can. Shredded Wheat Goes to New York

The many wholesale grocers in Canada as well as a large number of retailers will regret to learn of the departure of George Slate, Jr., general sales manager of the Canadian Shredded Wheat Company, to New York City. Mr. Slate's appointment has recently been announced by the Shredded Wheat Company of Niagara Falls and he has already assumed his new duties, which will be charge of sales in the New York City territory embracing greater New York. The territory there recently became vacant and it is undoubtedly a compliment to Mr. Slate and to Canada that he has been chosen to succeed in the largest territory from the standpoint of population that the company has.

Mr. Slate has been connected with the Shredded Wheat Biscuit Company for the past twenty years. He spent fifteen of these at Niagara Falls, the last ten of which he was assistant advertising manager in the United States, and took over considerable detail so far as Canadian advertising was concerned. About five and a half years ago he took charge of sales in Canada from Manitoba to Newfoundland as general sales manager. His work also included supervision of promotional activities all over Canada as advertising manager. These combined duties naturally placed him in contact with wholesale grocers and a good many retailers in the various provinces. It was undoubtedly because of the manner in which he conducted his work as general sales manager of the company in the Canadian territory that earned him the new position in New York. While his many friends here are glad to hear of his promotion they regret his departure. Wholesale grocers who attended the convention last June at Niagara Falls remember with pleasure the splendid entertainment he provided in connection with the trip through the Shredded Whea plant and the banquet at the Clifton House.

Mr. Slate is succeeded in Canada by W. J. Wilcox, who has been connected with the Toronto office during the past ten years.

Amounts of Canned Fruits and Vegetables for Family of Five

According to a recent announcement, certain nutrition specialists of Cornell College of Agriculture, are working on a canning budget that will serve as a guide for the amounts of canned fruits and vegetables needed to keep a family of five well nourished for a year.

The budget recommends the use of tomatoes four times a week, green vegetables six times, starchy vegetables three times, and fruits ten times a week. The quantities of food such a family might well use are about 80 quarts of tomatoes, 120 quarts of green vegetables, 50 quarts of starchy vegetables, 220 quarts of fruits, and 40 quarts of conserve, jam and jellies.

Because of the presence of anti-scorbutic and water-soluble vitamines, the budget says, tomatoes are provided in quantity, but the use of oranges at certain seasons of the year may somewhat decrease the amount of tomatoes used. Either oranges or tomatoes are desirable for children throughout the year.

The amount of vegetables stored, it continues, such as cabbages or celery, affect the quantity of green vegetables provided by the canning budget, and the amount of fresh or dried fruits such as apples, prunes and oranges used during the year, must also be considered in estimating the amount of fruit to be canned.

A. D. G. Hager of Midland has sold his business to Jos. Dunlop and C. C. Maxwell.

Ontario

An attempt to rob the Kaplin general store at Kirkland Lake was recently foiled by Edith Atkinson, aged 20, who alone captured Jos. Edwards when the latter was about to loot the store.

Thanksgiving Day this year will be November 6th. The date was fixed by parliament at the 1921 session, being designed to fall on the Monday of the week containing armistice day, which is November 11.

The Colville Feed and Milling Co., Limited, Dundas, manufacturers of stock feeds, suffered loss by fire to their plant and stock last Sunday, amounting to $125,000.

Grocers with their families from the district comprising Crediton, Centralia, Lucan, Ailsa Craig, Grand Bend and other centers, held a picnic at Grand Bend recently. A large number of sporting events were run off, and all were keenly contested.

The marriage of Norman E. Werrett, grocer at Simcoe, is announced. Mr. Werrett was married on Tuesday of last week to Miss Grace Woolley, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. McK. Woolley of Lyndale Farm, just north of Simcoe. His many friends in the trade will join in extending congratulations.

A big program is being arranged for Thanksgiving Day by the Bloor and Lansdowne business men and ratepayers' association of Toronto. It is proposed to hold a big parade in the morning, followed by a program of sporting events in the afternoon and community dancing in the evening.

The death occurred at Peterborough recently of John A. Cameron, for many years representative in that district for the wholesale grocery house of Perkins, Ince & Co., Toronto. He was 66 years of age, and had lived in Peterborough for the past thirty-seven years. He is survived by one son and two daughters.

The death occurred the other day in the Toronto General Hospital of Joseph Edgar of Sunbridge, Conservative member of the Ontario Legislature for Parry Sound from 1914 to 1919. The late Mr. Edgar was for many years head of the Joseph Edgar and Co., general merchants at Sunbridge. He was in hi 66th year.

Business Changes

B. Copeland is now in business at 1132 Dundas Street, W., Toronto.

A. J. Wheeler has opened a grocery store at 341 Bathurst Street, Toronto.

P. F. Reilley, Petrolia, Ont., has sold his general store to John Bishop.

A. B. Mulligan who has been in the grocery business at Ottawa has been succeeded by B. R. Lusk.

Letters To The Editor

Regina, Sept. 12, 1922

Editor Canadian Grocer:—

Your issue of September 8th on page 18 you feature an article by Dr. R. N. Chapman on the problem that both wholesaler and retailer is confronted with, that of dealing with the moths and insects that infest food products. Dr. Chapman's cure is no doubt effective, but it is so very difficult for the rank and file of retailers to have a quarantine room that the plan hardly seems workable.

No doubt many others in the trade have dealt with the problem in the same manner as we have. We are purchasing a liquid chemical disinfectant from the Missouri-Kansas Chemical Corporation, of St. Louis, Missouri, that is the most deadly of insect destroyers we have ever used.

This liquid chemical, known as A. G., is used as follows:

"Spray walls, ceilings, and floors at least twice a week on beginning the use of A. G. An occasional spraying will then keep premises clear of all weevil. By spraying liberally the gases which generate will permeate all cracks and crevices destroying eggs and larvae as well as moth and weevil.

Do Not Spray on Stock

"In eliminating weevil with gaseous forms it is best that the compartment to be sprayed be closed as tightly as possible so that a sufficient concentration of gas may come in contact with the infected parts. The gas is most conveniently secured by liberating it in warm rooms. Spraying at closing time and on Saturday is considered best."

When spraying is completed the air on the floor of any warehouse should present the appearance of a light fog.

It is an unfortunate fact that many retailers' stores are infested with moths, particularly bins that are not occasionally cleaned out, but a vigorous combat as outlined above would soon remedy the evil.

Yours very truly,
H. G. Smith, Limited,
Per H. Smith.

CANADIAN SECTION AT BIRMINGHAM FAIR

London, Sept. 16.—After preliminary inquiries, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce in London has decided to organize a section at the British Industries Fair at Birmingham next March, to be exclusively Canadian. Secretary Stewart thinks this is a splendid opportunity for Canadian manufacturers, as the Fair is one of the most important in Britain.

Western Canada Notes

The Merchants of Portage la Prairie, Man., are planning to hold a fall carnival at an early date.

C. Louis Allen, of The Match Company Limited, Montreal, spent a few hours in Winnipeg while on his way to the Coast.

C. H. McLean of the St. Lawrence Sugar Company, who is on a trip out West with the Montreal Board of Trade, spent a few days in Winnipeg.

FISHERIES SHOULD BE IN HANDS OF SEPARATE DEPT.

Vancouver, Sept 18.—The advisability of creating a separate department of Fisheries in Ottawa was discussed at the sitting of the Parliamentary Commission which is investigating conditions in British Columbia's fishing industry. Henry Doyle, Vice-President of the Northern British Columbia Fisheries Company, Limited, and Richard Bell-Irving, speaking for the cannery interests, both submitted that the administration of Canadian fisheries should be in the hands of a separate department.

WANT SUSPENSION

Winnipeg. (Special). — The Retail Stores Association here want the suspension of the enforcement of the Early-Closing by-law until after the civic elections this fall. This organization recommends that the matter be held over until a referendum be submitted to the electors of Winnipeg at the time of the civic election.

More than 600 small store keepers are said to be affected by the early closing enactment. The officials claim that of these the majority will be put out of business by such enforcement. They say that twenty-five per cent. of the trade in the small stores is done after 6 o'clock.

The Retail Merchants' Association, which favors the enforcement of the Early-Closing bylaw, is pushing its case before the local council.

BLACKMAIL STUNT ON PRESIDENT

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 19.—On September 11 James W. Moir, president of Moirs, Limited, this city, received a clumsily worded letter warning him that unless he left twenty-five thousand dollars in cash in a certain spot in Point Pleasant Park by September 15 he would be assassinated on that date. The letter was signed "Member." Friday, after consulting the police, Mr. Moir deposited a "dummy" roll in the tin can which was found hidden according to instructions in the letter, just inside the park gates.

Later in the day police, who had concealed themselves nearby, saw a man casually approach the hidden can. He was arrested on a charge of blackmail as he emerged from the thicket, evidently pleased with his success, not yet having discovered the trick that had been played. He gave his name as Evans Verboff, 30, a native of Bulgaria.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

WHOLESALERS report some improvements in the volume of trade. The opening of the autumn season has to some extent stimulated buying. Prices, however, are for the most part steady and few changes are announced. Sugar prices have dropped another 25 cents per cwt. There was considerable cutting going on. There is not any heavy buying demand. The U.S. refined market is easy, but even at sharp declines, buying is not in great volume. Prices on the new pack of canned tomatoes and corn are not yet announced. Some brands of last year's pack of canned tomatoes are offered at reduced prices. Most lines of canned goods are unchanged.

In dried fruits some California raisins are offered lower this week. Shipments of new Grecian currants are not expected on this market until after the middle of November. It is more than likely, importers state, that prices will be higher than last year. Sultana raisins, on account of the trouble in the East, are not likely to come on this market. Smyrna figs, it is more than probable, will be off. Any that may be available will be quoted at very high prices. Other dried fruits show no changes in prices.

Tea and coffee markets are very firm. Importers state that tea supplies on spot are restricted and buying for importation is not being conducted on any great scale. Coffees on spot are steady but firm. The rice market is unchanged, but the situation is strong. Spices are active with a continued brisk demand. Prices are strong at levels steady with a week ago. The flour market is steady at last week's decline, as are also millfeeds. Fruits and vegetables continue to be offered freely, at fairly easy prices.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Sept. 21.—The grocery market on the whole shows some improvement as far as demand is concerned but still an unsettled and uncertain feeling is evident. Confidence is absolutely lacking in sugar. Prices continue to be cut much below the refiners' list prices. Molasses and corn syrups are in better demand and prices are firm. Package goods show no change. Interest is centered on dried fruits since developments in the east have cut off the large supplies of raisins, figs and currants that were expected and prices are soaring. Dates will be plentiful this year. Walnuts are advanced. Some glace fruits are advanced while one line is reduced. The coffee market shows no change. Teas are firm and in fair demand. Fruits are firmer in price with the change in the weather. Vegetables are also a little stiffer. The cereal market is steady. Retail merchants are awaiting the new pack of canned goods and the new prices but nothing further has been announced this week. Cloves are stronger in primary markets. The future of rice is uncertain. So far it seems that American rices will be lower but trouble in Greece and the east may play a part in setting the prices.

CLEANSERS REDUCED

Montreal.

MISCELLANEOUS.—The local wholesale trade quotes a reduction this week Old Dutch Cleanser, making the price on Old Dutch Cleanser, making the price monia is also reduced 15c a doz. to $1.50.

CEREALS STEADY

Montreal.

CEREALS.—There is no change in the cereal market. Prices have a steady tone for the present and buying is limited to small quantities but the trade throughout is looking for lower prices on cereals this fall.

SMYRNA FRUIT ADVANCED

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—Smyrna sultana raisins are held at a premium here. Stocks on hand are light. The first and probably the only shipment of the new crop of Smyrna sultana raisins has reached Montreal and some orders have been booked. The remainder of the supply is being held by local dealers for fancy prices. The price now quoted on these raisins is 25 cents a pound and some brokers express the opinion that it will go as high as 30 cents. Currants have also advanced on account of the developments in the East and the import cost for the new crop now stands at 17½ cents. At that, deliveries are uncertain. Figs are also scarce and the price is higher. The first shipment has reached Boston and brokers feel that it is impossible for any further supplies to get through. Price will be high on Smyrna figs this year, but some supplies are expected from Spain and Portugal. New York brokers have this week been trying to buy figs in Canada. A good big crop is expected and prices will be easy. The first shipment will be in Montreal by November 1st. The Saxonia Fruit Co. have announced an advance of 5 cents a pound on glace cherries, which are now quoted at 65 cents a pound in 8½ lb. wooden boxes. On the other hand glace assorted fruits are reduced 5 cents a pound and are quoted at 70 cents. Glace pineapple is also reduced 5 cents per pound.

SHELLED WALNUTS HIGHER

Montreal

NUTS.—The only feature in the nut market is the advance of four cents per pound in shelled walnuts which are now quoted at 59 and 60 cents per pound. The demand is good both for walnuts and for almonds.

CANNED GOODS STEADY

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—The canned goods market is steady for spot stocks and no new prices have been quoted on the new pack except for peas. The quotations on corn and tomatoes are expected by the first week in October. Buying is limited since all the retail dealers are awaiting the new prices and the new pack. Some retailers have placed their orders for fall and winter requirements for canned fruit, but in the majority of cases buying is being held off.

COFFEE MARKET QUIET

Montreal.

COFFEE.—There are no futher developments in the coffee market. Prices here are steady with a fair demand. There are latent possibilities of a change in the tone of the market which only awaits the action of the Brazilian Government in connection with the stocks of coffee held in that country.

CLOVES GO HIGHER

Montreal.

SPICES.—There is little feature of note in the spice market apart from the uncertain situation in the U. S. A. on account of the tariff question. Up till late last week the spice brokers in New York had no intimation of what move the senate would make in connection with the increase, which, if it comes, will increase the import cost of many spices for Canada being bought through the U. S. A. Cloves are scarce and are quoted higher in primary markets but no change has been made locally.

SUGAR DECLINES

Montreal

SUGAR.—Another drop was registered by the local refiners of 25 cents on Tuesday afternoon. Local wholesalers have been quoting $7 a cwt. for refined sugar but the refiners had a list price of $7.25 which they were ostensibly holding. Nevertheless some sugar was being sold here at a figure below the $7 mark. Yet to all appearances and according to the refiners' reports there is a firm tone to raw sugar and a firmer tendency to granulated in the U. S. A. Retailers are cautiously buying in small lots to meet immediate requirements.

RICE MARKET UNCERTAIN

Montreal.

RICE.—The rice market is in an uncertain position as far as future prices are concerned. The likelihcod is that on American rices prices wi'l be easier but other rices show a firm tone and should developments in the East become more alarming it is sure to have a direct bearing on the rice market. Local dealers are of the opinion that rice may be even higher in price this fall unless the war clouds disappear.

FRUIT PRICES EASY

Montreal.

FRUIT—Peaches advanced this week with the change on the weather conditions. The cold spell has eased the pressure to sell and prices are firmer. A good supply of grapes is on the market and prices are easy. Lemons are quoted at $4.50 a case for Verdillis and grape fruit are prominent, quoted at from $6.50 to $8.00 a case. Apples are low in price. No. 1 Wealthys are selling at $5 a barrel.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Sept. 20.—Grocery markets are for the most part steady. Sugar has declined 25 cents. This had not been unexpected. Buying is not heavy. Raisins are quoted slightly easier and some lines of canned tomatoes are lower. Prices on the new pack of tomatoes and corn are not yet named. Tea is very firm, and spot stocks restricted. Spices are moving in good volume and values are firm. Rices are steady. Cereals are inclined to easiness and dealers state that buying is only as immediate requirements demand. Flour is holding at last week's decline. Fruits and vegetables are abundant and at low levels.

Toronto.

CEREALS—Buying of cereals at the present time is only as immediate requirements demand. In anticipation of lower levels prevailing, the trade is not buying on any broad basis. Prices are fairly steady, but the new crop looked upon as a heavy one is expected to mean easier quotations and dealers state that merchants are not loading up at present values.

EASY QUOTATIONS ON TOMATOES

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS—Prices of the new pack of tomatoes and corn are not yet announced, but there appears to be fairly heavy offerings of the old pack of tomatoes being offered at fairly low prices. One wholesaler is quoting one brand of canned tomatoes at $1.35 per dozen for 2½s, and in 25 case lots the quotation is $1.30 per doz. Other lines of canned goods are for the most part at steady levels, and there appears to be a fair volume moving. A quotation of $5.75 per doz. for halves is named on lobster, but a price as low as $5.25 is also quoted by some dealers. Salmon is steady, and selling freely. Fruits and jams are unchanged and trading is quiet.

CURRANTS STRONG

Toronto

DRIED FRUIT.—The price of 16c per pkg. for 15 oz. pkg. seedless raisins is quoted this week. This quotation is for boxes of 48 pkgs. Thompson's seedless raisins in 25 lb. boxes are quoted in 10 box lots as low as 14½c. Smaller lots are 15c per lb. Dry cleaned filiatras currants, 1921 pack are quoted in 80 lb. lots at 15c per lb. and in smaller lots at 15½c per lb. No currants of the new pack are expected on this side until after the middle of November. Prices on the new pack are likely to be higher than last year, and the present crisis in the East is likely to stimulate values. The withdrawal of practically the most important competition, namely sultana raisins, will undoubtedly mean a stronger market for Grecian currants, dealers state. The quantity of Grecian currants available for export is said to be less this year, in view of the fact that the government retention percentage has been increased from 20 to 35 per cent. The government retention means that for every 100 tons of currants exported, thirty-five tons are given to the government. This was formerly twenty per cent.

Quotations on other dried fruits are unchanged as compared with a week ago.

SUGAR MARKET QUIET

Toronto.

SUGAR.—The sugar market is lower again this week. Refiners' prices are down, at $7.34 per cwt. delivered Toronto, but there is still some second hand selling at a price, it is stated of $7 per cwt. However, dealers declare that buying is not on a large scale. The raw market is inclined to be easier. Purchases by Federal refiners, New York, of 4,000 tons Cubas, last week, at a price of 3 1/16c c. and f. equal to a duty paid price of 4.73c is reported. The U. S. refined market is weak, all refiners quoting $6.25 per cwt. but even at this figure, the demand is said to be light.

TEA MARKET IS STRONG

Toronto.

TEAS—The tea market continues very strong. Importers state that stocks on spot are very restricted and buying for importation is not being conducted on any broad scale. The market at present does not indicate any tendency to decline, but those in close touch with market conditions believe that it will be some time before declines can be expected. A shortened production and an increased consumption has resulted in advances, but present values are likely to stimulate production.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG.—Wholesalers report a better feeling in business, and indications point to a resumption of demand and a general improvement in the Fall months. Coffees and teas are in a strong position with local grinders advancing prices on coffee from 1c to 2c per lb. The canned goods market is ruling steady. There is a good demand for apricots at slightly lower levels. The cereal market is showing a weaker tone. Jams maintain a firm tone. New plum jam is selling freely on the local market at 60c per tin. Fruits and vegetables continue to arrive freely and prices are slightly easier.

CANNED GOODS STEADY

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—The market for canned goods is steady and unchanged. There is a good enquiry for salmon as it is used extensively during the harvest season. The sale of canned vegetables continues fair and indications are that tomatoes may be slightly lower. Peas are quoted at $3.10 per case. Pumpkin is practically cleaned out as are also beans and it will be another two or three weeks before the new pack arrives. The sales of canned fruits are slightly limited owing to the large quantities of fresh fruits available.

APRICOTS IN DEMAND

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUITS.—There is a good demand for apricots despite the high prices. Wholesalers report that apricots are selling more freely this year than last. The second shipment has arrived but owing to strike conditions in California they are offered at slightly lower levels. New prunes are expected around the end of this month. Present stocks will be cleaned up before they arrive. Peaches are in good demand and prices are more reasonable than any other line of dried fruits. Practically no evaporated apples are obtainable until the new pack arrives around the 25th of September. Prices have not as yet been set by wholesalers but indications are that they will be about 18½c. per lb. Turkish figs during the last week have advanced about 2c. per lb. caused by speculation and the likelihood that the new crop will be delayed by war conditions now existing in Smyrna. Indications are that new figs will not arrive on this market until the middle of December. Currants have advanced 2c. per lb. on primary markets due largely to the same conditions as mentioned above in respect of figs, although recent advices state that boats are now loading and new currants will be expected shortly.

Alberta Markets

FROM CALGARY, BY WIRE

Calgary, Sept. 18.—Flour declined thirty cents a barrel. The sugar market continues weak. Lard is stronger, up half a cent per lb., at $11.70 for threes. Compound jam is firmer at $6.35 per doz. There is a strong demand for fruit jars and stock is getting low. Owing to unsettled conditions shipments of Smyrna figs will likely be short.

What Constitutes a Violation of the Seeds Act

Moncton, Sept. 18.—A. J. Babang, wholesale grocer, was the defendant recently on a charge of a violation of the federal seeds control act, in that he did not comply with the law when he had failed to have bags, parcels, etc., containing seed oats, so labelled as to show the proportion of noxious weeds contained therein.

The defendant claimed that he had acted in good faith being unconscious of the law. Court held that there was a technicality exercised and defendant's attorney so agreed. A nominal fine was imposed. James C. Sheren appeared for the Federal Department of Agriculture; S. G. Moore, Federal Inspector for Seeds in the Maritime Provinces, laid the information. As a result of the case herein referred to, it was urged by Mr. Moore that all seed merchants comply with the law in reference to having their seed oats, etc., so labelled as to show the name of the seller, the quality of seed and the percentage of noxious weeds in same.

WANTS CANADIAN PRODUCTS

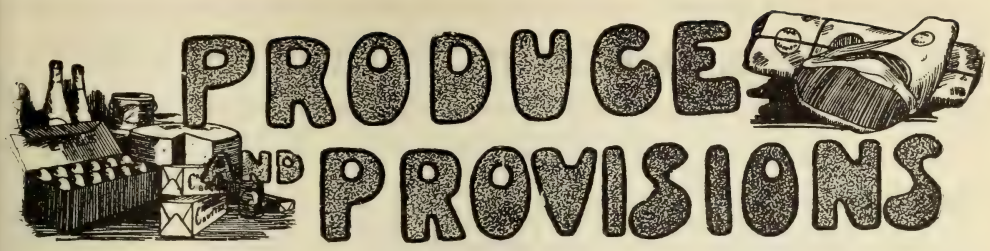
An enquiry has been received from Holland stating that a Dutch firm wants to represent a Canadian manufacturer of food products. Holland imports from Canada the following products: cod fish, lobster, salmon, flour, fruit (both fresh and dried), grain, hay, meats, seeds, etc. Any Canadian firm interested in export trade to Holland may have the name of the enquirer on application to the Editor, Canadian Grocer.

THE PRICE-CUTTER

"Tell me not in smiling numbers,
Selling costs are what they seem
That the man who cuts for business
Gets the lion's share of cream.

"If you strive to build a business,
Do not be a human sieve,
Letting leak the needed profit
Trusting luck will let you live.

"Lives of dead ones all remind us
What it means to sell on guess
Their departure makes us keener
To sell right, and not for less:



"For the trade will ne'er by loyal
To a man whose whole regrets
Are, that he cannot sell cheaper
To add interest to his debts."

A Repeat Order

"Ma wants two pounds of butter zackly like you sent us last week."

"All right, my boy," said the grocer, quite pleased to have the other customers overhear the youngster.

"Ma said it must be zackly the same kind," the boy insisted, "cause a lot of pa's relatives are visiting our house an' ma doesn't want 'em to come again."

Reports on Potato Crop Conditions Indicate Fairly Satisfactory Production

In Ontario and Quebec Crop is Reported Good— New Brunswick Shows a Slight Falling Off— Prolonged Dry Spells Reduce Prospects in West

OTTAWA, Sept. 11. (Special).—A general survey of the potato crop conditions of the Dominion, as gleaned from provincial reports, in the hands of the Dominion fruit commissioner at Ottawa, indicate a fairly satisfactory production. Prolonged dry spells, insect pests and other adverse conditions have mitigated to a certain extent against a healthy growth in the Western provinces, but in spite of these conditions the outlook is promising. In Alberta the acreage of potatoes is estimated at approximately eighty-five per cent. of that of last year. In the southern part of that province the growing conditions are fully equal to 1921. It is estimated that the total yield of the Saskatchewan potato crop will be approximately ten million bushels. In most districts the crop will be between 90 and 100 per cent. of average.

Manitoba Suffers In Past Month

In Manitoba the crop has suffered considerably during the past month. In July there was a succession of heavy rains followed by excessive heat, and these conditions seem to have caused premature ripening in the better varieties of early potato, while on the low-lying lands much disease and rot has developed. As a result of these conditions the yield per acre of the whole crop will be reduced.

Heavy Crop in Ontario

In Ontario, the districts of Cobourg, Kingston, Wellington and Kemptville all report exceedingly heavy crops. Wellington reports 100 per cent. larger crop than last year. The prospects in Petrolia, Arkona, Forest District, Norfolk County and Port Hope are also bright. The crop in Fort William is about 75 per cent. of that of last year, while in Dryden district it is estimated at 60 per cent. of last year.

Conditions in Other Provinces

The general report for the province of Quebec is that the potato crop is generally reported to be good and an average yield is expected.

In most of the Prince Edward Island districts there are some evidences of disease and some of the fields show misses, but nevertheless there will likely be a normal crop.

In New Brunswick the potato crop as a whole promises to be slightly less than that of last year. In some sections the yield will be fifty per cent. greater than in 1921, but in other districts it is not as good.

Reports from Nova Scotia are very promising. The crop as a whole promises to be good with but little insect or disease injury to date.

Maritimes Have Good Crops and Big Catch of Fish

Montreal.—It is interesting to note a report on conditions in the Maritime Provinces as made by investigators outside of Canada. The United States has a keen interest in industrial and financial conditions in Canada and their Consular Report made this month shows that there are decidedly improved conditions in the Maritime Provinces.

This report reads:—"Eastern Canada showed little improvement for the month of July, although the prospects of a bumper crop have stimulated buying in anticipation of a greatly increased volume of orders later in the season. Collections are slow and doubtless will continue so until the harvest. Bank clearings for July were slightly less than for July 1921. Building showed increased activity and the value of permits issued showed an increase of $132,100 over the same month of last year.

"July customs receipts were the largest ever collected in a single month in the history of St. John, which showed an increase of $85,469 over the same month of last year. Each month this year has showed an increase.

"The fisheries have also showed an increase of 152,792 cwt. being landed during the first six months of the current year, as compared with 82,474 for the corresponding period of 1921. The lobster catch is reported good, the season's catch since November being 12,086 cwt. above that of last season.

"The lumbering industry is experiencing a stronger demand for the domestic and United States trades, but exports to the Orient have fallen off. Very heavy consignments are going from the Maritime Provinces to the United States and British markets. The apple crop will be lighter than last year."

Bigger Crop of Brazil Nuts is Anticipated

Montreal.—Reports from Brazil state that by present indications the yield of Brazil nuts this season will be 5,000 tons more than that of 1921. There seems to be an increased demand for Brazil nuts in Europe and they are being used in the manufacture of a great variety of food-stuffs. In this connection it is noted that recent purchases for American account are much smaller than in former years. Formerly the United States has purchased three-fifths of the total production, but it is likely that this year they will only demand approximately two-fifths of the crop, but the requirements for Europe will be sufficient to provide a market for the total production.

Fruit From Brazil

A new development in the export trade of Santos, Brazil, was the exportation during the month of May of several hundred cases of Brazilian oranges, tangerines, pineapples and alligator pears, all of which were grown in the State of Sao Paulo, Santos. The cultivation and exportation of oranges and similar fruits native to Brazil is still in an experimental stage, but if the demand of the market is such that it is found profitable to ship Brazilian fruits, there is little doubt that a trade of fair proportions can be developed, owing to the fact that freight service between important cities on the east coast of South America and the United States and Canada has been greatly facilitated during the past year.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Sept. 21.—There are a number of changes in the produce market that create interest in buying and indicate more activity for the fall trade. On account of larger offerings of hogs and less competition in buying, quotations on live hogs have dropped, with a corresponding weakness in dressed pork. Smoked meats are also easy but cooked meats are unchanged although the demand has fallen off to some extent. Weakness is evident in dairy produce on account of the inactivity of the export market and the big supplies of butter and cheese offered. Cheese prices at country boards show a decline of ½c but wholesale prices are unchanged. Eggs are firmer and show an advance. The supply of new laid eggs is smaller and an export demand for storage eggs is springing up. Fish prices are steady and the supplies on the market are ample to meet requirements.

BUTTER MARKET IS QUIET

Montreal.

BUTTER.—The butter market is quiet with just a fair demand for domestic trade and little export. Offerings are larger and on the whole an easy feeling is evident but there is no change in quotations. There is a feeling in the trade that dairy produce will be comparatively easy this fall on account of the better feed conditions in the country. The farmers will be able to feed more dairy cattle than last year.

EGGS SHOW STRENGTH

Montreal.

EGGS.—The egg market is steadily gaining strength. The offerings of new laid eggs are smaller while the demand remains and the same is true of selects. The result is that these two grades are higher by one and two cents. At the same time there is a good export demand for storage eggs and in that grade there is also strength.

HOG PRICES LOWER

Montreal.

HOGS.—On account of increased offerings and less competition on the part of buyers the hog market has weakened and prices show a decline of 25c a hundred in this market. Select light weight hogs are now bringing from $12 to $12.25 a cwt., weighed off the cars, while heavyweights are quoted at around $11. There is a distinct weakness in the hog market and a further decline would not be surprising although the farmers are in a position to hold their hogs this year.

FISH PRICES STEADY

Montreal.

FISH.—The fish market is steady as far as prices are concerned, and with an improved demand there is more activity throughout the market. The supplies are fairly large since the fishing season on the whole has been good. There are no price changes.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Sept. 20.—There is almost a general easiness in produce markets this week, eggs and cheese being about the only exceptions. Both of these lines are higher, receipts of the former being of small volume, and storage supplies are being drawn upon to supply the demand. Cheese is higher. Butter is quoted lower this week. There is little export of butter at the present time. All pork products are down. Lard is half a cent lower, and new prices are also named on shortening. Smoked hams and cooked hams are showing lower levels. Poultry receipts are heavier, although prices are unchanged as compared with a week ago. Fish is in better demand.

CHEESE IS HIGHER

Toronto.

CHEESE.—The market for cheese has developed a stronger tone and some dealers are quoting higher prices this week. Large new cheese is quoted at from 19 to 19½c per lb., and September cheese is higher at from 23 to 24c per lb. Stiltons are 22c per lb.

LARD SHOWS DECLINE

Toronto.

LARD.—Easier prices on lard are quoted by wholesalers this week. Pork products are generally lower, and lard is reduced in sympathy with the prevailing feeling in the market for hogs and hog products. Dealers quote the 1 lb. prints at from 18 to 18½c and on the tierce basis at 15½c.

FRESH MEATS.—There is an improved inquiry for fresh meats this week. The position of the market for live hogs is towards easier levels, and this fact is reflected in both fresh and smoked meats. Fresh loins of pork are offered at 31 and 31½c per lb. Beef is steady, as is also veal and lamb.

HAMS ARE LOWER

Toronto.

PROVISIONS.—The market for provisions is ruling easy, and further declines are announced in smoked hams this week. Wholesalers are offering hams, 6 to 12 lbs. at from 27 to 28c per lb., medium hams from 12 to 20 lbs. at the same price, and large hams at from 22 to 23c per lb. The heavy hams are 20 to 21c per lb. Other lines are unchanged. There is a moderate inquiry for smoked meats but the easiness in the market for live hogs is responsible for lower levels on these meats.

COOKED MEATS ARE EASIER

Toronto.

COOKED MEATS.—A somewhat lessened demand together with easier prices prevailing in the live hog market is responsible for reductions in quotations on cooked meats. Boiled hams are quoted at from 41 to 43c per lb. and square pressed hams are selling at from 43 to 45c. Boiled shoulders are 37 to 38c. per lb.

advertising is backed up throughout this business. That shows complete understanding of the truth that the best advertising can only bring people to you. Thereafter, success depends on your handling. If clerks do not know what goods are being advertised, and they are not coached on selling those things—what chance has the advertising, or you?

I am sure you will not miss the splendid loyalty of this man to his old chief. Is not that in itself a measure of the man's own character? Can anyone be very successful in anything who has not some such streak of sterling honesty and reliableness in his makeup? Can you see wherein he lost anything by declining to shoulder out his old chief?

And see how the lack of such loyalty to their old and faithful servant cost all their profits to the co-operators. Here was a man who had labored for more than twenty years, had paid them ten per cent. dividends and piled up a handsome surplus. He had done this on the the pitiful wage of "one hundred per!" So close had he worked to his income that when he came to go into business, he "had not enough to buy a soap bubbl." But yes; he had! He had a record and reputation which enabled him to finance his new venture.

And the co-operators—they who had so sadly misinterpreted the word co-operation—what of them? They lost out, slick and clean.

I can add nothing more. I only ask that you read and re-read that letter, for it is a business epic. Verily it is the truth; "Price is not everything!"

Closed Season is Advised for the B.C. Fisheries

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 19.—A closed season in the British Columbia halibut and cod fisheries will be recommended to the Federal Government by the Parliamentary Commission which has just concluded an investigation of fisheries' conditions in this province. In an interview, Wm. Duff, M.P., chairman of the commission, indicates the commission is prepared to make such a recommendation.

The commission will also recommend, it is said, the creation of a separate portfolio and Department of Fisheries at Ottawa, assistance to white fishermen, with a view to making their occupation an all the year round one, and will suggest a curtailment of the number of licenses issued to Japanese.

Mr. Duff and L. H. Martel, M. P., the other Eastern member of the commission, left for Ottawa Saturday.

BIG MACKEREL SEASON FOR NORWAY

The close of the mackerel season on the Norwegian coast shows a total catch aggregating 9,261,000 pounds, as compared with 7,045,000 pounds last year and 6,192,000 pounds in 1920, according to a dispatch from Consul Ifft., Bergen. The heaviest catches were off Christiansand and the south coast where most of the mackerel for the United States are packed. The total value of the season's catch is estimated at about 2,000,000 crowns.

A manufacturer of candy wrote the man who makes kettles; "Ship at once complete Model 'S' Portable Fire Mixer." The credit man wired the customer: "We cannot ship your order until last shipment is paid for." The customer telegraphed: "Cancel the order. Cannot wait that long."

"How d'yer like yer new boss, Mame?" asked one stenographer of another on the elevated.

"Oh, he ain't so bad, only he's kind o' bigoted."

"What yer mean, bigoted?"

"He seems ter think that words can only be spelled in his way."

Boy (laying down parcel): "Mother's changed her mind; she doesn't want kidneys, she wants liver!"

Butcher: "What she wants, my boy, is brains!"

PERSIAN DATES WILL BE A HEAVY CROP

"The new crop of Persian dates will be very large," says a despatch. "The packing began in Basrah on the third of this month and is progressing rapidly. With Hallowi dates arriving a month earlier than last year and the country bare of stock, a very heavy sale is expected this fall, especially so as prices are going to open very much under those of last year. A small cargo of native packed dates is expected to arrive in New York early in November and it is believed prices are now being made by the owners of this cargo. Stocks of old Sayers are now exhausted."

THE "WANT" AD.

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life into one of the great necessities of the present day.

Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.

The "want ad." gets work for workers and workers for work.

It gets clerks for employers and finds employers for clerks. It brings together buyer and seller, and enables them to do business though they may be thousands of miles apart.

The "want ad." is the great force in the small affairs and incidents of daily life.

Constructive Suggestions

"Sealshipt Oysters"
In Glass Jars

Too frequently the intelligence of the consuming public is underestimated with the consequent loss to the merchant not only in volume of business but prestige.

It is a fundamental truth that a reasonable variety of food is necessary to the health of a civilized people. Oysters are particularly valuable as an APPETIZING VARIANT OF THE DIET.

Oysters are WITHOUT WASTE, EASILY DIGESTED, WHOLESOME, and PALATABLE as well as having substantial value in point of nutriment and it behooves the merchant to suggest foods that have such merit.

In addition oysters are a seasonable food and there has been a long period of non-supply which will emphasize the zest with which the consumer will take to them.

MACDONALD'S

The Tobacco with a heart

The Meaning of Tobacco VALUE

The reason why Macdonald's Tobacco is so overwhelmingly preferred by Canadian smokers is the same reason why it proves so attractive to the retailer. That reason is VALUE.

Value, to the smoker, means "More Tobacco for His Money"—to the retailer "More Money from His Tobacco." There really is more money in Macdonald's for the man who sells it—largely because there is more tobacco in Macdonald's for the man who buys it.

Ads that will not be ignored are insisting that you stock up on "The Tobacco with a Heart."

From both these places Messrs. James Robertson & Sons, of Paisley, Scotland, get their supplies of Bramble berries from which their famous Wild Bramble Jelly is made. There is no other so called Bramble Jelly on the market that can compare with Robertson's. It is the real article.

Mr. Grocer, be sure you order Robertson's Wild Bramble Jelly and take no substitutes. Shipments are now on the way from the new pack. Ask your Wholesale House for your requirements.

"Biscuits as They are Made in England"

ANNOUNCING THREE NEW

WESTON ENGLISH TYPE BISCUITS

Weston's English Type Biscuits have proven the equal in every way of the world-famed English lines, yet their price is but little higher than ordinary biscuits. "Meltos Cremes" and "Melt in your mouth," the first Weston English Biscuits to be introduced a short time ago, have already proven sensational sellers and fast repeaters.

Their wide spread popularity is bound to insure an instantly favorable reception for these three new delicious dainties.

"English Arrowroot"
"Custard Creams"
"Panto"

English Arrowroot a superior flavored biscuit with the original arrowroot flavor retained in an old English recipe. Panto Biscuits are thin and wafer like with the rich flavor of old-fashioned Scotch Shortbread. Custard Cremes are delicious creamy delicacies made from an English recipe.

All Weston English Biscuits are made in one of the most modern plants of its kind in Canada. You'll find them just a little better flavored, just a little faster sellers, and their profit margin is excellent.

Smyrna Dried Fruits Will be Scarce

Military Situation in the East Brings About Strong Position in Dried Fruits—Sultana Raisins and Figs Will be in Small Supply, and Grecian Currants and California Raisins Are Strengthened as a Result

TORONTO, Sept. 27.—"The destruction of Smyrna and the military situation in that district have upset all theories and calculations as to the probable course of dried fruit markets," Mr. Watt, of Watt and Scott, importers of foreign food products, Wellington Street, this city, told a representative of Canadian Grocer this week.

"The immediate effect of hostilities was the complete cessation of all business with Smyrna, which is the port of shipment for Turkish figs and Sultana raisins," Mr. Watt continued. "This occurring just at the commencement of the new season will prevent any figs or Sultana raisins except the very small quantities that got out before the end of August, reaching this market. The trade is consequently compelled to look to other sources for such fruits.

Effect on Grecian Currants

"The indirect effect is soon seen in other markets," Mr. Watt commented. "Currants of Greece which had already advanced very sharply on account of the restrictions on export by a 'retention' of 35 per cent. as compared with a former 20 per cent., immediately strengthened, and to-day's quotations show an advance from the August figures of 25s. per cwt. or 5 cents per pound."

Asked as to the situation in figs, Mr. Watt stated that this market was similarly affected, though not to the same extent in the other fig producing countries, to which the business was transferred.

The Valencia raisin market in Spain, owing to the withdrawal of the competition of the Turkish Sultana crop, has advanced 15s. per cwt.

European Markets Hard Hit

The effects generally on European markets being deprived of Sultana raisins are much greater than Canadian importers think, because the Turkish Sultana, the raisin used extensively by the baking trade, is of much less relative importance here than in Great Britain and some other countries where the Sultana raisin is the staple dried fruit of the trade.

The most important shipper of Sultana raisins and figs to this country is an old resident of Turkey, Mr. Watt told a representative of Canadian Grocer, but a French subject. A cable received from Athens states that he and his family are safe at that place, also that his office and stock are intact. He reports his departure from Athens last week for Smyrna to look after his interests there. But for Canadian and American markets nothing can be done in time for the holiday trade.

These Firms Suffer Severely

George G. Yorke, wholesale grocery broker, Portland Street and Queen Street West, Toronto, represents two firms that have suffered severely as a result of the conflict in Turkey. These firms are Joseph Travers & Sons, Ltd., London, England, and Leon Dracopoli & Co., Smyrna. Mr. Yorke has been advised that the plant and offices of the former concern in Smyrna have all been destroyed, and the representatives have escaped to the Isle of Patmos. Of the latter firm, both father and son have been killed and information received indicates that everything has been lost. Leon Dracopoli & Co., had been packing in Smyrna since 1900, and were looked upon as one of the biggest concerns of their kind.

"I think there is little chance of getting any dried fruits from Smyrna for some time," Mr. Yorke told a representative of Canadian Grocer. "There was a wonderful crop of Sultans and also of figs, but there seems little likelihood of securing supplies on this market, at any rate, not in time for the holiday trade. The result of this situation has been that Grecian concerns have withdrawn prices on currants, and quotations on California raisins and figs will likely go up."

Mr. Yorke advises buyers not to become panicky. The California crop, he states, is a heavy one, and the Greek crop is average. Then again he points out that when this trouble subsides there may be a lot of Sultana raisins and figs unmarketed, and which will then come out.

* * * *

Higher Prices on California Fruits

Montreal, Sept. 27.—(Special)—Local wholesale grocers and importers of dried fruits are agreed that the disaster to the crop of raisins and figs in Smyrna and the surrounding country will mean higher prices on figs and raisins coming from other parts, particularly those from California. A report from Fresno states that wholesale prices on figs and raisins grown in California were increased late last week.

Bleached Raisins Sold Out

Alex. McLeod, manager of the Sun Maid Raisin Co., Ltd., of Canada told Canadian Grocer representative that his company in the United States was entirely sold out of bleached raisins and that last week they were forced to turn down an order for 150,000 cases of sun bleached raisins for shipment to Europe. He also stated that the demand for export was this year heavier than the total demand from Canada and the United States together. On this line they had been forced to withdraw from the market and prices on other grades were advancing.

A Good Crop Insufficient

Although California has this year a good crop of raisins the supply is insufficient to meet the demand, in view of the fact that the world is short the crop expected from Smyrna. Up till a month or so ago America and Europe were looking for a big supply of raisins and figs with easy prices, but in recent weeks a large part of this supply has disappeared and prices have soared. To add to this, wholesalers and retailers all over the world have been holding off awaiting a lower price in view of the big crop, and now with the suddenness of an avalanche a huge demand for supplies has come down upon the few sources of supply.

Do Not Expect Shortage

While the market will be exceedingly strong and void of supplies in some particular grades, it is expected that in the main, Canadian wholesalers will have supplies of raisins sufficient to meet the moderate demands of their customers. Mr. McLeod stated that he was able to look after the wants of wholesalers in Montreal and district and that he did not expect a severe shortage.

There are supplies of figs from Spain now on their way to Monttreal and local brokers expect to be able to meet the local demand for cooking figs, but table figs will be short. California has some supplies but they will be insufficient to cover the demand. There is no doubt that the prices will be high. New York dealers are already seeking stocks in Montreal and endeavoring to corral all available stocks.

First and Probably Last Shipment of Smyrna Figs Arrive

Montreal.—The first shipment of this year's crop of Smyrna figs arrived in Montreal this week on the S. S. Cedric. It consisted of a few cases which were quickly picked up at 30c. a lb. There will be another shipment come to Boston in the course of the next week but these, too, have already been booked. Importers do not expect any other shipments this season and the prices are due to advance further. One importer expressed the opinion that the price would go as high as 45c. a lb. wholesale this fall. Currants have advanced also and are quoted now at 17½c., New York basis.

New Pack of Canned Tomatoes Should Retail 15c Per Tin

Montreal.—Armand Chaput, president of the Wholesale Grocers' Association of Canada and general manager of the wholesale grocery firm of L. Chaput Fils, Limited, Montreal, in conversation with Canadian Grocer representative stated that in his opinion the price on the new pack of tomatoes this year would be 15 or 20 cents a dozen lower than that of last year, being about $1.30 per dozen less 5c. He also stated that he had taken up the matter with canners and strongly advised them to set the price sufficiently low that the retailer may this year sell the 2½ tins at 15 cents. At this price, he explained, the demand should be greater and the canners, brokers, wholesalers and retailers would find little difficulty in marketing the whole pack and ending the year with a clean sheet if the price to the consumer is kept down. Mr. Chaput also stressed the importance of the co-operation of the retail grocery trade in bringing the prices down once the new quotations have been made.

"No Justification for 'Cuts' Being Made in Granulated Sugar"

Montreal.—The Atlantic Sugar Refineries this week took the initiative in another decline in the price of granulated sugar making the refiners' quotation $6.75 per 100 lbs., ex-store. Other cuts have been made to meet the competition and the sugar market is unnaturally weak.

Armand Chaput, president of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association, in discussing this question with a Canadian Grocer representative said: "There is no hope of stability in any of the grocery lines until erratic price cutting is eliminated. There is no justification for the cuts that have been and are now made in granulated sugar. The wholesale grocers must stand back of the refiners in maintaining the list price. This cutting only wrecks the confidence of the retail trade, not only in sugar but in many other lines. Not till the price of sugar is firm once more or there is an advance will the retail trade buy freely once more and have confidence in the market. Cutting not only in sugar but in any other line must be discontinued."

Maple Syrup and Maple Sugar Will Not Be Affected

Granby, Que., Sept. 25. (Special).—Maple syrup and maple sugar prices are advancing, with a shortage of the pure sugar on the market. Few dealers have any sugar to sell. The demand this year has been heavy both for the Canadian trade and for export. At the same time the production of this year was small and supplies were quickly exhausted.

Quality Particularly Good

C. P. Macdonald, president of the United Maple Products Ltd., Granby, informed Canadian Grocer representative that the quality of the sugar was this year particularly good although the run was small and for that reason, to some extent at least, the increased demand for home consumption may be attributed. The buyers of maple syrup and sugar had underestimated the home needs this year and permitted the export of such quantities that left an inadequate supply for the fall requirements. Now the price is advancing and in a wholesale way maple sugar is selling at 28c a pound.

U. S. A. Tariff Change

Speaking of the one cent advance in the U. S. A. tariff on maple sugar and maple syrup Mr. Macdonald said, "It will have little or no effect upon Canadian prices or sales. The United States must have our sugar and must pay the price and the tariff. Their own production does not begin to meet their requirements. Furthermore the four cent duty is just what was levied some years ago. At that time those industries which required Canadian maple sugar sought to have the duty wiped out entirely. It was therefore agreed that each year one cent would be subtracted from the duty until it was eliminated. In 1915 the tax was reduced to three cents and there it remained. The other subtractions were forgotten. Now, however, the one cent is replaced on the tax and once more the Americans must pay four cents duty on Canadian sugar. As far as I can see it will have no effect on this market, either in hurting sales or in advancing the price. The Americans will buy all we can spare them."

SHORT POSTAGE ON LETTERS FROM CANADA

In recent issues of the Commercial Intelligence Journal the attention of Canadian firms was directed to the fact that letters were being posted from Canada to addresses in the Straits Settlements and in the British West Indies with short postage. Douglas S. Cole, Acting Trade Commissioner in Glasgow, writing under date September 4, 1922, states that several Scottish and Irish correspondents of the Glasgow office have mentioned in their letters that Canadian firms are in the habit of sending their letters insufficiently stamped with 3 cents instead of 4 cents. It should be specially noted that the rate of postage from Canada to places within the British Empire is 4 cents for the first ounce, and 3 cents for each additional ounce or fraction of an ounce. The receipt of letters insufficiently stamped is inclined to create an unfavorable impression in the minds of the recipients overseas, and one that is prejudicial to the extension of Canadian export trade.

WINNIPEG R. M. A. AND EARLY CLOSING BY-LAW

Winnipeg, September 27.—A meeting of the early closing regulations committee was held the other night in the offices of the Retail Merchants' Association. The meeting considered the action of the city council in connection with the enforcement of the by-law, which was entirely satisfactory to the committee.

Minimum Weights in Poultry Shipments Are Now Reduced

Montreal. Sept. 27 (Special).—At a meeting in the offices of the Canadian Freight Association, Shaughnessy Building, to discuss with the Freight Classification Committee the proposed classification ratings on live poultry in the new Canadian freight classification No. 17, a reduction of 3,000 pounds in the minimum weight was granted and this now stands at 15,000 pounds with third-class rating for live poultry.

Among those present were, H. R. Gray, of Gunn & Langlois Co., Ltd., Montreal; G. R. Wilson, Poultry Promotors, New Brunswick; O. R. Jones, Poultry Promoters, Prince Edward Island: Geo. T. Seymour, Representing Producers of Prince Edward Island; W. A. Brown, Live Stock Branch, Ottawa; John S. Porter, Toronto; L. L. Cooke, Live Stock Branch, Ottawa; A. Raymond, Poultry Promotor, Quebec; R. Beauchamp, Manager Quebec Farmers' Central Co-operative.

This reduction in the minimum rate will have the tendency to ease market prices for this fall since there are large supplies of poultry ready for the market this year and the United States market is practically closed to Canadians on account of the increased tariff. Poultry dealers are anxious to encourage the farmers to ship live poultry to the big centres since in their opinion this class of poultry can be marketed more economically than the dressed poultry. H. R. Gray, manager of Gunn & Langlois, Ltd., Montreal, pointed out to a Canadian Grocer representative that when the farmers send in dressed poultry to the market there is a great variety of styles of dressing and no semblance of uniformity. Shipments by express are costly and increase the price at which the poultry must be sold on the market and therefore tend to cut down sales. Since the reduction in the minimum car rates has been granted it is also expected that for the same reason dressed poultry will be easier in price this fall. There is also a danger of shipped dressed poultry from country points to the city during the warm weather and losses through this mode of shipment tend to increase the cost of marketing. Local poultry dealers express satisfaction in the reduction granted by the Freight Classification Committee.

Proper Handling and Care of Potatoes in Retail Stores

Ottawa, Sept. 23. (Special).—Retail grocers and others having to do with the handling of potatoes will find much useful information in the following advice with respect to proper storage methods, contained in a recent bulletin by the Dominion Horticulturist:

"In the first place potatoes should be stored as far as possible in perfect darkness in a cool, well--ventilated cellar. Instead of heaping the potatoes against the wall slats should be nailed, a little apart, about six inches or more from the wall. A temporary floor should also be laid about a similar distance above the permanent floor with cracks between the boards. This plan will permit air to circulate under and through the pile.

"If large quantities have to be stored and the piles have to be made very large, square ventilators formed of slats and running from the top to the bottom of the heaps can be placed here and there, which, with the ventilation derived from the spaces below and at the sides, will keep the potatoes in far better condition than if they are packed solidly.

"Another plan for storing the tubers is to put them in large crates made from slats with small interstices between. The temperature is an important point. While every precaution should be taken against frost, the heat should not exceed from 33 to 35 degrees F.

"A further matter of importance is to provide some means of letting in cool air when spring is at hand to prevent sprouting. The best method is to let the cool air in at night and keep the cellar closed during the day."

Short Course for Export Managers in Universities

A short course for export managers will be given by Toronto University during the week of Jan. 15, 1923. The week following McGill University will give the same course for export managers in Montreal and eastern cities. These lectures will deal with geography, products and natural resources of different countries, trade routes, cycles and currents, trade news, international commercial laws and economics.

The idea was originated by the University Extension of Toronto University and is designed to help export managers of the various manufacturing and merchandising firms in Canada by establishing a short course in the subjects affecting their business, similar to the courses given in the past two years for journalists and for farmers.

If this course meets with the favor of those for whom it is instituted it is the intention of the two Canadian universities to continue the short course each year. The lectures will be given by prominent men well versed in the different topics pertaining to the subject of exportation and importation.

INCREASING TURNOVER BY HAVING A FISH DEPARTMENT

THE season having arrived when cooler weather can be expected, it is up to the retail grocer to "push" those lines that are seasonable, and for which your customers are looking. One of these is fish. At this time people begin to eat more fish, and the merchant who is devoting some of his sales effort to selling more fish will find it profitable. Oysters, as well as the fresh and smoked varieties, are good sellers, and a fish department, it will be found, can work in very well with groceries, to the benefit of both.

Canadian Grocer in the first issue in October will devote considerable space to articles dealing with what grocers have done in the way of selling fish. How sales have been built in this line, what methods are used to increase turnover, will be included, and will be found helpful to the retailer who seeks ways of achieving a greater revenue.

Other issues in October will feature articles of real merchandising value to the average retailer. A grocer doing an annual turnover of $26,000 in a small town finds he has lost money, and cannot tell where or how, but he thinks it has been wrong figuring of margins and not keeping expenses as low as possible. He has a number of problems that are worrying him, and no doubt some of them have at one time or another been your problems too. Henry Johnson Jr., whose articles are always appreciated by the trade, deals with them in an interesting article in an early October issue.

Proper Displays of Candy Mean Sales

Candy Cannot be Sold in Anything Like Its Proper Volume if it is Not Put Before the Public in the Right Way—Retail Selling Prices Should be Arrived at Systematically—Saturday Specials a Good Feature

THE week-end sale has grown to be a feature of the selling of candy in many stores and there are few merchants who do not make some kind of showing in this respect on Saturdays.

"Take Home a Box of Chocolates" is a piece of advice—a sort of reminder—that has proved to be quite a business getter, declared a grocer in Western Ontario to a representative of Canadian Grocer, when discussing the approaching Candy Day on October 12.

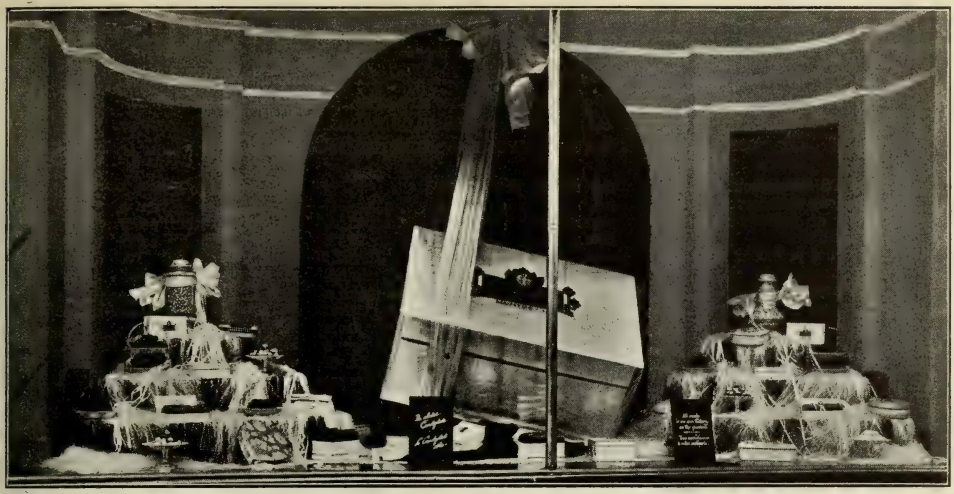
It is now the experience of many grocers that candy is one of the most profitable side-lines any grocer can carry. ed never fail to attract. Week-end sales ed never fail, to attract. Week-end sales are found splendid for business in candy. People will come from all around the town to take advantage of week-end candy specials and such a regular feature have these become with some merchants that complaint is made if they are dropped.

There are many methods that can be used in building up a candy trade department and there are many things that should be remembered, this merchant stated. First and foremost build up the candy department of his business to where it should be, must have proper fixtures and show cases in which to display his merchandise. Candy cannot be sold in anything like its proper volume unless it is displayed temptingly. Hence display cases, show cases, trays, jars, etc., all glass, are quite requisite.

Secondly, the location of the department in the store must be where the people congregate most.

The third requisite is the selection of the merchandise to be sold.

The bane of the candy business in the grocery store has been the promiscuous buying of goods on the basis of price instead of merit. The merchant should know value and buy nothing but meritorious pieces of merchandise. Until he knows values he should rely upon some good house to select his merchandise and maintain a quality standard for him, and the price question may well be left to be worked out afterwards.



Some retailers want too large a profit—larger than the public will stand for. This is a common error. Retail selling prices may be properly made according to the best experience obtainable in successful stores, by adding 60 per cent. to the cost of bulk goods, thus creating a 40 per cent. profit on the sale price, and 50 per cent. may be added to the cost of box goods, thus creating a 33 1-3 per cent. profit on the sale price to this class of stock. On "window specials" the profit may well be cut to 20 or 25 per cent.

To secure the custom of people who wish to spend but five and ten cents on candy, it is better, instead of giving them a half-pound of poor candy at ten cents, to give them a quarter-pound of good candy at the same price. In candy, quality comes before price. The average customer will better appreciate a delicious taste for several minutes. In some stores are found counters which have trays of various candies weighed out into ten-cent portions so that the customer can select and help himself. The person who has a particular liking for candy soon acquires a habit of running into the drug store, getting the favorite ten-cent bag of candy and departing on his business. This is an economical method of making many sales.

A grocer in Western Ontario with a well managed soda fountain does a good business in box candies, retailing from a dollar to three dollars a pound. On a fine night it is a common sight to see ten or twelve of the young fellows of the district in the store getting their weekly treat for their best girls. In this particular district it pays to feature the finer chocolates in fancy boxes. At the same time, a grocer in a place of similar size might very seldom have a call for a fancy box of chocolates; mixed candies of various kinds, individually chosen by the purchaser, might be more popular in that locality. Again, in many towns, large and small, throughout the country, a pound of candy in a paper bag is good enough for all but the extremely fastidious.

But the merchant must be sure that both the box and bulk candy are good and always fair in value for the money. Do not try to sell too cheaply.

How Should Profit be Computed?

Difference of Opinion on This Much Discussed Question is Brought About by the Assertion That the System of Computing on the Selling Price is All Wrong—Claim is Made That Profit Represents Difference Between Selling and Cost Prices.

MERCHANTS throughout Canada who have long since practised the computing of profit margin on the selling price and who distinguish between the terms "net profit" and "gross margin," will be more or less shocked to learn that what they have been doing is all wrong, according to "Better Business," published by the Canadian Credit Men's Association, Winnipeg.

Canadian Grocer takes a good deal of responsibility for the big change that has been brought about in the last ten or fifteen years in the method of computing profit margin. Our claim has been that the merchant must compute his profit on the selling price if he is going to make the net profit he expects he will make at the end of the year.

Here is what "Better Business" says in an editorial in the August issue of that publication:

"The profit on any article is the difference between its cost and its selling price. And the percentage of profit is the proportion between that profit and the cost.

"There is no use in trying to evade the issue or to 'educate the people' to believe that anything else is correct.

These terms have a definite, distinct, mathematical meaning and to give them any other meaning is to court disaster by arousing suspicion and distrust. Two and two make four: perhaps in abnormal conditions it should be five, but it is not, and not even a law to make it five would help—though some radical legislators have tried experiments of that sort.

"One of the factors that has brought about the present depression has been 'monkeying with the ten commandments and the multiplication table,' as Roger Babson puts it. And the chief piece of monkeying was when someone put over that argument that profit was what the dealer had over after he paid his expenses and that the percentage of profit should be figured on the selling price.

"The only reason a dealer is allowed profit is to pay the expenses of his business. If he had no expenses he would not be entitled to any profit. His expense includes a reasonable interest (per annum, not per amount of sales) on the money used in the business, a reasonable return to him for the service he gives the public and payment of legitimate charges in connection with that service. Any profit he makes over and above this must be brought about by greater production, or greater service, at less cost.

"The danger in charging profit on the selling price is that the selling price contains the expenses; naturally there is little tendency to cut expenses if one is to have a profit on them. And you go up against both the multiplication table and the commandments—for it is not right to make a profit on another's money, and that happens when you get a dollar from a man for an article and charge a profit on the whole dollar; part of that dollar is his money, you have no right to a profit on it.

"If you have one of those cards showing how to charge profits on the selling price, throw it away and get back to the actual mathematical multiplication table way of marking your profit. Surely the other plan has had a fair trial and has failed miserably as present conditions amply indicate. Let us get back to sanity and reason and see if normal times will not again return to the country."

More Will be Heard

So now it is up to all of us to go back again to where we came in the matter of figuring profits—that is, providing "Better Business" has presented the last word on the matter. It is not likely, however, that this shall be the case.

The idea that the "cost" of goods does not include the overhead expenses in selling them is one which will not be admitted without a stiff argument.

Too few merchants appreciate the significance of the terms, "profit" and "gross margin." They consider the two exactly the same, but there is a great deal of difference. "Profit" is undoubtedly what is left over after the article and all expenses have been paid. "Gross margin" is the difference between invoice cost and what is received for the goods.

Not Considered Good Business

Mathematically it is undoubtedly correct to figure the profit and gross magin on the cost. But in the retail business one does not know the exact cost and if he doesn't know it, how can he figure on it? He does know, however, his selling price. He knows that he should calculate his percentage of expense on the selling price.

If he figures his expenses on the selling price, then why should he not figure his net profit and gross margin on the same? If he does not he is going to be sadly out at the end of the year. As a matter of fact a merchant can calculate his margins on invoice cost and still be safe, but he is taking a bigger chance.

Canadian Grocer has received several letters dealing with the arguments of "Better Business." These have been turned over to Henry Johnson Jr. as Mr. Johnson has given a great deal of thought to this problem. Subscribers may look for his comments in an early issue.

Manufacturers and Retailers Together at Ottawa Fair

Ottawa.—Recognizing the value of intimate contact between manufacturers and retailers, the directors of the Central Canada Exhibition at Ottawa set aside a day at the fair to be known as "Merchants' and Manufacturers' Day." On this day, Sept. 12, a luncheon was given by the directors for representatives of the two branches of industry in whose honor the day had been set apart.

Retail Grocers Represented

The retail grocery trade of Ottawa was represented by B. G. Crabtree, who owns a grocery store at 333 Elgin St., and who is also a director of the exhibition. At this luncheon manufacturers and retailers gathered in an informal way for the definite purpose of becoming better acquainted with each other. Nothing was left undone to further this purpose. Col. F. M. Gaudet, C. M. G., member of the Hon. Advisory Council for Scientific Industrial Research, addressed the gathering on Canada's financial and industrial condition and outlook, a subject in which the speaker is well versed.

After the luncheon Mr. Crabtree turned to Canadian Grocer representative and said, "We have here to-day an illustration of a subject that cannot be stressed too much, particularly in connection with the grocery business. Closer relations between the manufacturer and the retailer are of utmost importance to both classes. It can be of particular advantage to the retail grocers and of no less advantage to the manufacturers. It puts a personal touch behind merchandising that is invaluable.

"It is that that puts the personality in business and adds to the interest in pushing particular products. Then too, it seems to me, that the manufacturer takes more interest in the retailer and his business when he too knows that retailer personally and through that link valuable co-operation between both is developed. I think that everything possible should be done to bring manufacturers and retailers together and a better understanding of each other's problems and schemes will result."

Percentage and How to Figure it

Percentage is a Standard of Comparison for Amounts, Just as a Thermometer is a Standard of Comparison for Temperature or an Inch, Foot or Yard is a Standard of Comparison for Lengths

By G. W. Hafner, Manager G. W. Hafner, Inc., Auditors and Industrial Engineers, Chicago

TRADITION says figures don't lie. Yet, the wrong interpretation of figures may throw the head of the business completely off the track. Mercantile agencies report that a large number of commercial failures are directly due to the proprietor's or manager's belief that the business is making a profit, when, as a matter of fact, it is running at a loss. And the reason for this is that, in at least the majority of cases, the business man has been deceived by the use of percentages in allowing for profits.

What is Percentage?

In using percentages as a tool to work with, we should have a clear understanding of what percentage is. Percentage is a standard of comparison for amounts, just as a thermometer is a standard of comparison for temperature, or an inch, foot or yard is a standard of comparison for lengths. The word "percentum" means 100 parts, or 100ths. Therefore, amounts are compared by per cent. or hundredths, as lengths are compared by inches and feet, and temperature by degrees.

Accordingly, one amount compares with another amount as each contains a less or a greater number of 100ths, in the same manner that one temperature compares with another temperature according as it contains a greater or less number of degrees, or that one length compares with another length as it contains a greater or less number of inches. It is seen from this that percentage is simply a means for measuring figures.

How To Find Percentages

In finding percentages, we always have a clearer view of the matter, if we put the figures in the shape of a fraction. Percentage, from the viewpoint of mathematics, is fundamentally nothing else but decimal fractions. You say that 50 is one-half of 100. That means that 50 is fifty one-hundredths or 50 per cent. of 100. Likewise, 20 is twenty one-hundredths or 20 per cent. of 100; and ten is 10 per cent.; and 5 is 5 per cent. The principle here is the same as that governing the change of common fractions into decimals, which is: "Divide the numerator by the denominator," or "divide the upper figure of a fraction by the lower."

To illustrate, let us assume that the annual sales of a certain business amount to $100,000.00, and that the annual expenses aggregate $25,000.00. What we want to determine, first, is what percentage of $100,000.00 is $25.000.00. To do this we put the figures in the shape of a fraction, and divide the upper figure by the lower, thus:

25,000
100,000)25,000.00(.25
20000.00
———
500000
———

We find, then, that the total yearly expenses of $25,000 represents 25 per cent. of the total yearly sales of $100,000. And we know from this that, in making up our selling prices, we must add 25 per cent. for expenses, plus whatever margin of profit we desire to make.

Why Anticipated Profits are Not Realized

This is all apparently simple enough. And yet it does not always work out just right, it seems. Let us see, then, what is it that tangles up so many of us in attempting to handle percentages.

For purposes of illustration let us take, first, the method of the business man who knows nothing about what his expenses are. He has perhaps heard some other man in the same trade or industry say that he figures to make 10 per cent. profit, and because that is what he thinks others are asking, he will figure something like this on a sale, which costs him, say, $20.00.

Cost of goods	$20.00
Add 10% of $20.00 for profit	2.00
Total	$22.00

He will probably mark the goods to sell for $25.00, thinking that the extra $3.00 will cover his overhead expense, and that he will make his 10% profit and perhaps a little over.

Let us see, now, what has really happened:

Cost of goods	$20.00
Expense, 25% (not of $20.00, but of $25.00, which will be explained later,	6.25
Total cost	$26.25
Sale price	25.00
Net loss	$ 1.25

or 5 per cent. of the selling price.

Next let us illustrate the method of the business man who knows, from last year's figures, that his expenses amount to 25 per cent. of his sales, but does not know how to apply that knowledge correctly.

Probably his estimate will show up like this:

Cost of goods	$20.00
Expenses, 25% of $20.00	5.00
Profit, 10% of $20.00	2.00
Total	$27.00

Let us see what has happened in his case:

Cost of goods	$20.00
Expenses 25% of $27.00 (instead of $20.00	6.75
Total	$26.75
Sale price	27.00
Net profit	$ 0.25

which is .926 per cent. (less than one per cent.) of the sale, and not ten per cent.

The difference between actual and anticipated profit, developed in the above illustrations, are due entirely to the fact that two different bases have been used in arriving at the results. In the first instance, the percentage of expense of 25 per cent. was arrived at by using the sales at selling prices. In the second instance, this percentage was applied to the sales at cost prices. This is the error too often made by business men.

Suppose the cost of a given article or commodity is $1.00, and a merchant wishes to add a margin of 33-1/3 per cent. to the seling price, how would he figure it? Adding 33-1/3 per cent. to the cost will not give the desired result, because:

33-1/3% of $1.00 equals 33-1/3 cents.

$1.00 plus 33-1/3 cents equals $1.33-1/3, or the selling price.

33-1/3 cents divided by $1.33-1/3 equals 25%.

Hence, instead of earning 33-1/3 per cent. on the selling price, as he had planned, the business man would actually earn 25 per cent. only, because different bases were used in the calculation.

The following table gives the equivalent percentage to be applied to cost prices in order to secure a given margin of profit on selling prices.

Rate for Figuring Percentages

Per Cent. on Selling Prices.	Per Cent. on Cost Prices.	Per Cent. on Selling Prices	Per Cent. on Cost Prices.
25	.333	38	.613
26	.351	39	.639
27	.370	40	.666
28	.390	41	.695
29	.410	42	.724
30	.430	43	.754
31	.450	44	.786
32	.471	45	.818
33	.493	46	.852
34	.515	47	.887
35	.538	48	.923
36	.563	49	.961
37	.587	50	1.00

In this matter of figuring percentages, the very first thing we must get a firm hold on is this:

Factors at Root of Improvement

THERE are several recent developments which would seem to lend justification to a feeling of optimism concerning the business outlook. Reports of the extent of Canada's Western crop this year indicate that a yield of over 370 million bushels is to be expected, an increase of ten million bushels over the bumper year of 1915. While this will give a larger total crop the yield per acre is not so high as the number of acres under cultivation has increased practically one third. This fact is in itself indication of the rapidity with which the arable land in Western Canada is being put under cultivation. In the interest of the farmers, who in many cases owe large bills to local retailers, it is to be hoped that this large crop will bring monetary return sufficient to reward them for the difficulties they have suffered in recent years. Some fear has been expressed that so urgent are the farmers' needs for money that the whole crop will have to be marketed in a hurry with consequent reduction in price.

That national revenues are improving in volume is indictated by the report of customs collections throughout Canada for last month. Toronto led with an increase of over a million dollars in customs and excise receipts. The Sales and Stamp taxes brought considerably increased revenue. The use of revenue department stamps on cheques, drafts, notes, etc., in place of the common usage of post office stamps, would allocate this excise revenue to the proper departments so that some intelligent knowledge would be had of the revenue producing ability of various branches of the mail service. Big gains in total income from these sources are reported from a great many cities, indicating that the improvement is general. It is not due solely to the increase in these impositions but in the broader movement of merchandise which is now taking place.

Waste Advertising Expenditures

THAT an association organ should be that only and not pretend to give service to advertisers is the important principle which has been adopted by the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World in regard to "Associated Advertising" which in future will not sell space. This decision by an organization of leading American financial, manufacturing, mercantile and other business concerns is a highly important one in the field of advertising and publicity.

Congratulations to the Associated Advertising Clubs in taking this stand are offered by Printers' Ink which points out that the Clubs "can now take a fearless stand in their opposition to nondescript mediums which are organized and conducted solely for the purpose of producing revenue and for which there is no real need in the field."

Particular emphasis is laid upon Trade Associations as offenders emphasis in this respect. We read:

Trade associations have been our greatest offender in this respect. Advertising-soliciting organs of this sort are started for many reasons, but generally with the hope that the revenue thus raised will help to defray the expenses of the Association. Thus the organization launches itself into a separate outside business about which it knows nothing and which it conducts merely as a side-line. The fact that in most cases these publications are money-losers does not deter others from trying to be the exception.

From the advertiser's standpoint, the greatest objection to nondescript mediums is that they subtly dissipate appropriations. In one guise or another, these mediums levy peremptorily on the advertiser's funds and thus exhaust appropriations, leaving the advertiser with the mission of his selling campaign unaccomplished. This is one of the most crying evils in advertising. The Clubs, and in fact every legitimate advertising interest, should join hands to stamp it out.

Advertising and the Selling Price

WHEN THE chairman of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce recently reviewed the state of trade he made the following interesting comment: "It is becoming a recognized fact that advertisements do not add to the selling price of an article, because overhead charges are reduced consequent on increase of sales."

This observation presupposes as a matter of course, that the advertising has been conducted in a thorough and systematic manner; that there has been concentration on the prospective field and that the advertising was used and developed as an active means to an end. Under these circumstances, the chairman merely gave utterance to what is coming to be regarded as part of the gospel of modern business.

The only kind of advertising that can be reliably applied in the offsetting of overhead charges is that which, on the whole, satisfies the management as to its merit as an indispensable adjunct of the sales force. A campaign may be made up of different phases. On the one hand, it may be more or less descriptive of the product and not overly solicitous as to sales. Then, relying upon the fact that through this medium the field should be well informed, the actual sales appeal is made and pushed to the limit.

It is all akin to the method employed in making individual sales, for advertising is, after all, nothing but salesmanship in print. Someone has said that "the best place to print an advertisement is on the wagging tongue of a satisfied customer," and that "salesmanship is the power to persuade plenty of people to pleasurably purchase your product, whether it be planers, punches, printing presses, pears, prunes or peanuts, at a profit." When it is so worked out advertising reduces the overhead and helps to stabilize the selling price. The chairman was right.

Food Products Stand First

RELIABLE statistics show that the annual value of the output of the food and kindred products manufactured in the United States is approximately $12,438,980,000. It is interesting to note that the value of this type of product exceeds that of any other. Iron and steel and their products come second with an output of $9,403,634,000.

No doubt the situation in Canada is similar, only our figures will naturally be considerably less.

It is estimated that the retail merchants in Canada who are subscribers to Canadian Grocer sell more than $100,000,000 worth of food and allied products a year. This represents a tremendous buying power and explains the operation of thousands of factories to turn out this vast amount of goods.

GEORGE A. MACDONALD

General Manager of the Quaker Oats Company, Peterborough, Ont., who has been elected president of the Canadian National Millers' Association.

Quaker Oats. Co. Mgr. is New President of Millers' Association

Montreal (Special)—George A. Macdonald, of the Quaker Oats Co., Peterborough, Ont., was named president of the Canadian National Millers' Association at their annual meeting last Friday, to succeed Brig. General A. E. Labelle who retires from office. J. E. Macfarlane, of the Western Canada Flour Mills Co., Ltd., becomes 1st vice-president; J. A. McDonald, of McDonald and Robb, Valleyfield, Que., 2nd vice-president, and F. C. Cornell, secretary.

The annual report of the Board of Directors showed a long list of activities carried out by the association on behalf of the milling industry, among the chief features of which was the association's consistent and determined opposition to the establishment of a wheat board. Successful efforts were also made in connection with the passing of the Enabling Act to have the millers properly protected in future sales of flour and purchases of wheat in case of wheat boards being established. The stamp tax and the question of ocean and railway freights had also the energetic attention of the executive.

Brig.-General Labelle, in introducing the Directors' report, referred to somewhat trying times through which the milling industry has passed in the last six months, declaring that some of the millers were themselves largely responsible for their troubles. He felt hopeful for the future, however, and saw no reason for pessimism.

The milling industry like many others had suffered through manipulations of the tariff, and he hoped that this was a question which would soon be divorced from party politics altogether.

The resignation of Maple Leaf Milling Co., from the association was laid before the meeting, and it was decided to postpone acceptance of their resignation until the new executive had had a chance to talk the matter over with them.

A change in the by-laws of the association was adopted, to enable the retiring vice-presidents, in future, to be ex-officio members of the board of directors over and above the statutary number of 15.

Board of Directors

The new board of directors was elected as follows: W. A. Black, Ogilvie Flour Mills; G. A. Gray, T. H. Taylor Co., Ltd., Chatham, Ont.; J. E. Hall, Vancouver Milling and Grain Co., Ltd.; C. R. Hunt, Hunt Bros. Ltd., London, Ont.; W. W. Hutchison, Lake of the Woods Milling Co.; G. A. Macdonald, Quaker Oats Co.; J. E. Macfarlane, Western Canada Flour Mills Co., Ltd.; J. A. McDonald, McDonald and Robb, Valleyfield, Que.; A. C. McLeod, McLeod Milling Co., Ltd., Stratford, Ont.; C. Ritz, Robin Hood Mills, Ltd.; R. A. Thompson, Lynden, Ont.; C. B. Watts, Dominion Millers' Association, Toronto, Ont.; W. B. Woods, Dominion Flour Mills, Ltd.

Other delegates present at the assembly were, W. B. Meyers, Peterboro Cereal Co., Ltd.; A. Shick, Shick and Snider, Ltd., Bridgeport, Ont.; N. C. Sylvester, W. C. Sylvester and Sons, Vankleek Hill, Ont.

Feeling seemed strong in favor of Winnipeg as the place for the next annual meeting, but it was decided during the meeting to hold a mail vote of the members of the association between now and July of next year, to arrive at a final decision on this point.

Canada Brokerage Co. Holds Their Annual Sales Conference

Toronto, September 18.—(Special).—The second annual sales conference of Canada Brokerage Co., Limited, was held here at the company's offices on Friday and Saturday of last week. Sixteen salesmen were in attendance, with the president F. W. Hudson, in the chair. Referring to the company's origin, he spoke of the progress that has been made since its first inception. The company was organized a number of years ago.

H. A. Beach, sales manager of the organization dealt with the subject of sales policies, the salesman's particular attitude and relation to clients in the matter of service. The importance of co-operating with customers was stressed. A. C. Pyke, secretary of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association was present. He spoke of the business outlook of the organization of which he is secretary and of the benefits of unity as exemplified in the wholesalers' association. The latter influenced both salesmen and retailers to the general good of all in the trade.

W. Drew Hudson, secretary-treasurer, read a paper on Credits and Accounting, outlining the company's policy in this regard. An interesting paper was that given by W. I. Hogarth on the subject of "Both sides of the fence as a retailer and a salesman." Mr. Hogarth was a retailer before joining the sales staff of Canada Brokerage Co. Ltd. He discussed the question of a relationship between retailer and travelling salesman in a practical way. Other speakers were C. L. Marshall of C. L. Marshall & Co., Howard T. Burton, John McBean, John R. Holden, and James Owen. A general discussion was participated in by all the salesmen.

On the evening of Friday, the company entertained at dinner, and on Saturday afternoon following a session in the morning at which general market conditions were taken up, the entire organization was taken on Mr. Hudson's yacht the "Arawa" for a sail to Frenchman's Bay. After a delightful trip the party landed and a baseball match was played between the sales and office staffs. A number of other athletic events was also run off. Supper was served on board the "Arawa" on the return trip.

To figure by per cent. intelligently we must have, somewhere, something that represents 100 per cent., which in this case is the SALE PRICE. When we attempt to figure any part of the whole as 100 per cent., we immediately get into difficulty. All component parts are measured as 100ths of this 100 per cent. Hence:

If expenses represent 25%
And profit represents 10%

We have accounted for 35%
And the cost of the goods must, therefore, represent 65%

Making the sale price 100%

In other words, the $20.00 cost of goods is 65 per cent. of the sale price, which sale price is represented by the total of 100 per cent.

In figuring percentages of this kind, the following rule must always be observed:

Divide the amount of the cost by the percentage it represents.

The answer will be the sale price.

$20.00 divided by 65% equals $30.77, which should be the selling price of the merchandise, provided the price paid for the goods is $20.00, expenses are 25% of the sales, and the dealer wishes to make a profit of 10 per cent. net.

How do we know this is correct? A method to be of any value must be susceptible to mathematical proof. Let us therefore prove the proposition thus:

Cost of goods	65% of	$30.77 equals	$20.00
Expenses	25% of	30.77 equals	7.69
Profit	10% of	30.77 equals	3.08
Total	100% of	$30.77 equals	$30.77

This method is absolutely correct, whether it is applied to a 50c sale or to a $500.00 sale.

The selling price is 100 per cent., or the whole. All component parts are represented by 100ths, or percentages of the whole. There is nothing in the entire equation that represents 100 per cent. except the selling price. Hence, all percentage computations should be based on the selling price.

Bake-Rite Ltd. Now Sell Groceries as Well as Pastry

Bake-Rite Ltd., manufacturers of bread and pastry, operating retail stores in Toronto, have branched out into the grocery trade, and now have five of their places stocked with grocery commodities. It is expected that in a short time all of the nine branches will be selling groceries, as well as bread, pastry, etc. F. J. Savage is the manager of Bake-Rite Ltd.

FIRE DESTROYS HOUSE AND LARGE STORE AT MULVIHILL

Mulvihill, Man., Sept. 27.—The large store building belonging to the Oatfield Developing and Trading company was completely destroyed by fire, a few days ago. Adjoining buildings had narrow escapes, several times catching fire. The men of the town organized a water-carrying brigade to fight the flames.

Western Canada Notes

T. J. Cox Commission Agency have moved from their former quarters and are now located at 288 Princess Street, Winnipeg.

H. P. Pennock & Co., Winnipeg, have been appointed the Prairie Province representatives for Maple Crispette Co., Ltd., Montreal.

N. M. Jackson, manager of The W. L. MacKenzie Company Limited, Calgary, Alta., was a business visitor to Winnipeg.

MacKenzie-Richardson Limited, manufacturers' agents, Winnipeg, have been appointed by The Match Company, Limited, Montreal, as their representatives from Port Arthur to the Rocky Mountains.

Arrangements are now being made to hold a special forum meeting of the Winnipeg Board of Trade, Oct. 5, in order to give Major Belcher, head of the British Empire Exhibition mission visiting Canada, and other members, who will be in the city on that day, an opportunity to outline the project of the exhibition which is to be held in London in 1924.

The destruction by fire of the top story of the building occupied by the W. J. Boyd Manufacturing Confectionery Company, Portage Avenue and Spence Street, Winnipeg, resulted in a loss of some $40,000, it is estimated. Insurance covers it. Of the damage done, $30,000 worth is for stock value alone. The cause is unknown. Repairs will be commenced as quickly as possible, Mr. Boyd states.

THRESHING AT SASKATOON IS SEVENTY PER CENT. COMPLETED

Saskatoon, Sask., Sept. 27.—Wheat threshing in Saskatoon district is 70 per cent. completed and the yield and quality are generally higher than expected, according to the weekly crop report for Saskatoon district. Weather during the past week was ideal for harvesting and threshing.

REDUCTION IN RATE FOR SHIPING EGGS IS ANNOUNCED

Winnipeg, Sept. 27—A saving of $50 a car, it is announced, will be effected as a result of special export rates on eggs in carload lots arranged for by the Canadian National railway. From Winnipeg the rate will be $1.24½ per cwt., with correspondingly reduced rates from points west. Western Canada eggs are assembled at points where cold storage is available and are shipped to Britain, largely through Montreal. To assist the movement the railway company has decided on the reduced rate with a minimum of 27 500 pounds from western points to Montreal.

Specialized Newspapers and C. N. E.

Address Delivered at Directors' Luncheon of Canadian National Exhibition on Press Day, August 31st, by Horace T. Hunter, Vice-President, Canadian National Newspapers and Periodicals Association

MR. PRESIDENT, directors and fellow publishers: You have heard from the Daily Newspaper Association, from the Weekly Newspaper Association, and I have been asked to speak for the Canadian National Newspapers and Periodicals Association, which might be termed the residuary legatee of the newspaper publishing business. It is not, however, an uncommon thing for the residuary legatee to get a very large part of an estate.

Over Three Million Subscribers

The extent and influence of publications represented by our Association are indicated by the following approximate statement of circulation:

Farm Papers	1,030,897
Magazines	1,065,307
Religious and Educational Papers	725,000
Business and Technical Newspapers	399,099
Total	3,220,303

On behalf of the Canadian National Newspapers and Periodicals Association, representing over three million subscribers, I wish to congratulate you on the success of this year's Exhibition. We know that it is not like Topsy, "just growed." It has been brought to the high state of perfection it occupies to-day by the shrewd and far-seeing policies of the directors and executive officers, and by their untiring energy in carrying out these policies.

You referred, Mr. President, to the old custom of subscribers to weekly newspapers sending in cord-wood to pay for subscriptions and suggested that some of this wood be sent to relieve fuel shortage in Toronto. Might I suggest that if there is still a shortage some of the "hot air" in the daily newspapers could be used to advantage. (Loud laughter).

Optimistic Outlook

It is easy to be optimistic about the Fair to-day; but there are many of us here to-day who can remember the difficulties that had to be overcome and the optimists of twenty-five years ago would probably be looked upon as the pessimists to-day. This situation reminds me of an old settler who was told that they were going to build a railroad right through the village in which he had lived for seventy years. He shook his head, however, and stated: "They'll never run it." The right of way was secured, the tracks were laid and finally a party came to him and told him to come down to the station, that the new train was there and was going to start off in an hour's time. The old settler went down, looked over the equipment and finally, as the train glided gracefully away, remarked: "They'll never stop it." This, Mr. President, must be the feeling of everyone to-day. Nothing will stop your progress.

Similar Aims and Interests

There are many points of similarity between the work of our Association and the Canadian National Exhibition. These form a strong bond of interest and sympathy between us.

Both are national. Our subscribers in the various provinces of the Dominion are the men and women you are most anxious to bring to the Exhibition. The fact that they are readers and subscribers of our papers is the proof that they are people of intelligence, students of business, interested in new methods and in learning of new goods. They are the people who will travel a hundred or a thousand miles when the opportunity offers to see an exhibition such as you have developed, and I congratulate you that these people are coming in increasing numbers each year.

The international aspect is also a common bond. You have an increasing number of visitors from foreign countries, thus creating a feeling of good-will with these countries, and helping our manufacturers to establish connections abroad. The same reason that brings business men from United States, Great Britain, West Indies, etc., also causes them to subscribe for our publications. These foreign subscriptions have become such a big factor with some of our publications that they are now issuing Export editions.

Educational Aspect Most Important

Then we are on common ground in educational work. I believe this Exhibition was started primarily for educational purposes and its great success is due to the fact that you have never allowed the amusement side to dominate. I believe the educational features should be given wider publicity. The individual exhibitors do a good deal in this connection but there is much to be done collectively. A few people would come to see a few exhibits of motor cars, but thousands will come when they know there will be seventy exhibitors representing probably seventy per cent. of the manufacturers who are seeking Canadian business. In our Association there is a publication for practically every line of business. These publications have told, year by year, the outstanding events of the Exhibition that would be of interest to their readers, and I think we can claim that this has been a factor in increasing interest and attendance of a very desirable class of people.

Influence of Business Press

I would like to quote briefly from an address delivered within the past year by His Honor, the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, who officially opened the Exhibition this year. Addressing the Canadian National Newspapers and Periodicals Association, His Honor said:

"I believe that the influence of the business press will be one of the most important factors in re-establishing business conditions in Canada on a safe and sane basis. I make a distinction between the business newspapers and the daily press because I believe that your papers—the business newspapers of Canada—exert a greater influence than the daily press because of the greater confidence your readers have in them. People read the daily newspapers to keep abreast of the general news of the day. They are interested in what is happening around them and they read to satisfy their desire for excitement or interest or entertainment. What they read in the daily newspapers to-day is forgotten to-morrow.

"But this is not the case with the business newspaper. Business men need the service of these papers in the conduct of their every-day business life. I have noted that they usually have a business paper or two in their pocket when they go home Saturday night. I do not say that they read them on Sunday, that I do not know, but I do know that they study them carefully and a great number of your readers will come to their business on Monday morning with some clippings from your paper in their pockets. They will say to their associates:

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THE feature of grocery markets this week is the continued weakness in the sugar market. On the Canadian market one refiner quoted sugar 25c lower on the basis of $6.75 per cwt. Montreal. Up to the time of going to press other refiners have not officially followed suit, but it is stated that competition is being met. During the past week Cuban raws sold down to 3c. c. & f. New York. Holders decline to sell at any lower price, being anxious to obtain advantage of the increased duty now prevailing in the United States. A lot of 5,000 bags was taken by U.S. dealers at 3c. c. & f. New York, equal to 4.77c duty paid. Refiners are not inclined to pay this price, thinking that the inbound basis should be lower to offset increase in duty. All U.S. refiners are quoting 6.25c f.o.b. New York less the usual 2 per cent., but what limited demand there is is being taken care of 10 to 25 points under refiners' basis. Canadian inquiry from first hands continues quiet. Such consumptive inquiry as there is is evidently being well taken care of by sugars from second and third hands procurable below refiners' basis.

The situation in the east has given strength to the dried fruit market, and raisins and currants are very firm. Dates are somewhat easier this week. New pack of tomatoes and corn are likely to be lower than last year, although prices are not yet officially announced. Canadian hand picked beans, new crop, are available this week and are lower than last year. Cereals are steady on spot, but easier prices are looked for. New Blue Rose rice is quoted easier in the south. Shipments are promised for late October and November. Teas continue to show strength. Coffees are firm. The spice market is active, with many lines in a very strong position. Stronger prices are quoted in some quarters on Manchurian shelled walnuts. Nuts are generally firm. Flour is steady, but millfeeds show a decline.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Sept. 28.—The feature of the grocery market is another cut in the price of sugar, made by one of the local refiners. The new price issued by this firm is $6.75 and while the others have not followed suit officially it is understood that they are meeting competition. This is not warranted by primary markets. The tea and coffee markets are firm with some improvement in the demand. Cereals are firm for spot stocks but lower prices are expected when the new crop reaches the mills. There is no change in the rice market. Raisins and currants are advanced and are in a strong position. The same is true of figs but dates are easier in price. There is no new feature in nuts. Spices are more active with a more settled condition in the United States. Peppers are easier. Molasses and corn syrups are firm with an improved demand. Low prices and a big supply of fresh vegetables feature the farmers' market. Peaches have been lower in price but are now advancing. Apples are also in abundance and prices are easy. The new price on canned tomatoes is to be announced this week.

COFFEE MARKET STEADY

LOWER PRICES ON TOMATOES

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—The canned goods market is quiet and firm for spot stocks but lower prices are expected on tomatoes this week. Quotations on the new pack are to be announced by the canners to-day. It is expected that these quotations will be 15 or 20 cents a dozen lower than the price of last year which was a $1.45 a dozen. At the present time canned tomatoes are quoted at $1.70 for spot stocks.

HIGHER PRICES ON RAISINS

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—A feature of the dried fruit market is the advancing prices on all raisins. California growers are taking advantage of the situation since there is a particularly heavy demand for their supplies and although there has been a good crop of raisins it is felt that the unexpected demand in Europe will so strengthen the market that prices will be advanced rapidly. Quotations on Smyrna raisins continue to advance and stocks are held at a premium. Figs are also strong and expected to go higher in price. Currants showed strength and in London have shown another advance. There has been no change as yet in local wholesale prices but an advance is expected in the next week. Dates are easier in price with big supplies offered. Dromedary package dates are reduced 50c. a case of 36.

LOWER PRICE ON SUGAR

Montreal.

SUGAR.—Another decline in sugar prices was registered early this week when one of the refiners quoted $6.75 as their list price. The other refiners have not officially followed but it is understood that they are meeting the competition. This reduction is not warranted by the state of the raw market which is firmer. Some wholesalers doubt the stability of the new price and expect an advance. There is no confidence in the market either in the wholesale or retail trade.

WEAKNESS IN PEPPERS

Montreal.

SPICES.—Weakness is noted in peppers and importers state that there is some anxiety on the part of Singapore dealers to liquidate stocks in view of the trouble in the Near East. This has a weakening influence on this market. United States brokers report that the market for spices is more active, less feverish and more stable, with marked and natural steadiness, following the signing of the new tariff with its higher import duties on spices, seeds, and herbs. Tapioca and turmeric are on the free list in the United States. On most lines the increase in the tariff amounts to one cent. This will strengthen up the local market since many lines of spices for the Canadian trade are brought through the United States market.

LOW PRICES ON APPLES

Montreal.

FRUIT.—Big supplies of peaches on the market brought the price down suddenly last week but quite as quickly have they advanced. The demand is improved and the market is now firmer. The feature of the market however is fall and winter apples which are now offered. Wealthys and Alexanders are selling at from $4 to $5 a barrel whereas at this time last year they were quoted at $7, which was the lowest point they reached. Fameuse apples will soon be on the market and growers claim that there is this year the best crop in a number of years. Most of them however have been already sold and are now awaiting the first heavy frost.

VEGETABLES LOWER

Montreal.

VEGETABLES.—During the past week Montreal has seen one of the largest vegetable markets in its history. Prices ran very low and red tomatoes were sold at as low a figure as 35 cents a box and green tomatoes at the same price. Cauliflowers were sold at 15 cents a head and golden bantam corn is still offered at 15 cents per dozen. Small cucumbers are being sold by the pail this year. The 2½ gallon size sells at $1.25. Egg plant and Boston lettuce are particularly low in price.

PRICES OF BEANS ARE LOWER

Toronto.

BEANS.—Prices on the new crop of beans are quoted this week, and these show a sharp reduction as compared with a year ago. Offerings are in plentiful supply and dealers are quoting Canadian hand picked and also the 1 lb. pickers at from $3 to $3.25 per bushel. California limas are quoted at from 11c. to 11½c. per lb.

SPOT COFFEE MARKET STEADY

Toronto.

COFFEES.—Advices from primary markets indicate an easier tendency in the coffee futures market. Reported sales of 750,000 bags of Santos and 250,000 bags of Rio Coffee by the Brazilian government to an American syndicate appear to be without foundation, and the market in New York at the week end was little affected by the report. The situation on spot is unchanged. Prices rule at firm levels, with little tendency in either direction.

CEREALS INCLINE TO WEAKNESS

Toronto.

CEREALS.—While no changes are announced in present quotations on cereals, the market is generally inclined to weakness. Buying by the retail trade is not in heavy volume but merely as immediate requirements dictate. Wholesalers are quoting rolled oats in bags of 90 lbs. at from $3.15 to $3.25 per bag. Oatmeal in bags of 98 lbs. is quoted at $3.75 each.

SOME CANNED LINES LOWER

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—Prices on the new crop of canned corn and tomatoes are not yet announced by the packers, but deliveries of new corn are being made, subject to a price to be named later. Old crop tomatoes still being offered at from $1.30 to $1.65 per doz. for 2½s. Peas are unchanged, with a quotation of $3 per doz. being asked for extra sifted peas, in very limited supply. The new crop of golden wax beans is quoted at a price showing little change as compared with the opening price last year, at from $2 to $2.10 per doz.

Prices on the new pack of plums are quoted and show sharp declines as compared with a year ago. The heavy crop of plums is responsible for much easier prices that will rule on the can-

BROOMS ADVANCED

Montreal.

MISCELLANEOUS.—Local wholesalers have quoted an advance of 50c. on brooms, making the price on four-cord brooms $5.50 and on five-cord $6.00. Other grades are advanced accordingly. Macdonald's cigarettes have been further reduced. The price for 500 10's is now $5.97.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Sept. 27.—The sugar market continues weak with one refiner quoting another decline of 25c per cwt., making the Toronto price $7.09. Selling, however, is reported under this figure from second and third hands. The demand from first hands is very quiet. Prices on the new crop of tomatoes and corn have not yet been announced by the packers but are expected any time now. Deliveries of new corn are being made, subject to the opening price to be announced. Prices on the new pack of canned plums are also out, and are much lower than a year ago. Firmer markets are ruling in currants, the situation in the East having somewhat stimulated values. Teas continue to show a sharp upward movement. New Blue Rose rice is quoted easier, the lowest opening price that has ruled for some time. Stronger prices are named on spot stocks of shelled walnuts, and supplies are said to be in limited volume.

DATES ARE LOWER

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—Lower prices are quoted this week on Dromedary dates, wholesalers quoting cases of 3 doz. at $6.95 each, and the smaller dates 14 doz. to the case, $3.75. Currants are firmer, the situation in the East stimulating values, Greek Filliatras, being quoted at from 15 to 15½c. per lb. and the Greek Patras at from 16½ to 17½c. per lb. Raisins continue to rule at fairly easy levels. Thompson's seedless, 25s. are offered at 14½c. per lb. Figs, natural bags, 30 lbs., are higher at 12½c. per lb. Lower prices prevail in the market for evaporated apples at 16 and 17c. per lb.

MANCHURIAN WALNUTS HIGHER

Toronto.

NUTS.—Stronger prices are named on Manchurian shelled walnuts this week at from 53 to 57c. per lb. Supplies of walnuts on this market, some importers state, are not heavy. New arrivals of French walnuts are not expected before December the first, and this date cannot be depended upon, shipments being very likely to arrive later. The walnut market on spot is very strong. New Jordan almonds should be available on this market in the next week. Prices will be much the same as have been ruling at from 70 to 75c. per lb. Peanuts in bags, unroasted, are 12½c. per lb. Cocoanut is very firm and some are quoting the strip and shredded cocoanut at an advance. Cocoanuts in the shell have advanced 50 per cent.

SPOT RICE IS EASIER

Toronto.

RICE.—Quotations on the new crop of Blue Rose rice in the south indicates a lower price than has been quoted for some time. A figure of 4¾c. per lb. is asked in the south, costing laid down in Toronto 6c. per lb. Shipments are due to arrive late October and November. Blue Rose fancy rice is quoted lower on spot at from 7¼ to 7¾c. per lb.

SUGAR CONTINUES WEAK

Toronto.

Sugar.—The sugar market continues weak, and one refiner has quoted another reduction of 25c. per cwt., Atlantic sugar quoting $6.75 per cwt. as the basis Montreal, the delivered price Toronto being $7.09. One disturbing factor out of the way in the United States sugar situation is the tariff question. An increased duty on Cuban sugars is now in effect on the other side, the rate of duty having been increased 16c. per cwt. During the past week Cuban sugar sold down to 3c. per lb. c. & f. New York. It is interesting to note that the duty on Cuban sugars coming into Canada is now lower than the duty on the same sugars going into the States. There is little domestic consumption from first hands, and such consumptive inquiry as there is is evidently being well taken care of by sugars from second and third hands, procurable below refiners' basis.

SPICES FIRM AND ACTIVE

Toronto.

SPICES.—There continues a very active inquiry for spices, with prices unchanged as compared with a week ago. The market for cloves is very strong, and stocks on spot are not heavy. Peppers at primary points show a tendency to advance, although spot quotations are steady. The demand for all kinds of spices is very brisk.

UPWARD TREND IN TEAS

Toronto.

TEAS.—All reports from primary markets of teas indicate a very strong situation. Ceylon teas the very strong, and advices from Calcutta show the market for Indias to be on a very high basis at the present time. The future in these Indias, it is stated, is obscure since so much depends on out-turn. The Java market is also very firm, and Japans have been climbing steadily. Third crop Japans have been very high in price, and most of them have been sold for home use. Spot teas are in smaller volume but prices are unchanged.

MILLFEEDS ARE LOWER

Toronto.

MILLFEEDS.—The market in millfeeds is lower this week. The fact that there is plenty of feed in the country is responsible for the easier situation. Bran is quoted a dollar per ton lower at $20.25, as is also shorts at $22.-25 per ton.

FRUITS CONTINUE EASY

Toronto.

FRUITS.—Domestic fruits such as peaches, plums and pears continue to arrive in abundance, and are priced at low levels. Large baskets of peaches are selling at from 50 to 60c. and the small ones at from 30 to 40c. Apples in the barrel are plentiful and range from $3.50 to $6.50 each according to variety and quality. Grapes are beginning to arrive more freely and are offered at from 40 to 50c. for the 6 qt. baskets.

VEGETABLES ARE PLENTIFUL

Toronto.

VEGETABLES.—The market for vegetables continues much the same as a week ago. Prices are for the most part unchanged. Potatoes are coming forward freely and are offered at 70 and 75c. per bag. New Brunswick potatoes are offered at higher prices on this market but dealers are not prepared to pay as high as 90c. per bag for them, at which figure they are quoted laid down in Toronto. With an abundance of Ontario potatoes available around 70c. the market here is not receptive to New Brunswick potatoes at the present time. Tomatoes continue to arrive freely and sell at 25 and 35c. for large baskets. Prices of most vegetables are steady with last week.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG.—In the markets for grocery commodities this week the feature is another decline in the price of sugar. Teas and coffees continue to show a strong position. Rice is also firm and spices are in good demand with prices showing strong levels. Cloves particularly show a tendency to advance and are reported scarce. Canned goods are moving in moderate volume and new prices on corn and tomatoes are expected shortly. Grecian currants have advanced due to the unsettled conditions in Greece. It is not likely that any more figs will reach this market for some time due to the war situation in the Balkan States. The feature of the fruit market has been the advance in quotations on California lemons. B. C. MacIntosh reds have arrived as well as cranberries. Vegetables are plentiful and prices are easy.

COFFEE IN STRONG POSITION

Winnipeg.

COFFEE.—There continues a firm undertone to the coffee market. Advices from primary markets indicate a general tendency to strength and while prices have not advanced on spot, quotations are firm at levels obtaining at present.

STARCH RULES STEADY

Winnipeg.

STARCH.—There is little change in the character of the starch market. The movement is confined to moderate quantities and prices are held steady.

CLOVES ARE SCARCE

Winnipeg.

SPICES.—Extreme scarcity of cloves is keeping prices high. Nutmegs are firmer and peppers continue steady.

TEAS CONTINUE FIRM

Winnipeg.

TEAS.—The tea market is still advancing and in fact all lines of teas are in a strong position and are showing higher levels. Quotations locally are unchanged because of supplies bought at the lower figures being available. No doubt with these teas cleared up the market is bound to advance.

CALIFORNIA LEMONS ADVANCE

Winnipeg.

FRUITS.—The feature of the fruit market this week has been the advance of California lemons to $12 per case. Isle of Pines grapefruit is slightly lower at $8.50 per case. Large quantities of Ontario peaches are arriving on the market and best quality are quoted at $1.25 per basket. Hyslop crabapples are selling in good quantities at $2.40 per case. The first shipment of B. C. MacIntosh Red apples has arrived and are meeting with a good demand at $2.-75 per box. Cranberries are now obtainable in half barrels at $8.

VEGETABLE PRICES EASY

Winnipeg.

VEGETABLES.—Large supplies of vegetables feature the market and prices are ruling easier. New potatoes are quoted at 55c. to 60c. per bushel. Local tomatoes are slightly easier and are quoted at 6c. to 6½c. per lb. Large quantities of local celery of splendid quality is finding ready sale at 7c. per lb. Sage and summer savory is in good demand at 40c. per doz. Green tomatoes are quoted at 2c. and pickling onions at 8c. per lb. Red cabbage is in good demand at $1.50 per doz.

SPECIALIZED NEWSPAPERS AND C. N. E.

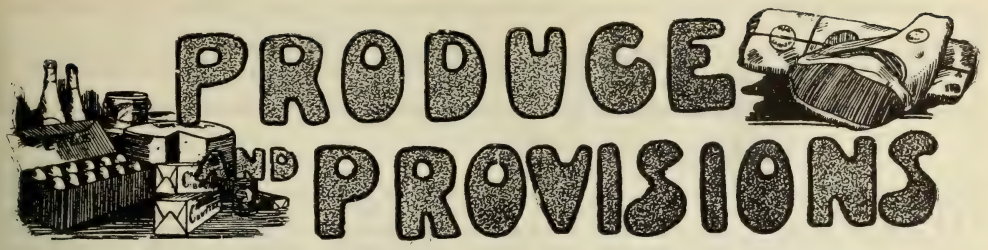
"This is the situation, I can show it to you in this clipping." For that reason, gentlemen, I say that yours is the greater obligation, because you are leaders, because you are helping to build up the business fabric of the country."



We appreciate the honor the C. N. E. has conferred on the Press in singling out a day in their honor. In a larger sense, however, every day is "Press Day" for some of the publishers in our association. Our publications are of such a varied nature and cover such diversified fields that in nearly every case there are one or more publications devoted to the industry that gives the day its name.

Now, I believe the directors are interested not merely in bringing the numbers but in bringing the men and women with a stake in the country—the responsible people, the people of large buying power. To put it in newspaper language, you are interested in class in circulation rather than in the mass circulation.

In every one of the lines mentioned above, our publications reach a large percentage of the best men and women engaged in the business, and reach them with publications that they have come to regard as their business associates.

I believe the big development of the future for the Canadian National Exhibition is to develop the exhibits of the various industries as units.

I can assure you the publications in our association will be very glad to cooperate with you, not only in organizing exhibitors and inducing them to guarantee the cost of the building, but in making the buildings a success after they are erected by bringing to the Exhibition the class of people these exhibitors want to reach. For, after all, the real success of an Exhibition does not consist in large buildings or elaborate exhibits but in the class of people who attend.

Says New U. S. Duty on Potatoes is Disastrous to Industry in New Brunswick

Representative of the New Brunswick Potato Exchange, Ltd., Declares That New England is the Market for These Potatoes—Business is Now at a Standstill

WOODSTOCK, N. B., Sept. 27. (Special)—Discussing the new Tariff Bill in the United States that has recently been passed, in its relation to the export of potatoes from this province, Harry Webb of the New Brunswick Potato Exchange Limited, told a representative of Canadian Grocer that the new duty of 50c. per cwt. on potatoes spells disaster to the New Brunswick potato industry.

"For the past twenty years," he said, "the potato industry here has gradually grown from nothing until to-day there are 70,000 acres under cultivation. The growers look to the United States for a market. New England being the natural market for our goods, we ship into New England, and within a radius of 700 miles we come in touch with millions of people that are consumers of potatoes. From here to Boston and to Montreal is about the same mileage. But between here and Boston there are scores of towns and cities into which we have shipped potatoes, whereas between here and Montreal there is no business except a small lot in Sherbrooke. Montreal is fed by Quebec province. We get in for just a small portion of the available business. Toronto, the next largest buyer of potatoes, is fed by Ontario and this province has an enormous crop of its own. This latter fact coupled with low freight rates freezes us out of Toronto. We are too far away. The freight is too heavy, being now after the latest reduction 43c. per cwt.

"We have always looked to New England for a market. Last year we had to contend with a duty of 42c. per cwt. With the duty now 50c. we are indeed in bad shape. At the present moment the potato business is at a standstill. We do not know what to do with them. The farmers are just harvesting half a crop and not nearly enough to pay for the fertilizer with which they grew them. As far as we can see this new tariff will have the effect of crippling this industry that has developed into a big business with the farmers of New Brunswick.

Some Exporting to West Indies

"It is true we do a little exporting to the West Indies, chiefly Cuba, but this will only take care of about one-fifth of the potatoes, and we are constantly in competition with the Southern States who can ship by rail all the way through Key West and give quicker deliveries. Buyers can purchase in car lots, whereas we have to get together a cargo of 12 to 20 thousand sacks at a time. Buyers hesitate to place orders for such large quantities at one time, preferring to buy a single carload even if they have to pay more money for it.

"The situation is very serious at the present time, and unless something happens to relieve it, we hesitate to think of what the result might be to this province."

Holdings of Butter, Cheese, Beef, Mutton And Lamb Show A Marked Increase

Food Commodities in Cold Storage on September First Show Considerable Gain Over the First of August—Pork and Poultry Holdings Show a Sharp Reduction, However

OTTAWA, Sept. 23. (Special).—According to a recent preliminary report of food commodities in cold storage and in process of cure on Sept. 1st, this year, prepared by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, the holdings of butter, cheese, beef, mutton and lamb were considerably in excess of those of the previous month. There was a marked reduction in pork and in poultry.

There were 23,540,873 pounds of creamery butter and 341,236 pounds of dairy butter in storage the first of September, as against 18,176,037 pounds of creamery butter and 551,650 pounds of dairy butter, the first of August. Cheese holdings were also heavier, there being 21,127,723 pounds as compared with 16,707,234 pounds on the first of August. Oleomargarine holdings were about 10,000 pounds less than the previous month, the total for September 1st being 112,932 pounds.

Little Difference in Eggs

There was not a great deal of difference in the amount of eggs in storage on the respective comparative dates. On the first of August there were 18,178,970 dozen and on Sept. 1st there were 17,997,338 dozen.

Lard holdings amounted to 1,606,295 pounds on Sept 1st, and 2,723,600 pounds on August 1st. The total quantity of beef on hand the first of September was 10,288,130 pounds as against 8,475,916 pounds the first of August.

On the other hand pork holdings registered a reduction, the total for the first of September being 23,931,445 pounds, compared with 27,067,242 pounds the beginning of the previous month.

There were 766,188 pounds of mutton and lamb in storage on the more recent date compared with 488,771 pounds the first of August.

Poultry in Storage

The following were the quantities of poultry in storage on the respective dates: broilers, August, 105,920 pounds; September, 80,393 pounds; chickens, August, 226,880 pounds; September, 83,036 pounds; fowl, August, 184,154 pounds; September, 118,737 pounds; ducks, August, 47,684 pounds; September, 46,779 pounds; geese, August, 84,934 pounds; September, 83,438 pounds; turkeys, August, 191,849 pounds; September, 174,375 pounds; unclassified, August, 141,380 pounds; September, 113,729 pounds; total, August, 982,801 pounds; September, 700,487 pounds.

Fish holdings were considerably greater on September first than at the beginning of the previous month, the figures being, September 18,454,283 pounds; August, 15,761,928 pounds.

Other commodities were as follows:

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Sept. 28.—There is an improved tone to the produce and provision market although in some lines there is distinct weakness. Hogs are again reduced in price and as a result there is weakness in smoked meats and lower prices in cooked meats. The falling off in the demand for those lines, however, is mainly responsible for the reductions and the ease in the market. Eggs are higher in price, at least for the new laids and the selects. The butter market shows weakness on account of accumulating stocks and inactivity in export. Cheese, however, is the reverse. Prices are advanced and receipts are smaller. Lard prices are unchanged. There is an increased demand for fresh salmon on account of the comparatively lower prices. Halibut, however, is higher in price. There is a good supply of this year's salt herring and cod on the market. Oysters are being featured with the colder weather.

WEAKNESS IN BUTTER

Montreal.

BUTTER.—There is little change in the butter prices, but there is weakness caused by the inactivity of the export market. Some wholesale prices have been adjusted during the past week since they were found to be a little high in comparison with competitive quotations. The local demand for creamery butter is good and the trade has shown improvement, but real strength in the market is lacking through the refusal of English buyers to purchase here at present quotations. Local receipts show an increase and the supply of creamery butter on the market is good.

FRESH EGGS HIGHER

Montreal.

EGGS.—With the falling off in the production of eggs comes a higher price on new laid eggs and specials. There is also an advance in the price of selects since they are in greater demand on account of the high prices on new laids. Selects are now quoted at 48c. a doz. and new laids are advanced 2c. to 42c. a doz.

LARD PRICES STEADY

Montreal.

LARD.—The domestic market for lard is steady with a fair amount of business passing, pure lard in tierces selling from 15½ to 16½ cents per pound and in bricks at from 18c. to 19c. a lb.

COOKED HAMS EASIER

Montreal.

COOKED MEATS.—For the same reason that smoked meats are easier cooked hams show a decline since the falling off in the demand is more pronounced in this line. Cooked hams are now quoted at 42c. and sandwich hams at from 47c. to 49c. a lb.

SMOKED MEATS UNCHANGED

Montreal.

SMOKED MEATS.—There is no actual change in the market for smoked meats but the undertone is easy on account of the lower prices paid for hogs and the falling off in the consumption. Consequently a readjustment in prices is expected in the near future. The sudden change in the weather should hasten that change.

BETTER DEMAND FOR POULTRY

POULTRY.—Local dealers report a better demand for poultry and a big supply is expected for this fall and winter. Low feed prices are encouraging the raising of poultry. The reduced minimum weights in freight shipments is expected to ease marketing costs also.

Montreal.

FRESH MEATS.—The hog market continues weak and prices at all leading centres are lower than a week ago. The Montreal market closed 50 cents per hundred pounds lower with quotations on select light weights, weighed off cars from $11.75 up to $12 a hundred. Fresh killed hogs are selling at 18½ cents per pound. The beef market is steady and no changes are recorded.

BIG DEMAND FOR SALMON

Montreal.

FISH.—Fish dealers state that the demand for fresh salmon has this year surpassed that of the last three or four years since the prices are easier. Owing to bad weather on the fishing grounds a higher price is quoted on fresh halibut. The first arrivals of salted Labrador herring and cod are on the market and the quality is said to be particularly fine this year.

CHEESE PRICES HIGHER

Montreal.

CHEESE.—There is a firmer tone to the cheese market and spot stocks are smaller than those of last year. The receipts of cheese in Montreal for the week ending September 23rd, 1922, were 45,755 boxes which shows a decrease of 2 675 boxes as compared with the previous weeks and a decrease of 16,880 boxes with the same week of last year, while the total receipts from May 1st to date have been 340 425 boxes more than for the same period of 1921. During the past week there has been quite a change in the condition of the cheese market which was attributed to the increased demand from all sources for supplies and a steady falling off in the make in Canada as compared with last year. Producers realize that there is more money in butter than in cheese and therefore they are turning their attention in that direction. American buyers are also in this market and they have stimulated buying with the result that prices show an advance. Coupled with this there is more activity in England and an increased demand for cheese. Reports state that like conditions exist in Australia and New Zealand and that in those countries makers are turning their attention towards butter with the result that the production of cheese is smaller than that of last year. A strong tone is evident in the cheese market and further advances would not be surprising.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Sept. 27.—Changes in the produce markets this week are not numerous. Prices for the most part are steady. Butter holds at last week's levels as also does cheese. There is a very good inquiry for these products at these quotations. Eggs show a stronger position, receipts being very light, and prices have advanced accordingly. The tendency in the market for live hogs is still towards lower levels, and packers are only quoting $11.75 per cwt. on the fed and watered basis this week. Pork products are ruling at easy levels. Fish is selling in greater volume. Receipts of poultry are heavier, but the demand is good.

BUTTER SHOWS NO CHANGE

Toronto.

BUTTER.—No change is reported in the market for butter this week. The demand for export account is not heavy, but there is the usual volume of selling for domestic consumption. No. 1 creamery prints are quoted at from 38 to 40c per lb., and creamery prints No. 2 are 35 and 37c per lb.

FRESH MEATS ARE STEADY

Toronto.

FRESH MEATS.—The market for live hogs again shows easiness this week, and packers only paid $11.75 per cwt. on the fed and watered basis. Fresh cuts of pork are also inclined to easiness, although dealers report a much better demand. Fresh beef, veal and lamb is also steady. Prices on the whole show no change as compared with a week ago.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG.—The feature of the produce markets is the tendency to higher levels in quotations on live hogs. Higher prices are now ruling. The butter market is showing a firmer tone and an advance is expected shortly. Reports from the East state that cheese is showing a firmer tone but so far local dealers have not advanced their prices. Egg receipts are dropping off and the market is ruling firm. Cooked and smoked ham are slightly easier. Spring chickens are arriving and the market is showing a firmer tone. Dealers state that there is an improvement in the demand for fish.

BUTTER MARKET STRONGER

Winnipeg.

OKANAGAN IS SHIPPING OVER FIVE THOUSAND CARS OF FRUIT

Victoria, B. C., Sept. 27.—Okanagan this season is shipping between five and six thousand freight carloads of fruit, according to Dr. K. C. MacDonald, M. L. A. for North Okanagan, who is at the parliament buildings to-day conferring with Premier Oliver and other members of the government on government business for his constituency.

The only thing the Okanagan producers are now worrying about is what they will be able to get for their record crop, he declared.

BEST MACKEREL FISHING SINCE 1909 and 1910

Mackerel fishing on the west coast of Norway is the best known since 1909 and 1910. The fish are of unusually good quality, and a great part of the catch is being packed for export to this country, according to Consul Ifft, Bergen, Norway. The season's catch to August 1 is about 6,540 tons, as compared with a catch of 4,137 tons for the entire season of 1921.

PRODUCED 247,867 METRIC TONS OF PEANUTS IN 1921

Some $25,690,283 worth of peanuts—245,867 metric tons of them—is Senegal's 1921 record, says Consul Yerby, Dakar, Senegal, in a report to the Department of Commerce. In 1920 this French-African colony produced 239,195 metric tons, valued at $45,686,874. Gambia, Britain's West African colony, last year produced 59,175 metric tons, valued at $3,060,232, compared with 85,190 tons, worth $11,670,829 in 1920.

To Holders of Five-Year $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. Canada's Victory Bonds

Issued in 1917 and Maturing 1st December, 1922

CONVERSION PROPOSALS

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers to holders of these bonds who desire to continue their investment in Dominion of Canada securities the privilege of exchanging the maturing bonds for new bonds bearing 5½ per cent. interest, payable half yearly, of either of the following classes:—

(a) Five year bonds, dated 1st November, 1922, to mature 1st November, 1927.

(b) Ten year bonds, dated 1st November, 1922, to mature 1st November, 1932.

While the maturing bonds will carry interest to 1st December, 1922, the new bonds will commence to earn interest from 1st November, 1922, GIVING A BONUS OF A FULL MONTH'S INTEREST TO THOSE AVAILING THEMSELVES OF THE CONVERSION PRIVILEGE.

This offer is made to holders of the maturing bonds and is not open to other investors. The bonds to be issued under this proposal will be substantially of the same character as those which are maturing, except that the exemption from taxation does not apply to the new issue.

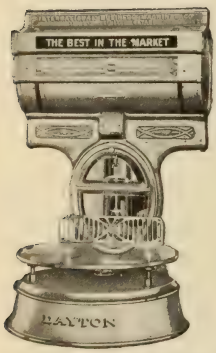
Dated at Ottawa, 8th August, 1922.

Holders of the maturing bonds who wish to avail themselves of this conversion privilege should take their bonds AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE, BUT NOT LATER THAN SEPTEMBER 30th, to a Branch of any Chartered Bank in Canada and receive in exchange an official receipt for the bonds surrendered, containing an undertaking to deliver the corresponding bonds of the new issue.

Holders of maturing fully registered bonds, interest payable by cheque from Ottawa, will receive their December 1 interest cheque as usual. Holders of coupon bonds will detach and retain the last unmatured coupon before surrendering the bond itself for conversion purposes.

The surrendered bonds will be forwarded by banks to the Minister of Finance at Ottawa, where they will be exchanged for bonds of the new issue, in fully registered, or coupon registered or coupon bearer form carrying interest payable 1st May and 1st November of each year of the duration of the loan, the first interest payment accruing and payable 1st May, 1923. Bonds of the new issue will be sent to the banks for delivery immediately after the receipt of the surrendered bonds.

The bonds of the maturing issue which are not converted under this proposal will be paid off in cash on the 1st December, 1922.



W. S. FIELDING,
Minister of Finance.

Quaker Talks

This is the Month to "Cash In"

THIS IS THE MONTH when the great majority of people get back to oatmeal as a daily food.

THIS IS THE MONTH when our big Fall advertising campaign for Quaker Oats gets into full swing in every large newspaper from Halifax to Vancouver.

THIS IS THE MONTH when you can start to "cash in" on the many thousands of dollars we are spending in advertising—when you can get quick turnover and bigger profits.

THIS IS THE MONTH when you cannot afford to keep Quaker Oats out of the spotlight—the month when other stores will be pushing "Quaker" out in front in their window displays, on their shelves, on their counters—the month when you should do the same thing.

THIS IS THE MONTH when you cannot afford to be without a good stock of Quaker Oats—the month when your customers will want "Quaker"—the month when you cannot afford to let one of them go away to some other store for Quaker Oats.

THIS IS THE MONTH to make yours known as a "Quaker Oats" store.

Any wholesaler or jobber will give you immediate delivery. Act today.

Oysters enjoy the favor of the consuming public, not on account of price, but through their appeal as a palatable food that has an appreciable food value. Oysters are eaten largely for the joy they give.

Price alone never sold oysters and never will.

Prompted by such knowledge we have confined our operations to the very best Northern grown oysters produced with very satisfactory results.

You are anxious to build on a strong foundation. In dealing with us you have the many benefits of trading with an exclusive oyster house. We give our entire time and ability to the one thing we know best.

Should Study Market Conditions

Grocers Should Keep in Touch With Influences Bearing on Prices —October and November Promise to be Active Months—Interest and Co-operation of Clerks Gained by Discussion of Markets and Price Changes

By Staff Correspondent Canadian Grocer

OCTOBER and November promise to be exceedingly interesting and active for the grocery trade but at the same time they will be most exacting for the grocer who makes his business a real study and for this grocer the next three months will be full of opportunity.

There is apparently no one in the grocery trade, at least among those with whom the writer is in touch, who will deny that the prospects are bright for the fall and winter. Everywhere one hears reports of more activity and more interest but still withal there is a feeling of caution and an enthusiasm that is tempered with restraint. While the atmosphere is better through the promise of better things actual conditions seem to be awaiting the proof. Yet there is undeniably more vitality behind the business, both wholesale and retail.

A Knowledge of Conditions

In view of this there will be no greater asset for the retail grocer than an accurate knowledge of market conditions in the different branches of the trade, the internal and external influences bearing upon those markets and the tendency of prices. In the past months buying has been limited. In many markets confidence has been almost entirely lacking and retailers have been carrying as small stocks as would be sufficient to carry their trade. These conditions have neither been invigorating nor profitable. Now if the trade should develop what is promised for it, it is almost certain that buying will take on larger proportions and therefore even the smallest fluctuations in market values will have an important bearing on the retail trade.

Following Market Reports

Not only is it a great advantage for a retailer to know what influences bear upon a market and how these influences work, but their study lends an interest and a fascination to the whole grocery business and when passed on to the clerks develops co-operation and efficiency. A grocer can lose nothing by discussing market conditions and business problems with his clerks.

Changes which have been most unexpected and perplexing to the grocer in the past may be made to give that interest in buying and selling which will stimulate sales. One of the most interesting features of the market today is sugar and at least it is the pivot about which many other grocery lines swing. Its course has been most elusive in the last three months and only a definite knowledge of the factors which have brought about recent changes will give any inkling of what the future holds. Far off influences often have a decided bearing on local prices and still in watching for these, nearby, in fact local influences, bring most unexpected changes. In truth this is what has occurred in the sugar market. Raw sugar is higher this week. Refined sugars in the United States, are in better demand. The Canadian sugar market, however, continues weak.

Developments in Coffee

Coffee also promises something which cannot be accurately forecast. Confusing and contradictory reports are abroad and only constant watching of developments can keep the grocer prepared for what may come. Much now depends upon the success of Brazil's effort to keep the price up. Then, too, as a result of the better fruit and vegetable crops, many lines of canned goods show lower prices. The opening price may not be the lowest point it will reach and yet, on account of particularly heavy requirements resulting from depleted stocks carried by the trade, there may be a greater demand than was at first expected and prices may strengthen up. Then, too, the raisin and dried fruit market has furnished a surprise as a result of conditions in the Near East and prices in many lines are advancing rapidly.

Ready to Seize Opportunity

Preparedness, therefore, is the only means of putting the grocery business on a sure and sound footing. To be forewarned is to be forearmed and the grocer who is acquainted with market conditions can pretty well determine the course of prices and arrange his buying and selling accordingly.

Opening Prices on Tomatoes and Corn Show Sharp Declines

Quotations Are Considerably Lower Than a Year Ago—Tomatoes Are 22½c Per Doz. Lower and Corn 12½c.

OPENING prices on the new pack of corn and tomatoes show sharp reductions as compared with corresponding values a year ago. Canned corn, twos, shows a reduction of 12½c. per doz. and canned tomatoes, twos, and twos and a half, are lower to the extent of 22½c. per doz. Tomatoes, tens, are 60c. per doz. lower. The following are the quotations, to the retail trade, f. o. b. factory, corn, twos, $1.25 per doz., Golden Bantam, twos, $1.80 per doz., 2½s, corn-on-the-cob Golden Bantam, $2.39 per doz., corn-on-the-cob, tens $6.55 per doz., tomatoes twos, $1.14 per doz., tomatoes twos and a half, $1.48 per doz., and tomatoes tens, $5.30 per doz.

The pack of tomatoes and corn this year, it is learned, is not as heavy as one might have thought. As a matter of fact, an analysis of the pack for the past three years shows that the tomato pack in 1922 is only 60 per cent. of the average of the previous three years, and the corn pack is 70 per cent. of the average of the previous three years.

In the canned fruits, Bartlett pears are offered at a reduction of 55c. per doz. as compared with last year, this year's quotation to the retail trade f. o. b. factory being $2.58 per doz. Yellow peaches, in heavy syrup, twos, are $2.58 per doz. f. o. b. factory, also a decline of 55c. per doz. as compared with last year.

"Unity Among Members of Wholesalers' Guild Only as Regards Sentiment"

Member of the Montreal Guild Makes Some Pointed Criticism of the Wholesalers' Organization in That City

MONTREAL (Special).—"It is something of a case of the tail wagging the dog," said one of the members of the Wholesale Grocers' Guild of Montreal, to a Canadian Grocer representative when asked about the condition of that Association and its functioning. "It is hopeless to expect such an organization to wield its influence over the trade when it has no means of enforcing its rulings or of chastising those who do not abide by the decisions of the majority of the members. As a social club or a friendly gathering it might be a success, but I fail to see how it can bring unity among its members when it has no real power in itself," he concluded.

Has Little Influence

Judging by the consensus of opinion among the wholesale grocers of the city, there is unity among the members of the Wholesale Grocers' Guild as far as sentiment is concerned, but there the influence of the association ceases. The last meeting of the association was held about a month ago and apparently all things were working well at the time, but as one wholesale grocer said, "An hour after the meeting the whole thing is forgotten. There must be some real force to bind the members of the Guild together if it is to have any power."

Dissension Among Members

Those who have the best interests of the wholesale grocery trade at heart admit that petty jealousy and suspicion is undermining the workings of the institution and it will never be on its old firm basis again until each of its members has implicit trust in the others. Price cutting is the chief grievance in the trade and each wholesaler looks upon the work of the other with suspicion. Some claim that the manufacturers hold the whip handle and that they can best bring the members of the association into line for the betterment of the whole grocery trade, both wholesale and retail. It is freely admitted that the retailer must have confidence in the markets before he will feel free to buy as he used to and when there is little or no confidence among the wholesalers it can hardly be expected to exist in the retail trade.

New Regulations Food and Drug Act Now in Effect

The following regulations have been added to the Food and Drugs Act, 1920, and are of interest to the grocery trade:

Section 5 (f) of the Food and Drugs Act, 1920, requires that sealed packages of food shall bear a correct statement of weight, measure or count except standard size containers under the Meat and Canned Foods Act, and packages under 2 ozs. gross weight.

The Weights and Measures Act, Chapter 52, R. S. C. 1906, makes the Imperial measure the legal measure for Canada, and also provides that the metric system may be used.

The attention of this Department has been drawn to the fact that most of the Olive Oil imported and offered for sale in Canada is put up and marked as containing one gallon or fractions thereof. On investigation it was found that this statement refers to Wine measure, which is not legal in Canada under the Weights and Measures Act.

Such statement of measure is deemed to be misbranding under the Food and Drugs Act, as the wine gallon is approximately only five-sixths of the Imperial gallon, and the correct statement of measure of contents is thereby not given to the public.

Notice is hereby given that, in future, shipments of all such goods shall be refused entry into Canada, unless marked as follows:—

(a) In fluid measure, i. e. 128 ozs., 64 ozs., 32 ozs., or

(b) In litres or fractions thereof, or

(c) As five-sixths gallon, multiples or fractions thereof.

Canadian Bakers' Convention Being Held This Week

Toronto, Oct. 4 (Special).—The Canadian Bakers' Convention opened here this morning in the King Edward Hotel, with a large representation of the trade in attendance. Following the presentation of the president's, secretary's and treasurer's reports, an address of welcome was extended by Mayor Maguire of this city. Speakers on the first day included H. Tipton of New York, who spoke on "Some financial aspects of the bread business," John McAlpine, Philadelphia, who spoke on "Bakery accounting, or how we can help the other fellow," as well as W. J. Roberts. Wallace A. Cook, of New York, Prof. Harcourt, and A. L. Boyd.

The delegates are being entertained at a theatre party this evening, and the sessons will be concluded to-morrow.

WANT CANADIAN TRADE IN BRITISH HONDURAS

Ottawa, Sept. 27.—"There is an extraordinarily strong desire in British Honduras to increase its trade with Canada," G. R. Stevens, Canadian Trade Commissioner in Jamaica, has advised the Department of Trade and Commerce.

"Indeed," Mr. Stevens adds, "in no part of the West Indies is Canadian sentiment and the desire for Canadian participation in their markets so marked. That is very sound business upon the part of British Honduras. They feel that they have been at the mercy of American jobbers for a long time, and that competition will improve prices."

This Man Sells a Ton of Fish a Week

Attractive Prices Make for Big Turnover, and Economy in Preparation Increases Gross Profit—Display is Important Factor in Building Sales—Sells From 40 to 50 Dozen Fish Cakes Weekly

By Staff Correspondent Canadian Grocer.

MONTREAL.—The secret of a big sale of fish, according to Ph Morin, owner of a provision store at 202 Bernard Ave. West, Montreal, is as low prices as possible and good displays. To be able to sell at comparatively low prices, Mr. Morin says that the retail dealer must see that there is economy in preparing the fish for the counters. This store sells 1,200 lbs. of fish every week, during the spring, summer and fall, but in the winter the sales average 2,000 lbs. a week. By practising economy and featuring fish this store is able to make a satisfactory gross profit and still keep down the percentage of profit.

Economy in Selling

In telling of the sales methods used in the case of fish, Mr. Morin said to a Canadian Grocer representative: "We try to get the most of every pound of fish we buy. From the necks of the salmon and halibut which we cut into steaks we get small bits of flesh which we use in making fish cakes. We make on the average from 40 to 50 dozen fish cakes a week, according to the season and these we sell at 30c a lb., a fair price considering that otherwise it would be waste. In this way we cut down the cost of the whole fish and are able to sell it to the customer at a lower price than is generally asked. Care is absolutely essential in handling fish. It must be turned over quickly and the requirements of the customers must be accurately judged. The secret of making the business profitable is to keep the price down. Fish should be an inexpensive food and as such should have a big demand. With the quick turnover of fairly large quantities it proves a very profitable line.

Making the Display

"Another feature is the display of fish. It must be kept before the people and it must look attractive. In our store we sell only dressed fish. Our biggest sale is haddock and this we prepare ourselves, making the white flesh laid out in white enamel trays in the refrigerating counters create its own demand, which it does easily. During the cold weather we sell about 700 lbs. of salmon a week, most of which we cut up into steaks. Care should be taken to avoid objectionable displays of whole fish. Many people dislike the appearance of fish with the heads on and the sight of blood on a fish often hurts sales. If the display is to be put in the window it should be surrounded with ice, if for appearance alone. It makes a better impression on the public.

Featuring Prices

"I have found that it pays to feature prices on fish. A merchant who is honestly trying to make his profit on gross sales and wants to build up those sales by selling at as low a figure as he can, has no reason to be ashamed of his prices. People like to know what they are going to pay for a thing before they make the purchase and in the case of fish the price should be an attraction.

A Patriotic Duty

"I also feel that I am doing the country and my customers a real service by selling fish and pushing it. I understand that Canada can produce all the fish that can be possibly consumed. The bigger the demand, the bigger the catch will be and accordingly Canada's wealth is increased by that much. With that in mind I take particular interest in my fish department but I also admit that I find it a paying department when it is given a little attention."

Wanted to Return the Punch Board

Hull, Que., Oct. 4.—A claim for ninety-five dollars, which was charged by Joseph Grant of Ottawa, for the sale of a "punch board" and its accompanying prizes to Joseph Legault of Farrelton, was in the Hull magistrate's court recently disallowed by Judge Achim.

Some time ago Legault took a punch board and the prizes from Grant and after selling part of them desired to return the remainder, as he was unable to dispose of them. Grant protested against the return of the board and the remaining prizes and sued for the full amount. Judge Achim held that under the arrangement between the pair Legault had a right to make a return.

High Prices to Consumer Hurts Fish Industry

Sir Thomas Robinson, K.B.E., in Interview With Representative of Canadian Grocer, Says Canada Should Pay More Attention to Her Fisheries—Advocates Closed Season for Halibut and Salmon in This Country

MONTREAL, Oct. 3.—(Special).—"The fishing industry in both England and Canada is being hurt at the present time by the comparatively high re-sale price to the consumer," said Sir Thomas Robinson, K. B. E., to a Canadian Grocer representative. "During the war when the industry was under the control of the Government, fish dealers of all classes found that there was more profit in selling a few hundred pounds of fish at a high price, than in selling twice or three times as much at a lower average profit, as they had done in pre-war times. They have not yet forgotten that and to-day they are not pushing the fish trade as regards distribution, and are maintaining high prices and demanding a big margin of profit. The fish dealers must learn that they will make more money by selling a larger quantity of fish at a lower price, if the industry is to be built up as it should be. In Canada as in England, fisheries are a most promising natural resource and must be cultivated. Consumption is the keynote to the success of the fishing industry and the Government must lend a hand to develop this and seek outside markets.

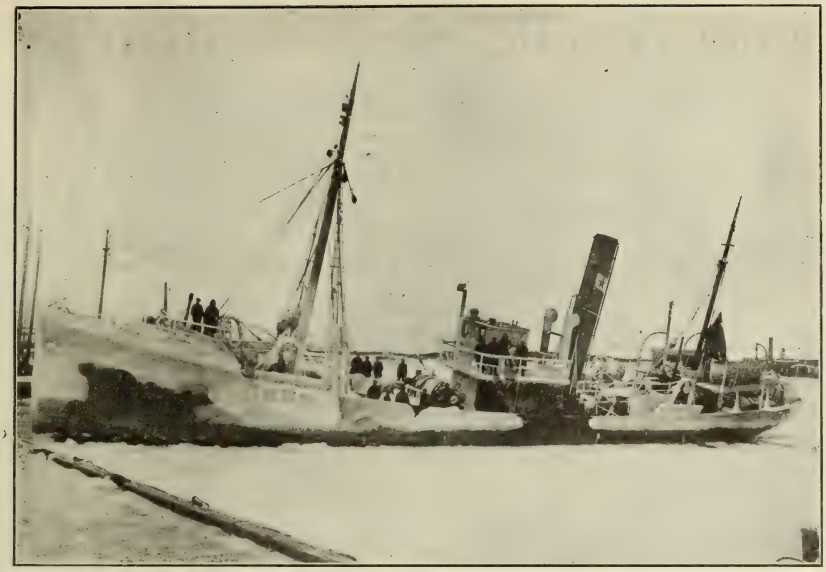
Bigger Local Demand

"In Canada, it seems to me, there is an opportunity for a big increase in the domestic demand. The Canadians do not eat as much fish as they should. I can recall when I first made a trip to America that there were approximately 90,000,000 people in the United States with a supply of beef for 120,000,000 people. To-day the tables are turned and the apparent supply of beef does not nearly approach the needs of the increased population. Fish is a natural substitute for meat and therefore fisheries must be developed.

Protection for Our Fish

"I have just come from the West where I have been seven times during the last twenty years and I find a great change in the condition of the fishing industry there. There are no longer the large catches of salmon and halibut for which Canada was once famous. The supply is dwindling down and bids fair to become a thing of the past unless the Government steps in and does something to prevent the annihilation of this species of fish. It is almost imperative in Canada's case that the Government should enforce a closed season during three months of the year when it would be unlawful for anyone to catch fresh salmon or halibut. It would of course be necessary that the same law be enacted in the United States or else one country would reap a harvest at the expense of the other. This closed season should come during the months of spawning.

Big Catch During Spawning



"It is a curious fact that during the spawning season the salmon and halibut are most easily caught and at that time the catches are largest, but the quality is poor. During this season the fish should be protected so that our future supplies will not be destroyed. England has a closed season for salmon from September to February. The largest quantities of halibut are caught off the coasts of Iceland over which waters she has no control.

Need of Special Minister

"It has also occurred to me," continued Sir Thomas, "that Canada is in need of a special minister of the Cabinet to look after the interests of the fishing industry. Here you have one portfolio which covers Marine and Fisheries. Much money is spent each year in further agricultural interests. This money is well spent but the fisheries would easily repay a similar amount spent in its behalf. A minister of the Cabinet well versed in the problems and requirements of the fishing industry could profitably devote all his time and energy to the development of this most valuable national asset."

Canned Salmon Lower

When asked why the prices on canned salmon were easier this year, Sir Thomas replied: "In 1921 the pack of Siberian salmon amounted to approximately 200,000 cases. The pack this year is double that amount and consequently there is more competition on the market and prices have been eased off slightly. While it is the hope of those engaged in the fishing industry that the reduction in the original cost of canned salmon will enable the retailer to give the public the benefit and consequently increase the demand, I am doubtful if this will take place. Everything possible should be done to see that the price of fish is kept as low as possible for the consumer so as to increase the demand and consequently furnish a market for the large supplies available for Canadian fishermen."

U. S. Tax on Fish

With regard to the new tax imposed on the importation of fish into the United States by the Government of that country Sir Thomas had this to say: "Last year the Americans bought 153,000,000 pounds of Canadian fish. This they must of necessity buy from Canadians for in the northern waters alone there are to be found the large schools of the best quality fish. There is no doubt but that the new tax of 2 cents a pound on halibut, mackerel and salmon and 25 per cent. ad valorem duty on prepared fish and 1¼ cents on other kinds of fish will increase the cost of fish to the American public. In truth this will to some extent cut down the demand on Canadian markets, but America must still buy fish in Canada, and I am inclined to believe that the Americans themselves will force their Government to do away with this tax on fish."

In Government Service

Sir Thomas speaks with pride of his early days in the fishing business. As a mere boy he left school to join one of the trawlers and worked his way up through all the stages of a fishing crew until at the age of twenty-three he obtained papers as the master and skipper of a steam fishing trawler. Through industry and economy he built up his own business until to-day he owns and operates a considerable fleet plying out of Grimsby, England, and is one of the recognized heads of the fishing industry in England. During the war he put into the Government service his fleet of vessels which were used in conjunction with the navy as mine sweepers and patrol boats. He also gave his services to the Government as technical advisor to the Ministry of Fisheries at a time when England depended largely upon her fishing to supply her people with food when she was threatened by a submarine blockade. He discussed trawlers and their possibilities with Lord Charles Beresford in organizing out of the fishing fleets auxiliaries for the navy in the work of mine sweeping and patrolling the coast of England as far back as 1911. Sir Thomas sailed for Liverpool on the S. S. Montclare on Friday last.

Bee Men Talk of Organizing to Sell Co-operatively

St. Catharines, Sept. 21.—The beekeepers of Niagara district are likely to form a co-operative selling organization. This will be attended to at the December convention in Toronto.

The bee men say they have been buying their supplies co-operatively, but have not sold their honey that way, and the result has been honey is a glut on the market this year, with resultant low prices.

It has been a fairly good year for the honey crop, but the price has hovered around 16 to 18 cents a pound, which the bee men claim is not sufficient, considering the expense, loss, etc., connected with bee-keeping.

Just now the bees are busy with the wild aster, which is remarkably plentiful in this section this year, and is a good honey producer. The golden-rod honey is also being harvested by the bees just now. The white clover yield has also been abundant.

Eighty dollars in cash was stolen from the general store at Clachan, near Chatham, one night last week. This is the second robbery at the same store in a month.

Finnan Haddies Show a Good Profit

Retail Grocers Will Find Them Easily Handled, and a Popular Line to "Push"—Grocers Require no Special Facilities in Order to Keep a Stock of Them—Knowledge of Fish is Important

Written for Canadian Grocer by ROY WHYNACHT, Montreal

"MR. GROCER, are you getting your share of the 'cream' from the finnan haddie industry? It is now assuming its annual activity with fair prospects of breaking all previous speed records of popularity which it hangs up every year.

"Do you realize that annually millions of the finest and most popular Canadian deep sea fish are leaving their happy homes in the cool depths of the North Atlantic and giving up their lives so that you and other wise Canadians may profit on their loss?

"The haddocks make the supreme sacrifice. The fishermen who catch them often risk their own lives in the process, braving the dangers of the Atlantic consisting of confusing fogs, submerged reefs, ledges and shoals, raging storms, etc.; the producers invest their capital in costly equipment on sea and land to facilitate their production, perfect their curing and hasten their distribution. And what is required of the retailer? Very little in comparison to the efforts made by the other participants in this industrial chain and they each seem to profit in inverse order to the energy contributed, right from the poor fish to the lucky consumer. The haddock puts all and takes nothing. The fisherman puts all his time and energy and takes very little.

"The producer puts a lot of capital and takes a little profit and a lot of worry. The retailer puts into use his already established facilities and takes quick sales and a good margin of profit. The consumer puts up a moderate price and takes home one of the most satisfying meals of his life. Of these different stages of progress the last two only will be given special attention in this short article.

"The grocer needs no special facilities to handle this commodity during the fall and winter months. The simplest and most expedient method to obtain and carry supplies is to place a standing order with the producers or the nearest distributor for his weekly requirements. In this way he takes practically no risk of loss from deterioration, as these fish, although very lightly pickled and mildly smoked, will stand up in cool weather for a much longer period, and, if frozen either naturally or artificially, will keep almost indefinitely. It has been found by experience that once the grocer's customers are made aware of the fact that he can supply them a reputable and reliable line of haddies, their frequent return for them is practically assured. Announcement of the receipt of the goods should be made in his regular newspaper advertisement, or by posting 'Fresh Cured Finnan Haddies' on his bulletin board, or across the door, or by an effective window display, or by conversation across the counter, or better still by every method known to him. He must be sure to have a supply especially on Fridays and to watch the calendar for fast-days. If his customers do not know that these are popular fish-eating days, he should give them that information.

Knowledge of Article Important

"Another potent factor affecting the sales of this line and which is usually overlooked, is the general lack of knowlege regarding the simple but effective culinary treatment of this article, especially throughout the prairie provinces where the art of cooking fish has been naturally more or less neglected. If he notices Mrs. Jones looking hesitatingly at a display of haddies, it is ten to one that she is wondering whether or not they should be soaked over night and then fried or boiled. If he suspects that he is losing a sale because of the fact that she is not sure of how to cook them, he should not hurt her susceptible sense of her own general proficiency by directly volunteering such information, but should introduce a little diplomacy by some such casual remark as, 'Do you know, Mrs. Jones, that those haddies have a much higher percentage of protein, the most important food constituent, than most meats and other fish?' If she becomes more interested and visibly brightens up with an 'Is that so?' expression, then he may proceed with some assurance to tell her that a good way to prepare them, especially the smaller ones for breakfast or light luncheon, is to pour over them, in a deep dish, some boiling water and let them stand thus in a hot place (top of stove will do) for ten or twenty minutes according to their size, then drain well, put in the oven for a minute and serve with buttered toast.

"For dinner a more elaborate preparation is appropriate and the finest one yet discovered is:—Trim the napes and tail off a large, thick haddie so that it will lie flat, face up, in a large frying or roasting pan. Add a pint of milk and a small piece of butter. Sprinkle with nutmeg. Cover pan to keep fish from becoming hard or tough, and put into hot oven for about half an hour. When baked, place haddie on a hot platter. Thicken pan juices with flour, into which stir the finely chopped whites of two hard-boiled eggs. Pour the sauce on the fish, over the surface of which pulverize the yolks of the two hard-boiled eggs. Decorate with parsley and sliced lemon and serve. Then, after selling her the haddie, supply her with the nutmeg, butter, eggs, parsley and lemon.

"If you find a number of your customers objecting to the skin on haddies (which, as a matter of fact, helps to retain their original and distinctive 'deep sea' flavor) ask your distributor to supply you next time with a few boxes of smoked fillets. These are skinned and boned and they receive practically the same curing treatment as the haddies. However, haddock possess such a simple arrangement of bones that that is not an objectionable feature in either fillets or haddies. They both come very conveniently packed in fifteen pound boxes (some haddies in thirties) neatly printed on the outside of the box and lined with parchment paper on the inside.

Equal to the Scotch Haddie

"The writer has met many old country Scotchmen who readily admit that the Canadian haddie is the equal in every way of the original Scotch article, although they were loath to admit any

"Make Fish Look Attractive and People Will Buy a Lot More of it"

Manager of Fish Department of R. Barron, Ltd., Yonge Street, Toronto, Says More Fish Will be Sold if Care is Given to Cleaning and Dressing it Before Placing it on Sale

"THE reason people do not eat so much fish is because it is not presented to them as it should be," declared A. Yates, manager of the fish department of R. Barron, Ltd., Yonge Street, Toronto. "Merchants will find they will sell a good deal more fish if they pay some attention to cleaning and dressing it before offering it for sale," he continued.

The fish department of R. Barron Ltd., is an attractive place, and supplies of almost every fish obtainable are shown under the very best possible auspices. Special attention is directed towards the proper display of fish, and this is carried out with every care for correct sanitation, and with the idea of keeping them in the very best possible condition.

Heavy Sales of Fish

Sales of fish in the Barron store run high, and the present season has already opened with sales showing increased volume, in spite of the fact that the weather has not been exactly ideal for the fish trade. "Our turnover in oysters already this season has been very gratifying, and the general fish trade very satisfactory," Mr. Yates stated.

Give the People the Best

"Our policy is to give the people the best in fish that can be secured," Mr. Yates added. "If people have confidence in the fish you are offering, your trade is assured. This is one line more than any other, perhaps, that people are exceedingly particular about. Satisfaction in this regard means repeat business. We bring in a lot of our fish direct from the sea, and in this way we aim to have them always fresh."

During the fall and winter months special selling effort is directed towards the sale of the boneless haddies, and the turnover of this variety has averaged as high as 800 pounds per week.

While a good deal of fish is sold by this firm to regular customers over the telephone, there is considerable catch trade as well, and with a view to attracting this class of business, it is essential to display the fish well. Excellent facilities of refrigeration make this possible at all times.

Oyster Producing Areas of the North Promise Better Than a Year Ago

Situation Shows Great Improvement, and Supplies Are Practically Assured for the Next Four or Five Years—Last Year's Spawn Produces Something Worth While

"THE situation in the oyster producing areas of the North is more favorable than a year ago," T. J. McKey, manager of the Connecticut Oyster Co., Ltd., told Canadian Grocer. "Stock has been growing scarcer each year owing to failure of sufficient fertile spawn to replace the oysters that were being marketed each year.

"Covering a period of eight years there was practically no fertile spawn. At least the extent of the fertile spawn was negligible. The summer of 1921 was favored with a nominal set so that with the young oysters from the 1921 spawn and the growth that has been realized on the older stock there has been sufficient improvement to maintain supply.

"The situation, however, is binding inasmuch as oysters when they get to seven, eight or nine years of age mortality increases. They are larger and more desirable from the consumers' point of view. So far as stock in bulk is concerned but for shell stock the industry is up against the proposition of being long on large oysters and the supply of small oysters is hopelessly inadequate with a consequent high price on barrel stock running 1,000 to 1,200 to the barrel.

"Taking the situation as a whole I believe that supplies are practically assured for the next four or five years. This as a result of last year's spawn producing something worth while and in the meantime it is to be hoped that the present young oysters will give evidence of more fertility than has been experienced in the last few years.

"It is hard to say just what the Southern oyster areas will produce at present. Until the first or middle of November when the large boats go out, nothing much can be learned."

FINNAN HADDIES

superiority except, perhaps, in our method of packing and shipping, which naturally must be well developed to meet the requirements demanded by shipments from Nova Scotia to points as far away as the Pacific Coast. At any rate, the fact is well established that our haddies are almost incomparably better than those cured in the United States up to the present time. This may not be a reflection on the U. S. packers, as they have certain conditions there which detract from the evolution of a haddie which would stand favorable comparison with those cured in the Maritimes. About half a century ago there were no Canadian haddies. Twenty-five years ago this commodity was thought to be a lucky find by the proprietors of the city fish emporiums and a profitable sideline for some of the large meat packers, who were supplied by a few pioneer packers in Nova Scotia, but now it has become a staple fall and winter line of most grocers and gives employment to thousands of fishermen and factory workers along the shores of the Maritime Provinces. This development in consumption was purely spontaneous and was absolutely unaided by any organized advertising campaign, which is a forcible testimony of its general popularity and worth."

Split Cases Make Amateur Dealers

So Claims Business Man Who Says This System is Increasing Costs and Handicapping the Worth While Merchant—Fewer Grocery Stores in England

By RICHARD S. CHILDS in Printers' Ink

I RECENTLY made a personal canvass of the city of Stamford, Conn., in connection with a grocery specialty, of which I am the owner, as preparation for instructing salesmen. I found 120 stores there, of which at least forty were not worth approaching with even the most modest proposition, because of the smallness of the shop, the disorder, and the general evidence that the shopkeeper was not a business man. My judgment was that about half of the grocers, including fifteen chain-store branches, were doing 90 per cent. of the business in Stamford, and subsequent experience with my own line of goods corroborated this impression. In fact, if I had succeeded in stocking a certain forty or fifty dealers, the omission of all the rest would have made only a trifling difference in the subsequent sales in that city.

Obviously such a situation is unsound. Many of these storekeepers must fail, and their losses are a charge on the jobbers and the public. The spoilage of goods, the cost of canvassing by jobbers and manufacturers, and the cost of sanitary inspection by the city is all waste.

This condition is in marked contrast to what I noticed in England, where the proportion of grocers to population seems to be about the same as the proportion of drug stores in this country, and where, in consequence, the grocers are real merchants, buying in what we call wholesale quantities and carrying ample stocks.

The key to the problem is the ease with which any man or woman who has the ambition to be a grocer, and who possesses a capital of $50 can get into the business. The moment he opens his little shop in a tenement ground floor, the jobbers will supply him with stock and will sell him at jobbing prices, quantities as low as "one-sixth of a dozen," although the correct unit as planned by the manufacturer may be a case of three dozen.

Now, I have no quarrel with a policy whereby competing jobbers will eagerly seek the friendship of a newcomer, who may work up to a brilliant success, but they ought to adopt a policy that will keep out the man of inadequate resources who is only due to lose his saving in his precarious venture.

Picayune Sales by Jobbers Add to Cost

The real error is in the jobbers' habit of splitting cases. Every manufacturer has a working unit, which constitutes a logical purchase by the retailer, an amount varying from two dozen to six dozen, depending on the demand and rapidity of movement of the goods. These packing units are worked out by the manufacturer with considerable care, and, if adhered to by the jobber in his sales, will make handling an easy matter. When the jobber takes a case of thirty-six cakes of ——— and divides it up and re-packs dozens and half-dozens, he incurs extra cost and breakage and he multiplies his bookkeeping detail.

A flat rule among the jobbers that they will not split cases, and support of this policy by the manufacturer in bringing pressure to bear upon jobbers who do split cases, would mean that a man could not get into the retail grocery business without more capital than is now necessary. He would have to have larger quarters, and a larger clientele.

It is to the manufacturer's interest to prevent splitting of cases, so as to make retailers buy in decent quantities and to reduce the number of retail outlets which the manufacturers must canvass.

It would be to the jobbers' interest to have fewer and better accounts.

It would be to the interest of the good retailers to be freed from the competition of the "small fry," who are running at a loss and do not know it.

The only losers would be the owners of small store buildings which gulp down the savings of one unsuccessful amateur storekeeper after another.

"Chain Stores Have Their Restrictions"

Changing Times and Public Development Have Brought About New Forms of Distributive Service—Chain Store Systems Are Not All Efficient

From an Address delivered by Irving S. Paull, before the Association of Chain Store Proprietors in New York

"WHETHER chain stores were created in response to an economic demand or whether they are the result of the sagacious foresight and imagination of a clear-visioned merchant is of no consequence in our present discussion," stated Irving D. Paull before the Association of Chain Store Proprietors in New York recently and as reported in the New York Journal of Commerce. "Chain stores do exist and seem to have a definite place in our present economic scheme," he continued.

"It is a popular theory that the term 'chain store' applies to a system of distribution which capitalizes every efficiency and eliminates every element of waste. This is not true, because chain stores, like all other business organizations, reflect the ideals, capabilities and limitations of the men who manage them.

"Some chain systems are remarkably efficient and others are equally inefficient. Some chain groups are successful and profitable, others are unsuccessful and unprofitable, and it is improbable that the time can come when all organizations operating as chains will be efficient, successful, profitable and permanent.

"There will be competition between chains just as there will be competition between independents. Chains, like other institutions, will from time to time find it necessary to make adjustments to meet ever-changing conditions.

Capitalized Economies

"The sucessful chains of to-day have capitalized the obvious economies which result from volume purchase and controlled distribution. They have capitalized statistical organizations and information in the selection of store sites in the streams of travel.

"Chain stores have taught all business the value of analysis of consumer habits and market capacities. They have demonstrated the value of standardization, not only of merchandise, store arrangement, window display, operation and method, but they have shown the value of personnel training.

"The outstanding achievement of chain store management has been its demonstration of merchandise turnover possibilities. Not all chain stores are equally efficient in the matter of turnover. During the past year it has been my privilege to analyze the results of the most comprehensive survey that has thus far been made of marketing and distribution.

"It was interesting to compare the results obtained by two chain systems of approximately equal capital and organization. Both systems were located alike as to character of population and carried stocks of almost identical merchandise, but with very different results. One system turned its stock twenty and one-half times, with an operating cost of 5 per cent. The other system turned its stock five and one-quarter times, and had an operating cost of 20 per cent.

"The difference between the two institutions is that one operated with a view to maintaining a frequency of turnover and a uniformity of profit, while the other speculated on its ability to forecast markets and take greater spread.

"It requires no great sagacity or foresight in economics to assert that business is rapidly approaching a new basis. It now costs more to distribute the world's goods than to make them. Chain stores do not solve the problem because they deal with but one phase of distribution. The problem of distribution is national, and national problems are only community problems multiplied.

"If there is a weak link in the chain it is the last link, the community contract. The chain store is dependent upon the prosperity already existing in the communities it enters and its most enthusiastic exponents will not claim that it contributes largely to the physical, moral or commercial development of the community.

"It is unlikely that chain systems will ever monopolize the distribution of merchandise. First, because they enter a community after it is demonstrated that there is a sufficient volume of business to be obtained to warrant locating in any selected community.

"Second, because chain systems do not find it profitable to carry wide assortments for the occasional convenience of consumers or fluctuating demand.

"Third, because certain services, conveniences and accommodations are demanded by the majority of the consumers. These demands add materially to the risks and cost of operating a merchandise institution.

"It is probable that chain systems will make such adjustments as efficient merchandising and trade building may justify in the development of closer relations between the stores and the communities they serve.

"There is a degree of detachment between a branch store and the community it serves which of itself tends toward economy of operation not enjoyed by the independent local merchant. He is a local figure and as such must respond to the demands made upon him for the promotion and maintenance of the community as a civic duty.

"The community recognizes the fact that a salaried manager of a branch store, belonging to a large system, can enjoy but limited authority to meet purely local demands of this nature, and therefore escapes the resentment that a local proprietor could not avoid.

"The Joint Commission of Agricultural Inquiry, consisting of five members of the Senate and five members of Congress, was appointed to discover among other things, the 'cause of the difference between the prices of agricultural products paid to the producer, and the ultimate costs to the consumer'.

"The prices of all commodities other than agricultural products were still extremely high, while the farmers' products had descended to the bottom of the scale. The dollar the farmer received for his products would not buy the absolute essentials necessary to his existence.

"It was an extremely fortunate thing that a man of courage, intelligence, energy and sincerity of purpose should have been elected chairman of the commission. I refer to the Hon. Sydney Anderson of the First District of Minnesota. He determined on policies and procedure that would develop basic facts upon which there might be created an equitable relationship, among agriculture, commerce, industry, transportation, finance and labor. This proved to be a pioneering effort in Governmental inquiry.

"The commission conceived its purpose to be that of education rather than legislation. It adopted a policy of co-operation rather than coercion; it conducted an inquiry rather than an inquisition.

The Problem of Distribution

"The commission discovered that economic distribution is one of the most important problems before people today, and apparently the problem which has received the least intelligent consideration.

"We have reached a point where it costs more to distribute and serve than it costs to produce. Commodity values are lost in a maze of service costs, and the time has come for a consideration of the fundamental problem of economic distribution of the absolute essentials.

"The solution of the problem of distribution must be secured through a betterment of methods and an elimination of waste and uneconomic practices. A better system of distribution can only

This Statement is Illuminating

Merchant Believes He is Making Progress, But He Wants to Know in What Measure He is Succeeding—How to Know Your Rate of Progress.

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

OFTEN I curtail letters or insert their substances, but this letter is so full of good sense and sound judgment that I print it entire. I say he illumines the way because his questions are so apt and bright that he will make any attentive reader think. And anyone who THINKS about his business will gain some illumination on it. Eastern Canada, Aug. 10, 1922.

Dear Sir:—I wonder if I could get some advice from you on accounting systems for my business. I am well educated and capable of maintaining a splendid system if shown what to get for a start. I have my figures very accurately set forth showing turnover for every day and a strict account of every cent spent, but the question is, how much am I making and how shall I find out?....I keep two lists of disbursements, one of every cent actually spent for stock of any sort, the other for things bought but not sold—therefore, overhead expenses. Under the second heading I include wages, equipment, paper and bags, sundries, donations, advertising, household, light, telephone, ice, upkeep, rent and insurance. I do not include depreciation on stock or equipment or any shrinkage, for the simple reason that I hate to guess at things and it would surely be a big piece of guesswork to me....I handle a wide variety of stock: all grocery and dairy lines, fruit, some meats, vegetables, paints and oils, a few hardware lines, and many other things; and the problem of fixing shrinkage, etc., on all these things is beyond any degree of accuracy. Again, as to the matter of profit: I deny absolutely that any man in the world can fix a straight percentage of profit with my varied stock by simply multiplying this amount by any percentage quoted. For instance: A crate of strawberries arrives dead ripe. I buy them at 15c. and for a few hours I sell them at 18c. But the tail end of the shipment lags and gets soft and I drop to 15c, and finally selling a few at 13c to avoid loss. Ask yourself, at what profit do I sell? Again, on my fast selling lines I cut the prices as close as possible. On slow lines I expect a good profit and manage to get it. ..... The actual facts and figures I keep are few but valuable.

Detailed Figures Kept Up

My turnover is set forth as follows:

	1922	1923	1924	1925
March 1	106.42
March 2	98.27
March 3	144.09

This gives opportunity for daily comparative records for five years running, all on one page, a page to a month. On 12 pages of my ledger I can maintain this important bit of information for five years. On the following 12 pages I set forth the disbursements as follows:

Disbursements:

	1922	1923	1924	1925
June
(Stock)
Groceries	1894.62
Meats	466.27
Fish	122.22
Dairy Produce ..	346.76
Etc.
(Overhead)
Wages	140.00
Equipment	72.60
Rent	40.00
Etc.

On the next 12 pages I carry a sort of recapitulation or general summary of information, as follows:

Recapitulation:

	1922	1923	1924	1925
February
Stock purchased .	2951.07
Equipment " .	97.84
Overhead	317.95
Household	195.44
Turnover	2884.74
Percentage cost of doing business	.1102

Of course I take a careful inventory at replacement cost on New Year's Eve and Day each year. We arrange for it gradually for a week in advance, then slap on a good capable night force and go at it with a rush. Find I can complete it easily in 16 hours, carrying out all extensions, etc., during the quieter days that follow. I make up the usual yearly statement required by Dun's and the government, but I feel far from satisfied with all that I do.

Could I, in your opinion, by any work possibly put myself in a position to know with any degree of certainty just what I am making each day, or week or month? Have only been in business two years and have done well; raised a dead little dump with a turnover of $4,000 per year to a snappy, popular little store whose income for the first six months of this year ran $19,584. Have recently opened another store which is making a wonderful run, and inside of three months will complete my plans by opening the first meat and fish market in my city. So you see it is certain I am doing well—but how well? That is what I want to find out!

Record Wanted For Future Orders

Also, what system of registering advance orders for later delivery direct from manufacturers would you advise me to instal? Have often given an order to a Dominion traveller from some big house for delivery, say, two months later and on the very eve of its arrival, completely forgetting that it was coming, have ordered more of the same stock from a local jobber, thus causing confusion and loss of profit from carrying stock too long. If you publish this letter or the answer to it, will you please advise me in what copy of Canadian Grocer answer will appear so that I shall not miss it.

Yours truly: Seeker for Light.

Do you not agree that this "Seeker for Light" illuminates all the questions on which he touches? That is because the questions are intelligently propounded.

As it is impracticable to set forth a bookkeeping system in any one article, I refer this gentleman to the McCaskey Co., Alliance, Ohio, whose representatives are "everywhere;" the Burroughs Adding Machine Co., Detroit; the National Cash Register Co., Dayton, Ohio; and the Tela-profit Company's systems, obtainable from Canadian Grocer. These people have systems adaptable to any size of business. He can write them for suggestions and samples.

I also refer him to Bureau of Business Research, Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts, for list of bulletins on the grocery business. Those cost from 50c to $1 each, and are worth ten times their cost to any grocer who will study them. But every man must take to heart the remark of ol' Francis Bacon: "The reason why people do not return borrowed books is because it is so much easier to keep a book than to get what is inside of it!" Any book or bulletin will be utterly useless to the man who will not make the mental exertion to get what it contains. This present correspondent will get the inside of anything he sends for—that I know. This hint is for the rest of you!

How to Know Rate of Progress

This man wants to know accurately his rate of progress. He should be able to know it now, under his present system. As he takes an inventory each year, all he has to do is compare what he has at the end of any one year with what he had at the beginning. But he will fool himself unless he includes some things not now included.

For example, depreciation. It is not now included, he says, because he does not want to guess. But at the end of each year he inventories stocks at "replacement value." He cannot do that so accurately that some articles must not be estimated, or "guessed at." Yet he feels that his approximation is close enough for dependency. It must be the same with depreciation, except that here he has the guidance of the long experience of others. They have established 10% per annum as a safe rate of depreciation on inside equipment and 20% on outside, such as trucks, etc. Does that mean that a counter will wear out in ten years? No: but that counter is offset by a meat slicer which depreciates and runs into upkeep that far exceeds 10%. And it is all on the safe side.

No harm is done if your books show you are worth $9,000 net when the actuality is that you are worth $10,000. Values are not changed by accounting. That excess $1,000 is there, just the same. But danger lurks in any estimate or alleged account which shows $9,100 net when, in fact, the net is $9,000. Any overestimate is bad, no matter how slight. Under-estimates only are bad when excessive—and not always then!

Interest on invested capital must also be charged. Opinions may differ on this point. Henry Ford, who is no slouch of a businessman, denies this. Others—many more of them—regarded as similar leaders in their lines, hold that interest should be charged. I say it should be charged—and I have shown why I think so. But whether you agree or not, charge it just the same. The business that cannot stand such a "buffer" by way of extra safeguard and caution is in a bad way.

My friend insists that "profits" are not uniform throughout the grocery line. Maybe he is right. If he will argue that margins are not uniform, I shall agree heartily. But there is a wide difference and it should be distinguished carefully. For example:

Sugar may be handled at 10% margin. In a store with average expense of, say, 14%, it will cost around 6% to handle sugar. That will leave a profit of 4% on sales. In the same store canned plum-pudding will cost around 31% to handle —as I have hitherto demonstrated. If sold on a margin of 35%, the profit will also be 4%. In such a discussion we touch the fundamentals of retailing, the treatment of which at length would take a book. I expect to write such a book soon. Meantime, write California Prune & Apricot Association, San Jose, California, for a copy of "Profits in Prunes." That treats some of these fundamentals rather fully—and it will cost nothing but the brain-fag of reading!

My friend should also differentiate between sales and turnover. They are not the same thing. Neither is volume synonymous with turnover. But there is not much danger that anyone who thinks and studies as he does will go far wrong. He is going ahead rapidly, and that he will learn to see the road he is travelling there is no room for question.

Discuss Question of Buying Canned Goods Collectively

Ottawa Grocers Deal With a Number of Timely Subjects at Recent Meeting—District Gathering of Retail Grocers at Winchester This Week

OTTAWA, Oct. 3. (Special) — A number of interesting subjects were dealt with at the regular semi-monthly meeting of the Grocers' Section of the Ottawa branch of the Retail Merchants' Association, a few days ago.

The question of collective buying of canned foods came in for considerable discussion, and the consensus of opinion was that in view of the present uncertain condition of the market, the policy of hand to mouth buying was the wisest one to follow for the time being. Charles McArthur, of Russell, Ont., a merchant of high standing in that district, was present and gave the members the benefit of his opinion in this regard. He said that in conjunction with a number of his fellow merchants in the Russell district he had taken the trouble to look thoroughly into the matter and had come to the conclusion that there was not much to be gained by collective buying of canned goods at present. They had offered to purchase a couple of carloads at a time but the prices quoted were by no means encouraging.

J. Basil Bambrick drew attention to the fact that last year some members stocked up with large quantities of canned goods and found shortly afterwards that they could purchase the same goods in Montreal ten per cent. lower.

Selling Vegetables By Weight

The new law governing the sale of vegetables by weight was discussed and J. C. Campbell was instructed to find out if hucksters, vendors and others on the market would be required to carry scales with them. It was felt these people should be made to live under the same regulations as the dealers. It was pointed out that the grocers sold 7½ pounds of potatoes to the gallon, while the hucksters and others had been selling five and six pounds to the gallon.

Grocers' Meeting at Winchester

Mr. Campbell announced that a district meeting of retail merchants was to be held at Winchester on Oct. 4, and that between thirty and forty Ottawa grocers and other mrechants had promised to attend. The stamp tax on checks, the new receipt tax and other legislation inimical to the retail trade would be taken up and addresses would be delivered by Henry Watters, president of the district; W. C. Miller, provincial secretary, and himself.

There was also a rather animated discussion on the bread question, when one member stated that some Ottawa bakers were selling their bread across the river, in Hull, considerably cheaper than locally. It was stated that bread could be purchased wholesale as low as 5½ cents in Hull, whereas it cost the grocers in Ottawa 7½ and 8 cents.

Those who attended the meeting were: A. E. Kelly, in the chair; Duncan Bell, treasurer; C. J. Allan, secretary; P. Lamoureux, F. A. Walsh, A. S. Moreland, Alex. Phillips, R. W. Porteous, J. Paterson, John Regan, W. Neate, P.G. Allan, T. Bowman, T. A. C. Kennedy, T. M. Collins, B. G. Crabtree, J. C. Campbell and J. Basil Bambrick.

be hoped for through a more intelligent study of methods, facilities and purposes. Few people, even those who are engaged in performing the functions of distribution, can visualize the entire process. Chain store systems account to their credit certain obvious economies, but the public differentiates only slightly between the various processes by which it is supplied with essential commodities.

"If all merchandise were distributed by chain store systems there would still be a considerable clamor against the spread between the price of raw materials and the cost to the consumer.

"Whether people find their purchases on the kitchen table in their own home or walk through a turnstile and serve themselves from a shelf, they will still, of necessity, pay for much service, beginning with the harvesting of the crops through the processes of collecting, assembling, transporting, converting and distributing.

"However, the situation will be improved when people know something of what they are paying for and can determine how much service they will render to themselves and how much they will buy.

Canadian Firms in Nations' Food Show at Olympia, London

London, Eng., Oct. 4. — What is designated as "The Nations' Food Exhibition" is now being held at Olympia, London, from the 6th to the 26th September. It is the joint venture of two companies—the International Trade Exhibitions, Limited, and the Trades' Markets and Exhibitions, Limited—who organize a number of the principal trade displays which are annually held in London.

Referring to the exhibition, the London Morning Post writes: "The Nations' Food Exhibition which was opened yesterday at Olympia was crowded from the moment the doors were opened. The reason is that the display is interesting not only to the trader but to the public

Cut Down the Overhead

WE UNDERSTAND that a chain of groceteria stores in one of our large cities is doing business on an overhead of approximately 5%, and that another large chain of cash and carry stores has an overhead of slightly more than 7%. Neither of these stores delivers goods. Even if it cost them 5% for delivery the percentages would be 10 and 12 respectively.

How many retail grocers are working on an overhead like this?

These figures indicate that retailers should give very careful attention to expenses with a view to cutting them down 1 or 2 per cent. at any rate. If this can be done it means a nice additional profit at the end of the year. It does not mean that a merchant who is giving a delivery service, or a service in some other way, should discontinue it. But perhaps one delivery wagon less would not make much difference in the service if the delivery system was better organized. In fact one large merchant told us recently he was going to eliminate delivery of all orders under $1, and that this will cut off one of his delivery wagons.

Better equipment in the store, more efficient sales staff, or a more aggressive sales policy will all help to cut down the overhead expense. It remains for every merchant to go thoroughly into each of these and see just where he can save money. A sales staff by proper coaching and by encouragement can easily increase turnover from a third to a half. This immediately means a considerable reduction in salary expense based on turnover.

Quantity Selling of Canned Goods

THE practice of selling canned goods in quantity lots appears to have been followed with a good deal of success, according to the experience of a number of merchants. These retailers have concentrated effort on the turnover of cases of canned fruits or vegetables, rather than single tins or even three tins at a time.

The policy is undoubtedly a good one. It means a quicker turnover, and a conversion of stock into cash, rather than holding goods on the shelves. It is a good idea to sell a winter's supply of canned products now. It will bring to the grocer greater profits through increased sales. A window display of the new pack, coupled with advertising and selling talks, emphasizing the quantity basis of buying, will bring results that are surprising and altogether gratifying.

Of course canned goods are good steady sellers throughout the fall and winter months, but by a special drive at selling large quantities, the grocer not only gets his normal profits but gains a number of additional advantages. In the first place he is sure of the business. The goods are sold. In the second place his customers will eat more canned foods if their pantries are well stocked, and in addition the grocer saves a lot of storage, handling and delivering—three items that materially affect net profits.

Through quantity selling of canned goods grocers can greatly increase their year's volume on all sorts of canned foods.

Retail Salesman's Importance

WHAT ESSENTIALS are required to make a successful retail salesman? This question was recently asked by a delegate attending a trade convention and this was the reply: "No person can be a success as salesclerk unless they have the faculty of giving their customers complete satisfaction with every purchase made." Or in other words, selling the goods to themselves, before attempting to sell to their customers. To sell satisfaction in your dealings with the store's customers the customer must be made to appreciate the value of the article you sell. Take, for example, a lady customer who enters the store to do her shopping. It may be only a box of candy of some fancy biscuits. Then again it may be some special for some memorable occasion in her family circle. In either case she has the money and you the merchandise. Her sense of self-interest rises to its highest point. While she may be a lady of friendly disposition, when she goes shopping, her instinct, sense of duty, and good sense all urge her to protect her purse—in fact, money is the one thing that lies closest to her self-centredness. From this she will not part, and then only on one condition—she must be made to feel the values offered her in exchange in the shape of some token or gift that will afford her a benefit or pleasure greater than the satisfaction she may have in keeping her money in her purse. When she considers the purchase of any article she instinctively weighs it against its cost; her self-interest scale begins to balance, first this way, then that way, weighing carefully the price against the goods until the sale is won or lost. No matter how good a farmer a man may be, nor how good a plot of land he may have, if he does not create conditions favorable to the growth of the seed sown his crop will invariably prove a failure. Similarly to the above is the grocery store salesman. Whenever there is a sale made the salesman does not really make the sale—the decision of the customer does that, but he can, and in every case should create conditions favorable to a decision for making a purchase. In this way he will not be imposing upon the customer, but, on the contrary, be doing her a genuine service.

The salesclerk can easily render this service when he studies his customer's wants and then shows her merchandise that will meet her requirements, also by calling her attention to the goods in question and making it convenient for her to examine the intended purchase.

Current News of The Week

Canadian Grocer Will Appreciate Items of News From Readers For This Page

Ontario

George Brighty is now settled in his new grocery in Midland.

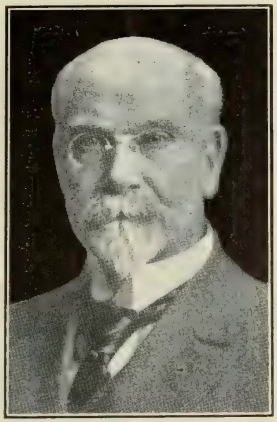
Ross Thompson, merchant at Maitland, near Brockville, passed away last week. He had been in business for a number of years.

For breaking into the grocery store of J. W. Noble, St. Thomas, a man by the name of Ted Craig was given three years last week.

Mullen's Groceteria, 742 Yonge St., Toronto, recently decided to deliver orders of $1.00 or more. Customers may now telephone for their goods.

Cliff Robinson, London, has leased a new and larger store at 202 Dundas St., and will occupy it as soon as a new front can be installed and alterations made.

The death occurred on Wednesday last of Joseph Brown of Windsor, at the age of 52 years. The deceased had been in the grocery business in Windsor for a number of years.



W. G. Patrick & Co., manufacturers' agents, Toronto, have been appointed representatives for Ontario and the West for Lever Brothers' new product Cooket Shortening, for the bakery and confectionery section of the business.

Robert Dickson for years head of Dickson's Limited, general merchants, St. Marys, passed away last week. The late Mr. Dickson was also at one time head of the St. Marys Creamery Co. He is survived by his wife, one son and one daughter.

The wholesale grocery house of Cairns & Son, Niagara Falls, was entered early one morning last week. The door was unlocked and goods to the value of $1,000 made up mostly of cigars and cigarettes were stolen and taken away in a car.

E. B. Ryckman, M. P., addressed the Danforth Business Men's Association of Toronto the other day. He spoke of the advisability of adopting a community phrase or motto, and contended that the community consciousness could be crystallized in a community slogan which would be beneficial to district business.

Stuart Henry of Robert Henry & Son, Windsor, Ont., general sales agents for the B. C. Fishing and Packing Co., leaves on Saturday on a business trip to the Pacific coast. He will be there a week or ten days. He expects to visit his company's canneries on the Skeena River while in British Columbia.

HUGH BLAIN

Who was honored on Thursday night of this week by the Toronto Board of Trade

Toronto Board of Trade Pay Tribute to Hugh Blain

Toronto.—(Special).—A presentation was made to Hugh Blain on Thursday evening by the Toronto Board of Trade, "in recognition of his long and valuable services to the Board and the business community generally." Mr. Blain is an ex-president of the Board and has been a member of the council for several years.

In June last he was honored by the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association during their convention at Niagara Falls. On that occasion a dinner was given in his honor and he was presented with a life-sized portrait of himself. At that time he had just recently become convalescent after a rather serious illness and received the congratulations of scores of friends from all parts of the wholesale grocery trade in Canada.

Business Changes

R. A. Burns has opened a store at 142 Lake Street, St. Catharines, Ont.

Sider Bros. are successors to Service Store . Toronto, at Normandy and Gerrard Streets.

The Quality Groceteria has opened up for business at 934 Gerrard Street, E., Toronto. B. S. Jackes is the proprietor.

Wholesale Grocery Ltd., Goes Into Liquidation

Toronto, Oct. 4.—(Special).—The Wholesale Grocery Ltd., Wellington Street, W., went into liquidation a few days ago, making the assignment to J. M. Thorne, of Thorne, Mulholland, Howson and MacPherson, chartered accountants. Bank of Hamilton Building. The assignment was made, it is stated, on the request of a creditor for a winding up order.

J. H. Knowles is the president of the assigning company. He was instrumental in organizing the Associated Grocers of Ontario. Its shareholders were chiefly retail grocers in the City of Toronto. The Wholesale Grocery Ltd., was capitalized at $150,000. The Associated Grocers of Ontario were among the largest shareholders, having subscribed approximately half of the capitalization.

A meeting of creditors is to be called shortly, and in the meantime the business is being operated by the liquidators.

Speaking to the president, Mr. Knowles, in regard to the liquidation, he told Canadian Grocer that in all probability the company would be re-organized. It was first formed two and a half years ago and has been conducting a wholesale grocery business at Wellington Street offices during that time.

Will Challenge for the Fisherman's Trophy

Montreal, Oct. 4 (Special).—There will be again this year an international race for the fishermen's trophy between one of the Canadian fishing schooners and a representative of the American fleet. The barring of the United States schooner Mayflower by the Canadian trustees of the International Fishermen's Trophy will not prevent the American participation in the series which is to be raced off Gloucester, Mass., this month.

In a telegram to the Canadian trustees, the United States body suggested that this year's race be made a free-for-all for fishing vessels, adding, however, should the suggestion not be favored a United States challenger will be chosen in the usual way.

Damude, Markle and Secord, wholesale grocers, are successors in the wholesale grocery business to J. T. Festing & Sons, Limited, St. Catharines.

Wholesale Grocers Are Opposed to Manufacturers' Move re Sales Tax

Want the Tax Either Collected at the Source or Left as it is—Annual Meeting of the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Association is Held—Fred T. Smye, Hamilton, the New President

TORONTO, Oct. 4.—The annual meeting of the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Association was held in the secretary's offices, Front Street, E., last week. A large representation was present, and a number of vital questions to the trade were discussed. The chair was taken by the president, T. H. Kinnear, and reports were presented by the secretary, A. C. Pyke, and the treasurer, A. H. Paffard. The statement of finances indicated a balance on the right side.

The association placed itself on record as opposed to any move on the part of manufacturers to have the sales tax collected only from the wholesalers. The wholesale grocers want the tax collected either at the source or have it left as it is now. J. Frank Grimes of Chicago, was present and gave an address on "Efficiency Methods in the Wholesale Grocery Trade."

The present sugar situation was reviewed, and it was decided to have a delegation from the association wait on the refiners, in an effort to stabilize the market.

The following officers were elected for the year 1922-1923:

President, F. T. Smye, Balfour, Smye & Co., Hamilton; 1st vice-president, W. E. McMurtry, Groceries Limited, Toronto; 2nd vice-president, A. Foster, National Grocers Limited, North Bay; treasurer, Ross F. H. Humphrey, F. W. Humphrey Co. Ltd., Toronto; secretary, A. C. Pyke, Toronto. Executive Committee: S. W. Somerville, Bristol, Somerville & Co., Hamilton; A. M. Masuret, M. Masuret & Co., London; W. T. Harris Co. Limited, Owen Sound; J C. Markle, T. Kenny & Co. Limited, Sarnia; J. F. Smyth, J. F. Smyth & Co. Limited, Windsor; O. E. Truesdale, George Foster & Sons Limited, Brantford; J. W. Charles, Marland Woolnough Co., Niagara Falls; F. Harding, The Harding Co. Limited, St. Thomas; W. D. FRED T. SMYE of Balfour, Smye & Co., Hamilton, the newly elected president of the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Association.

Armstrong and Paffard Discontinue Their Business

Toronto, Oct. 4.—(Special).—The old established wholesale grocery house of Armstrong and Paffard, Yonge Street, Toronto, is discontinuing business. This will take place just as soon as the present stock of goods can be liquidated. Travellers for this concern will be out for another week, but liquidation is being carried on as quickly as possible, with a view to closing the business at once.

Asked as to his plans for the future, A. H. Paffard of this firm, told Canadian Grocer that he was not prepared to discuss them at present. This firm was formerly known as Davidson and Hay.

Trade Commissioners Talk to Trade Newspapermen

Toronto, Oct. 4.—Dr. J. W. Ross, Canadian Trade Commissioner at Shanghai, China, and Major J. B. Johnson, Canadian Trade Commissioner at Shanghai, spoke the other day at the King Edward Hotel to over 50 editors and publishers of Canadian trade papers, at which the Commissioners outlined their work in their respective fields and pointed out the great possibilities for Canadian manufacturers in China, Great Britain and Ireland for both import and export.

Major Johnson pointed out that in view of the unsettled conditions of Europe, British manufacturers were anxious to trade more extensively with the various nations of the British Empire. Dr. Ross pointed out that China was a market for every kind of product that we make in this country, both agricultural and industrial, and that, while Canada is buying very much larger quantities of goods from China than she did a few years ago, these goods are coming in through the United States and other countries, instead of direct, as they should do, and that importers and exporters should endeavor to establish direct connections.

DISCOVER LYE DEPOSIT NEAR VICTORIA, B. C.

Victoria, Sept. 27.—Discovery near Victoria is reported of a large deposit of volcanic ash, of tested cleansing properties, which it is claimed, will supersede on the market all the present lye cleaning compounds.

Letters To The Editor

Fort William, Sept. 25, 1922

Editor Canadian Grocer,

Did you ever have a letter along these lines? Why is it when so many firms, manufacturers, etc., are compelled to put on their goods name and quality and so on, that our fruit growers and packers in the east are not compelled to do the same with their different kinds of fruits? We have dozens of inquiries, with a window full of fruit, what is the name of a certain plum, pear or peach. We had an instance recently where our wholesaler advised us that they had a shipment of blue Damsons coming. We had prices and advertised them as Damsons. We delivered a basket to one customer about a mile from our store. Later the customer rang up on the telephone quite annoyed and said she had returned the plums as they were not Damsons at all; said she knew Damson plums when she saw them and had picked bushels of them. All we could do was to explain that the wholesaler had told us they were Damsons and we were sorry for the mistake.

We have had a similar complaint on peaches but I must say it is very rare. However I think if the shipper stamped each basket with the name of each particular fruit it would help the retailer a great deal and it would not be any hardship on the shipper.

A. A. BLACK.

Editor Canadian Grocer:—

A system of giving photographs away is now in vogue.

The photographer sells the merchants some pasteboard cards, about the size of a Postal card—with figures stamped on it, and Mr. Merchant punches out the amount of each purchase. When the card is all completed the buyer has the privilege of a free photo from the photographer.

Photograph Premiums

Please advise me if there is not some Federal Legislation against this sort of thing.

There is also a system of a manufacturer enclosing in each package a small piece of tinware or crockery, which is given away with the sale. Is this thing legal?

Editor's note—There does not seem to be any law to prevent merchants from giving these cards entitling them to free pictures at the photographer's. The system of giving articles away in packages is perfectly legal but we understand there is an effort being put forward to have the government cancel this privilege at the next session.

Stephen Towns, for many years a grocer at Laurentian View, near Ottawa, passed away last week at the age of 73 years.

Will be Subject to the Most Rigid Gov't Inspection

Ottawa, Oct. 2. (Special)—As a consequence of a recent discovery in Canada of a considerable quantity of deteriorated potted meat, the product of an outside company, instructions have just been issued under the authority of Dr. F. Torrance, Veterinary Director General, for the rigid inspection, in future, of all such goods coming into Canada. The instructions which have gone out in the form of a telegram to the Health Department's inspectors, are as follows:—

> "Do not permit entry of canned, potted or preserved meats, even although marked and covered by a certificate, until samples have been taken and submitted for analysis. This action is due to meat poisoning cases in ——— and to a large shipment being found in Canada unfit for food."

It has been a general rule in the past to admit into Canada such goods of this nature as have been accompanied by a certificate issued by the Government food authorities in the country of origin, but such practise is to be discontinued from now on, according to the Department.

Discussing the matter with the Ottawa representative of Canadian Grocer, Dr. R. Barnes of the Meat and Canned Foods Branch, said the real danger lay in the distribution of canned and potted meats which were poisonous, but where the poison was undetectable to the average user, owing to the absence of odors. "All Canadian meat products are subject to the most rigid inspection," he said, "and there is no reason why the products of other countries should not receive the same treatment. This recent discovery has taught us to take no chances in the future."

SHOWER OF CANNED GOODS AND SOUP CUBES PUT ROBBERS TO FLIGHT.

Calgary, Alta., Oct. 3.—A volley of tinned tomatoes and soup cubes fired by Fred Langston, a grocer, routed two masked and armed hold-up men who attempted to rob him in his store, last evening. As Langston heaved the tins, one of the robbers opened fire with a revolver. The bullets whistled dangerously near Langston's head, but he gamely reached for another tin, and as it struck the wall it burst, the ripe fruit descending in a shower over the robbers. A bottle of soup cubes almost knocked one of the gunmen off his feet and then the grocer reached for a cheese. This was too much for the gunmen, who lowered their guns and fled. Their flight was hastened by the screams of Mrs. Ollie Lennox, a customer, who dropped to the floor, screaming that she had been shot—when a soup cube struck her in the leg.

Western Canada Notes

H. P. Pennock & Co., Winnipeg, have been appointed the Prairie Province representatives for Maple Crispette Co., Ltd., Montreal.

City Dray Company have changed their name and are now known as Boulton's Storage. A. S. Boulton will continue as general manager. Their warehouse is situated at 230 Princess Street, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Fred G. Campbell of the W. C. Macdonald Regd., Montreal, spent a few days in Winnipeg with their western representatives, The W. L. MacKenzie Company, Limited. Mr. Campbell is going as far west as the coast.

H. S. Urquhart has severed his connection with the F. W. Smith Limited store, at Weyburn, Sask., to accept a position with R. H. Williams and Sons' departmental store in Regina, where he will have charge of the grocery department.

MAY OPEN SHOWROOMS FOR CANADA'S GOODS IN SHANGHAI

Ottawa, Sept. 25.—In an endeavor to widen Canadian trade in the Far East, the Department of Trade and Commerce is contemplating opening show rooms for Canadian products in Shanghai, China. If the arrangements are perfected, the department, according to present plans, will authorize the necessary expenditures for the opening of show rooms and will charge manufacturers nominal fees for space. The exhibit will be under the control of the Canadian Trade Commissioner. Manufacturers entering the exhibit will be called upon to supply their own salesmen, who will be responsible to their principals. The desirability of opening similar show rooms in other countries will be determined by the success of this project.

EDDY CO. MAY ERECT A MATCH FACTORY AT DESERONTO

According to a despatch from Ottawa, the construction of a match factory that would entail the expenditure of $1,000,000 has been considered by officers of the E. B. Eddy Company, Limited, of Hull, Que. The initial plans, it is stated, provided for the erection in Hull of the most modern match factory in the British Empire.

Owing to substantial increases in assessment, it is stated that the company have abandoned the plans, for the present at least. There is a possibility, however, of the Eddy Company erecting the factory at Deseronto, where the company acquired, some months ago, a match factory.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THE CANADIAN sugar market is higher this week. The demand continues normal, with one refinery quoting $7 per cwt., basis Montreal, and the other refineries quoting $7.10, although it is said that competition is being met. According to reports demand for the refined is improving in the States and second hand sugars, it is stated, are getting scarcer. U. S. refiners quote $6.25 per cwt. seaboard basis, less two per cent. A general advance is reported in the market for raws. Sales are reported at 33-16c. equal to 4.96 duty paid. Only one Central is now working on old crop sugars in Cuba, and the weather is reported favorable for the growing crop.

Prices on the new pack of corn and tomatoes are announced this week, and show much easier levels, as compared with a year ago. The dried fruit situation as regards raisins and currants is very strong, and slightly higher levels are quoted on these products. Some wholesalers state that they are paying higher prices for new teas than they are asking for spot stocks. Consequently with present stocks disposed of, the market for new teas must necessarily be higher. The coffee market continues in a strong position. Rices are steady with an improved demand. Cereals are inclined to be easier, and lower prices are named on rolled oats both in bulk and in the packages this week. Nuts are unchanged, with a very good inquiry for the same. Shelled walnuts are strong. Spices continue active, with price levels firm for most varieties.

The flour market is steady, with a very good demand. Millfeeds are quiet with prices easy.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Oct. 5.—The grocery market continues to show more activity and with a temporary improvement in sugar and more strength and confidence in many lines the trade is altogether better. The new prices on canned tomatoes and corn have been announced and show a marked reduction over last year's prices. There is some cutting in cereals in prospect of lower prices on the new milling. Package rolled oats were reduced in price late last week. In both the rice and the spice market attention is directed towards the political condition in the Near East. The tea market is strong and further advances in black teas are recorded. Japan teas are also strong. The coffee market locally shows no change. Smyrna figs are practically off the market but Spanish figs are plentiful so far. Higher prices are recorded on California raisins. Bordeaux shelled walnuts are slightly lower in price. Tomatoes are higher in price but cauliflower is reduced. Grape fruit is reduced and peaches are advanced. There is no change in molasses or corn syrups.

COFFEE IS UNCHANGED

Montreal.

COFFEE.—The local coffee market shows no change but there is uneasiness in primary markets which at any time may turn into weakness. At the present time the demand is improved locally although buying is not heavy.

CUTTING CEREAL PRICES

Montreal.

CEREALS.—There is little or no actual change in the cereal market but prices are being cut. Rolled oats are selling from $3.00 up to $3.35 a bag. The average price for rolled oats is about $3.25 a bag although in reality the market for spot stocks is steady. Retailers are buying in limited quantities and are looking forward to lower prices this winter.

TOMATO PRICES ADVANCED

Montreal.

VEGETABLES.—Tomato prices have advanced rapidly as a result of the frosts of last week. Rose tomatoes are unchanged in price. Cauliflower on the other hand is lower in price, selling at $1.00 per doz. heads. A big crop of pumpkins are marketed at low prices. Potato and onion prices are unchanged.

FIRMNESS IN RICE

Montreal.

RICE.—The condition of the rice market is now entirely dependent upon the political conditions in Europe. If trouble comes among the Mussulmen in India there will altogether likely be a ban put on the exportation of rice from that country and prices will advance rapidly. In the meantime there is more activity in the local market and the better grades of Honduras rice are firm and extra fancy grades are almost unobtainable. Local rice brokers state that if the situation in the east clears up there is no reason why rices should not be easier in price this fall.

DEVELOPMENT IN SPICE MARKET

Montreal.

SPICES.—As in rice interest in the spice market is centered on the trouble in the east. Unrest among the Arabs and other Mohammedans might easily affect the trade with the east coast of Africa and the west coast of India. There is little actual change in the market but local conditions are somewhat improved although there is some cutting in pepper prices.

TEA MARKET STRONG

Montreal.

TEAS.—The tea market maintains its strength. All reports from primary markets indicate a strong tone. During the past two weeks black teas on this market have advanced three and four cents a pound. There is however a wide range of prices quoted on the different grades Japan teas are also strong and the third crop is commanding a high price on primary markets. NEW TOMATOES AND CORN

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—The new price on canned tomatoes and corn have been announced and some of the local wholesalers are quoting the new pack of Standard 2½ tomatoes at $1.42½ a dozen. They emphasize the fact that at this price this size of standard tomatoes should sell at 15 cents each in the retail stores. The standard 2½ tomatoes are costing the wholesalers $1.25 a dozen, the choice $1.30 a dozen and the fancy prices have not yet been made. The 2s' are quoted at 95 cents a dozen for standard and $1.00 a dozen for choice. Gallon tomatoes were listed at $4.40 a dozen for standard and $4.45 a dozen for choice. No. 2 standard corn is quoted at $1.05 and choice at $1.10. Gallon corn on cobs is quoted at $5.50 a dozen for standard and the 2½'s corn on cobs at $2.10. Bartlett Pears No. 2 in heavy syrup are listed at $2.10 a dozen. These prices are the canners' quotations and show a marked reduction on the opening price of last year.

SMYRNA FIGS FINISHED

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—Local wholesalers state that only a tantalizing amount of Smyrna figs have been offered on the market and that these have already been taken up. Spanish layer figs of good quality are offered in good quantities. The 7 crown 2½ inch figs are quoted at 16½c; the 6 crown at 15c and the 5 crown at 14c. Pulled figs, 8 crown are listed at 16½c; 7 crown at 15c and 5 crown at 14c. These are expected in Montreal about Nov. 4. Sun-Maid raisins have been advanced to 15c a lb. in 25 lb. and bleached Thompsons are quoted at the same price. The new season's Malaga cluster raisins are quoted at $4.50 a box for the 3 crown, a reduction of 25c on the old price. No Camel brand Smyrna package figs are expected on the market and orders that were placed with wholesalers cannot be filled.

GRAPE FRUIT EASIER

Montreal.

FRUITS.—There is a larger supply of grape fruit on the market at easier prices. The demand shows some improvement and prices range from $5.00 to $6.00 a case. Peaches are disappearing from the market and prices are higher. There is a good supply of pears offered. There has been no frost as yet to fit the Fameuse apples for the market. TEMPORARY REACTION IN SUGAR

Montreal.

SUGAR.—A temporary reaction has occurred in the sugar market and some refiners have advanced their prices. Atlantic Sugar is advanced to $7.00 from $6.75 and Canada Sugar Refineries have brought their price up to $7.10. For a time there is strength in the raw market but this will not last long since a good crop of sugar beets will be ready for the market this month. Just now the situation in Cuba shows improvement. Practically all the spot stocks of raws have been taken up and the market is stronger with a bigger demand for granulated sugar. Some authorities attribute the increased demand to the activity of the confectionery trade. Local wholesalers are limiting their buying in the expectancy of lower prices on sugar this fall.

PACKAGE OATS REDUCED

Montreal.

PACKAGE GOODS.—The large size of package oats have been reduced by the millers, making the price for Quaker, Tilson and Robin Hood large, both square and round $4.80 a case. This is the only change of note in the package goods market. Other lines are steady in price with a fair movement.

THREE REFINERIES ANNOUNCE ADVANCE IN SUGAR

As Canadian Grocer goes to press, Atlantic Sugar Refinery announces an advance of 25c per cwt., making the price Montreal basis $7 per cwt.

Acadia and Redpath sugars have advanced 10c per cwt., making the price $7.10 per cwt. Montreal St. Lawrence sugar is unchanged at $7.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Oct. 4.—An improved demand for groceries is reported by wholesalers although buying cannot be said to be in heavy orders. The feature of the markets is the continued strength of dried fruits as applied to raisins and currants. Wholesalers state that buying of these fruits at present levels is good buying, as there is every probability of advances, with a continuance of the complicated conditions that are now existing in the East. The California raisins are in great demand. Canned goods are beginning to move in greater volume, and the new packs of tomatoes and corn are now being sold. The sugar demand is normal, with one refiner quoting $6.75 per cwt., and the others quoting the list price at $7. However, it is stated that competition is being met. Teas and coffees continue to show strength. There is moderate buying of rice. Honey is in good demand at fairly easy levels. Cereals, that is, rolled oats, show a decline this week, and the cereal situation is generally easier.

BEANS AT EASY LEVELS

Toronto.

BEANS.—Offering of beans at country places seem to be in fairly good supply, wholesalers quoting the Canadian hand picked and 1 lb. pickers at from $3 to $3.25 per bushel. The market is fairly easy at these levels.

MODERATE INQUIRY FOR RICE

Toronto.

RICES.—There is a moderate inquiry for rice on spot, but advices from primary markets indicate a quiet demand. Wholesalers are quoting Blue Rose fancy rice at from 7¼ to 7¾c. per lb. Tapioca is quoted at from 7½ to 8c. per lb.

SHELLED NUTS IN GOOD DEMAND

Toronto.

NUTS.—There is a very good demand for the shelled nuts, and prices are unchanged as compared with a week ago. Manchurian walnuts are steady at last week's advance, dealers quoting them at from 53 to 57c. per lb. Bordeaux walnuts are steady at fro 57 to 62c. per lb. Advices from primary markets indicate that the situation in pecans is firm in both shelled and nuts in the shell. Mexican stocks, it is stated, are the centre of interest. The failure of the Texas pecan crop has made Mexican nuts prominent. Brazil nuts are unchanged. Prices on California walnuts are expected shortly, and a reasonable and attractive basis is expected.

CEREALS ARE EASIER

Toronto.

CEREALS.—The market for cereals is inclined to easiness, and this week some wholesalers are quoting rolled oats in bags of 90 lbs. as low as $3.10 per bag. The entire market for bulk cereals is easy, and although prices, with the exception of rolled oats show no change as compared with a week ago, dealers state there is a tendency on the part of the trade to buy only in moderate quantities awaiting lower prices.

CANNED GOODS IN BETTER DEMAND

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—Canned goods are moving in better volume, and the new pack of corn and tomatoes is now on the market. The new prices on these lines on the basis f.o.b. factory, are announced on page 22 of this issue. Canned peas are moving in active demand at steady prices, standards at $1.42½ per doz. and early Junes at $1.87 per doz. Beans are unchanged at the prices announced last week, and other lines of canned goods are steady. Jams at the present time are moving slowly.

HONEY IN GOOD DEMAND

Toronto.

HONEY.—The market for honey is fairly active at the present time, dealers reporting a very good demand. The 5 lb. tins are selling at 14c. per lb., the 10 lb. tins at 13½c., the 60 lb. tins at 13c., and some dealers are quoting the comb honey at $3 per doz.

TEAS CONTINUE TO ADVANCE

Toronto.

TEAS.—Spot stocks of teas are getting in narrow volume. One dealer stated that he was paying as much for new teas as he was getting for old stock. Consequently with old stocks fast diminishing, there is bound to be an advance. All advices point to a continuation of strong markets at primary points, and the general upward trend of primary teas is bound to be reflected in spot stocks at an early date.

SYRUPS ARE UNCHANGED

Toronto

SYRUPS.—No change is reported in the market for syrups and molasses. There is the usual demand, although buying is slightly more active than it has been.

SUGAR DEMAND NORMAL

Toronto.

SUGAR.—The increased duty on raw sugars coming into the United States has, of course, enhanced the value. Prior to the passage of the Act, the duty paid value of raws was 4.61c., and afterwards 4.77c. Refiners seemed to think that the price of raws should have been reduced to allow for the increased duty, the quotation of 4.77c. being on the basis of 3c. c. & f. Since that quotation was announced, however, there has been a gradual advance, and on Friday last some 3,000 bags were sold at 3 3-16c. c. & f. equal to 4.96c. duty paid. According to reports from Cuba only one Central is now working on old crop sugars. The weather is reported favorable for the growing crop. On spot in the United States there appears a better demand for the refined, and it is stated that second-hand sugars are getting scarcer. Refiners still quote at 6.25c. seaboard basis less 2 per cent.

On the Canadian market the demand is normal. Atlantic refinery is quoting $7.00, while others quote $7.10 per cwt.

RAISINS IN STRONG MARKET

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—The feature of the market for dried fruits is the strength of raisins. All quotations on raisins show a tendency to advance. The market is strong and dealers look for even higher levels. It would seem that the present is a good time for the retailer to replenish his stock of this dried fruit. The situation in the East has brought about a strong position for raisins and currants, and as announced in last week's issue, high prices are not unlikely in these commodities. Dealers are quoting California sultana raisins at from 13½ to 14c. per lb. The seeded raisins in the 15 oz. packets are offered at from 15 to 15½c. and the 15 oz. packets of seedless raisins are 16c each. Thompson's seedless raisins 25½s are 14½c. per lb.

New prices are announced on peels this week. Citron peel is said to be in short supply, and is offered at 49c. per lb. for 12 lb. boxes. Lemon peel is 28c. per lb. for the 12 lb. boxes, and orange 28½c. for the 12 lb. boxes.

MILLFEEDS CONTINUE EASY

Toronto.

MILLFEEDS.—The market for millfeeds is at easy levels, and demand for the same is quiet. Wholesalers quote steady prices with last week.

FLOUR IS UNCHANGED

Toronto.

FLOUR.—The market for flour is steady but not strong. Prices remain as announced last week. Dealers quote first patents in cotton bags, on the basis of $6.90 per bbl., and second patents in jute bags at $6.30 per bbl.

VEGETABLES ARE STEADY

Toronto.

VEGETABLES.—Few changes are noted in the market for vegetables this week as compared with last. Dealers are quoting potatoes at from 70 to 75c. per bag, and onions in bags of 100 lbs. are from $1.75 to $1.85. Pickling onions in large baskets are offered at from $1.50 to $2. Sweet potatoes are now arriving freely and are quoted at $2.25 per hamper. Tomatoes are at easy levels, the large baskets now selling at from 25 to 35c. each. Gherkins are offered at from $1 to $1.25 for large baskets.

SPICES CONTINUE ACTIVE

Toronto.

SPICES.—No changes are reported in quotations on spices. There continues the same active inquiry that has been characteristic of the market for the past several weeks. Cloves continue to show strength, and while prices are steady the situation is very firm. The same is true of peppers and nutmegs. Celery seed whole is quoted at 45c. per lb., and Carraway seed whole is offered at from 20 to 25c. per lb.

FRUITS CONTINUE PLENTIFUL

Toronto.

FRUITS.—There continues to arrive plentiful supplies of peaches, plums and pears, although receipts are easing to some extent. Prices are easy, and show little change as compared with a week ago. The first cranberries of the season are quoted this week, with some dealers quoting half bbls. at $7.25. Oranges are arriving freely, and range in prices all the way from $4.50 to $11.50 per case according to size. Verdelli lemons are $5.50 for 30s and 36s. California Tokay grapes are $3.25 per box and the Spanish Malagas are $8.50 per keg.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, Oct. 4.—Wholesalers report an improvement in the volume of business. The harvest season has stimulated buying. Prices, however, for groceries, are steady and few changes are announced. Sugar prices have dropped another 25c per cwt. Cane syrups have also shown a decline. Tea and coffee markets continue firm. The rice market is unchanged and the situation is strong. Spices are active with a continued brisk demand and prices are moving upward. Canned goods are steady with prices on sardines and lobsters showing an advance. New prunes have arrived on the market. Beans are reported easier.

CANNED GOODS STEADY

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—The canned goods market is steady and new prices are expected on tomatoes and corn the first of next week. Peas and corn are in good demand. A quotation of $5.10 per dozen for halves is named on lobsters but with new arrivals of winter pack higher prices are expected. Sardines are much firmer and lines which have been selling at 11c are now quoted at 11½ per tin. There is no change in the canned fruit situation but as the season advances an improvement is expected.

RICE MARKET UNCHANGED

Winnipeg.

RICE.—The rice market continues to show strength at primary points, and spot rice is firmer. Export demand is the chief reason of the increased strength for Southern rice. Oriental rice continues to rule firm.

JAMS CONTINUE FIRM

Winnipeg.

JAMS.—Cheap offerings of jam which have been on the market for some time are becoming gradually absorbed and it looks now as if opening prices on the better grades will remain stabilized and firm in the near future. As the season advances and the demands for fresh fruits drop off it is expected that there will be an active demand for jams.

NEW PRUNES ARRIVE

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUITS.—New prunes have arrived on the market and quotations on the following sizes are as follows:—30s—40s—21c per lb.; 40s to 50s—17½c; 50s to 60s—16c; 60s to 70s—14½c; 70s to 80s—13½c; 80s to 90s—12½c. The first shipment of new Canadian evaporated apples has arrived and are quoted in 50 lb. boxes at 18½c per lb. Further shipments are expected within 30 days and lower prices are expected by the trade. The feature of the raisin situation has been the withdrawal of several lines and the advance in others. At present sales locally are good and are expected to continue so for the remainder of the season. Apricots and peaches show no change in quotations and sales continue good.

LOWER PRICES ON BEANS

Winnipeg.

CEREALS.—The feature of the cereal market has been the drop in quotations on beans. Canadian hand picked is quoted at $3.25 per bushel. Foreign hand picked are responding to this price and the general tone of the bean market is easier. With new arrivals of oats it has not affected the market as yet but no doubt will do so. Present prices on bulk rolled oats are well maintained and sales are reported good. Package cereals appear to be selling freely but not in large quantities as buying is chiefly for immediate requirements.

Maintaining the Productivity of Many of Canada's Important Fisheries

Government System Whereby the Coastal Waters and Inland Lakes Utilized by Commercial Fishing Interests Are Replenished is Described

OTTAWA, Sept. 27. (Special).—A report just issued by the Fish Culture Branch of the Department of Marine and Fisheries furnishes some very interesting information respecting the work of that branch in maintaining the productivity of many of Canada's important fisheries. As a result of the collection and hatching of eggs, and the subsequent placing of almost countless numbers of fry in congenial waters, both the game fisheries and the coastal waters and inland lakes utilized by commercial interests are replenished.

The principal species with which the branch concerned itself were the salmon of the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, and the whitefish, pickerel and salmon trout of the inland fisheries. In all, approximately, 846,000,000 fish and fish eggs were distributed, including 21,000,000 of Atlantic salmon, 85,000,000 sockeye salmon of the Pacific coast, 165,000,000 pickerel and 535,000,000 whitefish.

In securing the eggs the branch cooperates very closely with the commercial fishing interests. A large proportion of the whitefish and pickerel eggs, and practically all the salmon eggs are obtained from the commercial catch. Weather conditions largely affect the collecting of the eggs and the number that may be obtained, especially on the Great Lakes, where many of the Department's hatcheries are situated.

The parent fish are taken principally in nets and the eggs removed. In the hatcheries close study must be given to the methods of rearing the fry. Experiments are constantly being conducted in regard to feeding. Many different foods are used and prepared in various ways. Certain foods are found to be excellent, but prove too expensive, while the fry soon tire of other varieties.

Canadian fisheries are an important natural resource which, apart from providing a substantial source of food supply, enter largely into export trade, yielding a large credit balance in foreign trade to offset necessary imports of commodities which Canada does not produce. Thus, every effort made towards stabilizing or increasing the output of fisheries by means of conservation and propagation should be encouraged.

Will Not Grant Any Extension for Lobster Fishing

Ottawa, Oct. 4.—No additional lobster fishing season will be granted in Western Nova Scotia this year. In a statement issued the other day the Department of Marine and Fisheries gives reasons for the refusal of requests that a fall season for lobster fishing be granted on the southwestern coast of Nova Scotia, which extends from St. Mary's Bay, Digby county, to Cole Harbor, Halifax county. The regular lobster fishing season on this coast is from the 1st of March to the 31st of May, but last year an additional season was granted there from November 1 to 15th of December. The ill-effects of this additional season are manifest, says the statement. During the regular season of last year 110,277 cwts. were taken and during the additional season 32.733 cwts. The result was that during the regular season this year the catch was only 62,100 cwts., while in practically every other district around the coast, it is said, there have been good increases.

Another reason for the refusal, according to the statement, is that the lobster fishing and canning industries are carried on all along the coasts of the Martime Provinces and Quebec, and an extension of the season in one district affects the business situation in all the others. One of the unanimous recommendations at the conference of lobster fishermen and packers at Halifax in 1918 was that there should be no extensions of the lobster fishing season in future, the statement says. It is said that the campaign of education which the Department of Fisheries has been carrying on with the object of protecting the lobster fisheries and bringing them up to the highest possible point, is bearing fruit on almost all portions of the coast.

Sockeye Salmon Market is Steady

The sockeye salmon market is steady although some holders—usually speculative brokers—are being forced by the banks to turn their stocks into cash. The B. C. Fishing and Packing Co. have guaranteed the prices of their brands of sockeye against any further decline. The cohoe market is weaker and in some cases packers are reducing prices as much as $1.00 per case. Pinks are selling fairly freely. Demand is good and the market may strengthen owing to a splendid foreign demand for Canadian salmon particularly from France.

Fine Weather a Boon to Maritime Fishermen

Montreal, Oct. 4.—(Special).—The unusually fine weather during the month of September of this year has been a great boon to the fishing trade and the fishermen particular. It has made their task easier, considering that the season of the Equinox generally brings bad weather and rough seas which not only makes the fisherman's task hazardous, but generally cuts down the catch of fish.

Considering the year to date on the whole it has been a particularly profitable one to the fishermen, according to A. H. Brittain, general manager of the Maritime Fish Corporation, Montreal. The catches have been heavy, the market demands fairly good with steady prices. The fishing towns and villages along the Atlantic coast show more prosperity and conditions are generally improved.

A Scotchman went to his doctor complaining of loss of appetite. The doctor advised him to exercise more; take his horse out of the stable and ride ten or fifteen miles a day—then he would come back ravenously hungry.

Andy considered a moment, then said: "Aye, but wadna some ither exercise dae? What aboot the horse's appetite?"

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Oct. 5.—There are few changes in the produce and provision markets. The warm weather has to some extent helped the sale of cooked and smoked meats although in both cases the prices are easy and show a downward trend. Cooked hams are reduced once more. Hog prices have held although there is no strength in the market. Beef prices are unchanged. The butter market is weak with bigger offerings and a dull export market. On the other hand cheese shows strength with smaller offerings since the dairy people have turned their attention to the butter market. Poultry is plentiful on the market and prices are easy although unchanged. Fish prices are steady with a good demand. The warm weather has increased the risk of shipping frozen fish and therefore strengthened the market in that department.

EASIER TONE TO BUTTER

Montreal.

BUTTER.—The butter market shows an easier tone with receipts for the week larger than that of the previous one and approximately five thousand packages more than that of the corresponding week of last year. While there is no change in wholesale prices there is a weakness in the market and the warm weather has a weakening tendency in the market.

CHEESE MARKET IS FIRM

Montreal.

CHEESE.—Cheese prices are firm but without any change. On account of the easy prices in cheese during the past month dairy people have been turning their attention towards butter with the result that the cheese receipts are much smaller than those of last year, although during the past week they have shown some improvement. The export market however, is dull.

COOKED HAMS LOWER

Montreal.

COOKED MEATS.—The warm weather of the past week has brought some improvement to the demand for cooked meats. Prices are weak and a further reduction is reported in the market. Prices on cooked hams now range from 40 to 47 cents a pound.

POULTRY IS PLENTIFUL

Montreal.

POULTRY.—There is no change in the poultry market. There are good supplies of both live and dressed on the market and the prices will likely be easy through this fall. During the past week there has been an improved demand for live poultry on account of the Jewish festival.

SMOKED MEATS EASY

Montreal.

SMOKED MEATS.—There is a decidedly easy tendency in smoked meats with a lighter demand, although the warm weather of the past week has resulted in some increase in the inquiry. The weakness of the hog market has had a direct effect upon smoked meats and a further reduction in prices would not be surprising.

HOG MARKET STEADY

Montreal.

FRESH MEATS.—No change in the quotations on hogs has occurred during the past week. The price is maintained, but there is no sign of strength in the market. Fairly good supplies are offered and quotations on cuts of fresh pork are steady. The beef market also is firm with quotations unchanged.

GOOD DEMAND FOR FISH

Montreal.

FISH.—The demand for fresh fish shows a marked improvement and prices are easy. The fishermen have had a remarkably good season and supplies are plentiful. Gaspe salmon is about finished, although there are some supplies coming from cold storage. There is a good supply of British Columbia spring and Cohoe salmon on the market. Halibut prices are firmer, but show no advance. During the past week prices on cod and herring showed an advance, but supplies are plentiful and a high price is not expected. The warm weather of the past week has made shipments of frozen meats more difficult and tends to strengthen the prices.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Oct. 4.—Few changes are noted in the produce markets this week. Butter and cheese are moving in fairly good volume at prices steady with a week ago. The market for live hogs continues to rule at fairly easy levels, with a correspondingly easy tone in allied markets such as provisions, cooked meats, and lard. Receipts of poultry continue to show increase, and prices are steady and firm. Eggs are higher, the fresh variety showing very light offerings with prices high. Storage supplies are moving into consumption in good volume and at strong values.

BUTTER HOLDS STEADY

Toronto.

BUTTER.—Produce dealers report no change in quotations on butter this week. The market is steady at present levels, with wholesalers quoting creamery prints number ones at from 38 to 40c. per lb. and number twos at from 35 to 37c.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG.—The feature of the market has been the decline in hogs. Selected live hogs are quoted at $10.50 per cwt. There is a weaker tone to the butter market. Cheese shows no change. Eggs are firmer and show an advance as the supply of new laid eggs is smaller and the export demand for storage eggs is improving. Lard is ruling steady. There is no change in cooked meats. Smoked hams are showing lower levels. Poultry receipts are heavier although prices are unchanged. There is an improvement in the demand for fish.

BUTTER MARKET QUIET

Winnipeg.

BUTTER.—The butter market is quiet with just a fair demand for domestic trade and little export. Wholesalers are quoting creamery prints No. 1 from 37c to 38c and No. 2 from 35c to 36c per lb.

EGGS SHOW STRENGTH

Winnipeg.

CANADA'S FIRMS IN NATIONS FOOD SHOW

generally. Thousands of housewives were there yesterday who learned what a variety of cheap and excellent dishes are available, and all ready for the table. One noted with some astonishment that the Overseas Dominions were not directly represented. They usually furnish well-arranged exhibits on these occasions, and seeing the important part they take in supplying our food they are very much missed. Other countries seem to have jumped at the chance. The Danes have put in a varied display and show what a large trade they do with us. The Swiss are well to the front, especially in condensed milks and creams, and any visitor can learn at Nestle's or other of the Swiss chalets in the hall how innumerable are the dainty ways in which these milks can be used. However, the Swiss are not having it all their own way. English firms are making a good show with evaporated milk, and American firms are also represented."

A visit paid to the exhibition confirms the above impression, and the value in which British consumption is held is further illustrated by the presence of large displays from Holland, Poland, France, Italy, and also from Esthonia and Japan, in some cases officially or semi-officially, and in others by private corporations.

Displays include provisions of all kinds, canned and preserved goods, confectionery, groceries, bakers' supplies, wines, fruits, and a variety of cooking and household appliances, and the presence of soda fountains and ice cream freezers testified to the increasing invasion of transatlantic tastes.

Direct Canadian exhibits are made by: The Maple Leaf Milling Company, Limited, Toronto; Wm. Clark, Limited, Montreal; Gerrard Wire Tying Machines Company, Limited, of Canada (wire tying machines for packing cases); W. K. Kellogg Cereal Company, Toronto (cereal foods shown by their London agents, S. D. Simond & Co., Limited); Wrigley's Limited, Toronto chewing gum); while "Columbia" evaporated milk packed by the Pacific Milk Company, Limited, Vancouver, finds a place in the stand of the V. K. Manufacturing Company, Limited; Canadian butter is shown by the firm of provision dealers (Spear Bros. & Clark, Limited, Bristol); and Crowson & Son, of London, include McLaren's Imperial cheese in an exhibit.

Fowler Manning of the Canadian Match Company of Canada, Montreal, spent a few days in Winnipeg with their Western representatives, the Donald H. Bain Company.

How Much Are You Worth?

In this country we reckon individual wealth in terms of a man's total assets. Jones is worth $5,000; Smith is worth $50,000; Brown is worth a million.

In France people estimate their wealth not by reckoning principal but by income—assured income. LeBlanc is worth 1,500 francs income a year; Garneau is worth 20,000 francs a year and Daudet is worth 250,000 francs a year.

The French can indeed teach us something. A man is worth only his absolutely safe yearly income, not the value of his securities, business and other assets that fluctuate in value.

Investments should not be reckoned in terms of their par value or even their market value but according to the income they bring. Investments have lost their value as such when they are not paying dividends or when interest is in default. The investments that will bring in the steady income are the ones you naturally seek. But how difficult it is to choose from among the array of tempting securities offered. So often securities that seemed so promising have proven utterly worthless.

THE FINANCIAL POST analyzes securities for investors. Whether you invest $500 a year, $5,000 a year or $50,000, you need its helpful weekly discussions on investment, business and finance. And you can profitably use its Service for Investors which gives individual advice on your own problems. You, as a subscriber, can ask as many questions as you like concerning your securities. They will be answered thoroughly and promptly.

How He Got His Man

A merchant in Montreal wanted a man to manage his store. He advertised in the daily papers and secured many replies. He also used an announcement in the Want Ad. page of CANADIAN GROCER and several replies were received. He chose his man from the latter. In fact, the only men who at all suited his purpose, were those who applied through this paper.

CANADIAN GROCER reaches business men in the trade. There are good men scattered all over Canada who read the CANADIAN GROCER and who are interested in such a proposition.

To get the man you want; to secure a position; a partner, to sell some used equipment; to buy second-hand equipment, use the Want Ad page of CANADIAN GROCER. It gets results.

REINDEER FLOUR

Why do so many leading grocers sell it?

Because Reindeer Flour is a flour of unsurpassed quality, whiteness and purity, milled from only the finest No. 1 Canadian Hard Wheat by a special process that greatly enhances its food value.

Because the excellent baking results it produces never fails to win steady, profitable repeat orders.

Testing and Tasting

Heinz Food Products are as good as skill and knowledge can make them.

In the Heinz experimental kitchen a chef dedicates his ability to the task of improving the 57 Varieties. Continuous research and experiment serve ever to advance their quality. Any new product considered for manufacture is thoroughly tried by experiment and by tasting committees. It must pass severe tests before it is considered worthy of being added to the list of Heinz Products, and not until we are sure that it is the best in its line is it put on the market.

This quality will serve you by making the 57 Varieties increasingly popular with your patrons.

Safer and Better Matches

EDDY'S Matches are safer and better. On that count alone they are the logical matches for you to sell.

Your customers know "Eddy's." Since 1851 "EDDY'S" and good matches have been inseparably linked in the minds of Canadian match buyers.

Bear in mind that there are no better Matches than Eddy's. There are no Matches better known, no Matches better liked, no Matches that pay as handsome profits to the dealer.

You're entitled to the bigger profits that go with Eddy's Match sales. Why be satisfied with less?

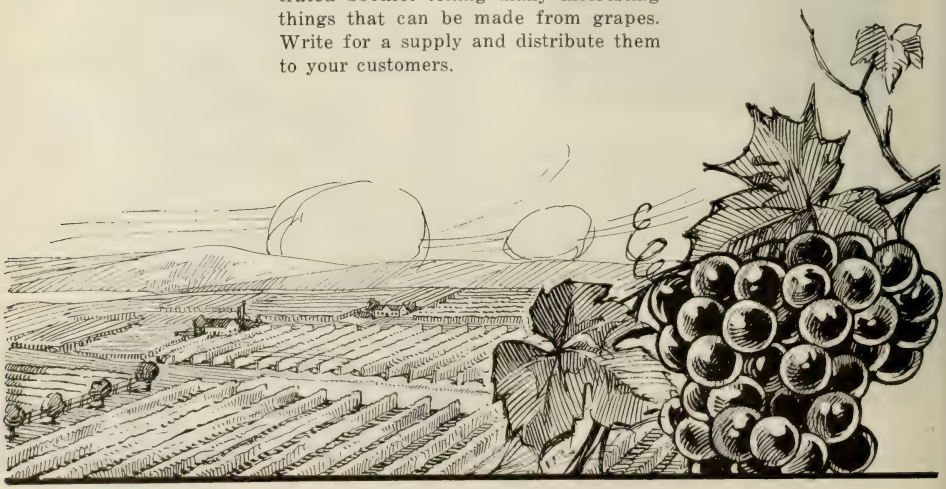
Tell Your Customers N.D.G. Grapes are at Their Best

These famous grapes from the Niagara Peninsula—Concord, Niagara and Red Rogers—are at their best. These varieties are unsurpassed for table use and making jams, jellies and wine.



Our extensive advertising campaign is telling your customers this story. Be prepared to supply the demand for grapes packed by the Niagara District Growers by placing your order, now, through your jobber.

We Back Keepsweet Dealers to the Limit

Let it be known throughout the length and breadth of Canada that dealers handling Keepsweet Cream and Keepsweet Milk have our backing to the very limit. We know beyond question of doubt that Keepsweet is one of the most wonderful sellers and repeat propositions introduced in years. This makes it possible for us to promise, guarantee and give our strongest help and assistance to every merchant handling Keepsweet Cream and Keepsweet Milk.

Few products of national prominence are backed by the volume of splendid newspaper advertising which Keepsweet gets. These advertisements are to help merchants handling Keepsweet sell the goods. And the advertising does sell!

Keepsweet Cream and Keepsweet Milk are national products nationally advertised, not only through newspapers but by direct methods.

We supply all merchants handling Keepsweet with window posters and store cards (mounted or unmounted), suggestions for window trims, small counter cut-outs and pamphlets and printed material. This is placed in each case of Keepsweet products—and is also supplied direct on request.

Sell Keepsweet. Learn what handling a real repeat proposition means and what real "backing up" amounts to. Order through your regular house or our nearest branch.

Sunset Quality

Has Never Been Approached By Any Other Household Dye

Because: when the making of a powdered dye is finished, that is where the real manufacture of SUNSET begins. It is then that we put into each cake the "know how" of the professional dyer that makes such wonderful results, so easy to obtain with SUNSET.

It costs real money to put this quality in, and there is no margin for the bait of "free goods"—but there is the positive assurance to the dealer that he is selling his trade the finest household dye ever manufactured in any country—bar none. Your customers know this quality and that makes SUNSET a sure repeater.

241,379 Gallons Sold In Six Years

The Wayne Honest Measure Gasoline Pump shown in the picture has been in daily operation for the last six years. In that time its owner, Mr. Louis Schaumburg, has sold 241,379 gallons of gasoline through it—more than 40,000 gallons annually.

Wherever there is an established highway, whether in a large city or small, whether for tourist travel or local use—there you will find good possibilities for the sale of gasoline.

The street in front of your store is such a highway. Are you making the most of the opportunity it affords?

Let us tell you more about the Wayne way of increasing your volume of sales with unusually rapid turnover. Write for Bulletin 276-CG. No obligation involved.

CALIFORNIA FIG PRICES ADVANCING

Offerings of Calimyrna figs in California have been withdrawn and all grades of White Adriatics have advanced ½c, except fancy, which are 1c higher.

"The advance is due to a greater crop shortage than was anticipated earlier in the season, and further due to the political situation in Smyrna. The Smyrna crop was large, and heavy importations were anticipated, but the recent destruction of that city and occupation of vast territory by the Turks has changed the entire fig situation. It is extremely doubtful if the 20,000-ton crop of figs can be imported at all, certainly not in time to supply the holiday trade —consequently California will be called upon to supply the entire country with a better grade of figs. Spain and Portugal are also importers to our markets, but the figs from these countries are inferior in quality as compared with the California product. Due to the heavy splitting of Calimyrnas in certain localities they are withdrawn from the market."

100 MILLION HANDS

Every hand in America—every man, woman and child—is reaching out for health every day. For health is a human essential. Now, Sunsweet advertising is making these 100 million hands reach out for prunes as the essential fruit-food. How? By hammering home the slogan, "Shake hands with health every day." And by focusing the eye of the consumer on the new-idea 2-lb. carton of Sunsweet Prunes.

To you—the man behind the counter—this country-circling campaign means just this: a real, man-sized opportunity to "Shake hands with profit every day." Ask your jobber or supply house about the 2-lb. shelf-handy carton—and send for Paul Findlay's new book specially written for his Sunsweet friends. MACDONALD'S

Every Dealer Knows It!

Ask any dealer about Macdonald's and he will tell you it's the name that sells it.

More than 60 years ago "The Tobacco with a heart" first came into prominence. It has stood "since the fifties" as Canada's standard. For four generations they have called for MACDONALD'S.

There is only one Macdonald standard, but a range of types including cigarettes. Two Blends with but a single aim—to please the individual taste—the now famous MACDONALD'S CIGARETTES and the new BRITISH CONSOLS Cigarettes.

WE HAVE often been asked why it is that prompt service is always given to enquiries received from any part of Canada;

Also why we are able to present to our readers every week such widespread market reports and other information about business methods of merchants, food regulations, etc.

Only a business paper that is a big national institution can do this. We find that the aggressive merchants, those with the bigger ideas, who want to extend their knowledge beyond their own small locality and beyond their own province, want and demand this service.

CANADIAN GROCER is one of the principal parts of the MacLean organization—the largest publishers of business and technical papers in the British Empire. Its connection with the other business and technical papers of The MacLean Publishing Co., all leaders in their respective fields, is an important reason why we give our readers this invaluable, national service.

Vol. XXXVI TORONTO, OCTOBER 13, 1922 No. 41

Cost 27.8 Per Cent to Do Business

Operating Expenses in Department Stores in 1921 Were Higher in Percentage of Net Sales Than in 1920—Costs Are Arrived at From Reports Made From 392 Department Stores in the United States and Canada

THE COST of doing business, according to the reports received by the Bureau of Business Research, Harvard University, was higher in department stores in percentage of net sales in 1921 than in 1920. The chief items which were higher in ratio to sales in 1921 were salaries and wages, rentals, and advertising. Many of the smaller items were almost the same in percentage of sales in both years. The gross margin between the cost of the merchandise and the sales was slightly higher in 1921 than in the preceding year, but the difference was less than the increase in total expense. Consequently the average net profit was lower in 1921. It is to be noted, however, that the department stores showed an average net profit for 1921 despite the depression, whereas the retail shoe trade, the retail jewelry trade, and the wholesale grocery business, for which the Bureau also has collected figures, each showed an average net loss for that year.

The department stores from which reports were received for both 1920 and 1921 showed an increase of 4.3 per cent. in net sales. This also was in contrast to the other three trades just referred to—the retail shoe trade having shown a decrease of 9 per cent. in net sales in 1921, the retail jewelry trade a decrease of 15 per cent., and the wholesale grocery business a decrease of 30 per cent. in net sales as compared with the preceding year.

301 Stores Make Reports

Reports on operating expenses in 1921 were received from three hundred and ninety-two department stores with an aggregate volume of sales of $724,820,000. The summaries in this regard, however, are based on the reports from three hundred and one firms with an aggregate volume of sales of $496,238,000.

The firms from which reports were received and tabulated were located in forty-two states, the District of Columbia, and Canada. One hundred and sixty-eight of these firms were located in cities with population less than 50,000; forty-nine firms in cities with population 50,000-99,000; fifty-nine firms in cities with population 100,000-699,000; twenty-four firms in cities with 700,000 population and over; and one firm was unidentified.

Operating expenses also are analyzed for five groups of firms classified according to their volume of sales. A supplementary summary also is given of operating expenses of the stores in five Federal Reserve districts. An analysis has been made of the stock-turn figures and of the gross margin and net profit or loss figures of the firms from which reports were received.

The volume of business of the individual department stores from which reports were received for 1921 ranged from $16,000 to $29,000,000. Only seventeen firms, however, among those reporting, had sales less than $100,000, and the average volume of sales was over $1,000,000. The aggregate volume of sales for the one hundred and forty-nine firms that sent in fully comparable reports for both 1920 and 1921 was $305,173,000 in 1920 and $318,352,000 in 1921. The group figures for these firms are given herewith:—

Net Sales	All Firms Reporting 1921	Firms Reporting Both Years 1920	1921
Less than $250,000	81	22	25
$250,000-$499,000	66	32	34
$500 000-$999,000	47	31	24
$1,000,000-$2,499,000	61	36	39
$2,500,000 and over	46	28	27
Total number of firms	301	149	149

Net sales is the figure that is used to represent the volume of business of each firm. It also is the figure on which the percentages of expense and of gross margin and net profit or loss are reckoned. It serves as the common basis for comparison. On each report it was determined by deducting from gross sales, returns and allowances to customers, as well as cash discounts to employees and other purchasers and amounts collected from customers for excise and luxury taxes.

Operating Expenses

The cost of doing business is represented by total expense. This is the sum of all items of expense, including expenditures for such items as supplies and postage, insurance, advertising, wages, and also salary for the proprietor or partners, rent of the store building whether owned or leased, and interest both on capital borrowed and also on the net amount of capital invested in the business. It does not include inward freight, express, and cartage or alteration costs which are accounted for in the merchandise statement as part of the cost of the merchandise. It also does not include excise or luxury taxes, which are deducted from gross sales, or federal and state income taxes, provision for which is made in the net gain statement after the net gain for the year has been determined.

Operating expenses in department stores in 1921—301 firms were as follows:—

Salaries and wages	15.4
Rentals	2.4
Advertising	2.4
Taxes (Except on Buildings, Income, and Profits)	0.6
Interest (On Capital—Borrowed and on Capital—Owned)	2.3
Supplies	0.8
Service Purchased (Heat, Light, Power, Delivery)	0.6
Unclassified	1.2
Traveling	0.5
Communication	0.2
Repairs	0.2
Insurance	0.4
Depreciation—Losses from Bad Debts	0.2
Other Depreciation	0.5
Professional Services	0.1
Total Expense	27.8

Total expense, which represents the cost of doing business, is the sum of the individual groups of expenses for which the common figures have just been explained.

Sugar Statistics for Period Ending July 15 Show General Improvement

Export Sales Were Heavy in July While Domestic Sales Dropped Off—Total Holdings of Raw and Refined Sugars Lighter

MONTREAL, Oct. 4 (Special).—The report of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics on the sugar market for the four weeks ending July 15 brings out some interesting evidence in connection with a market on which much attention is centered at the present time. During that period stocks of raw sugar held by the various Canadian refineries have steadily decreased. On the 24th of June 89,047,953 lbs. of raw sugar were on hand but by the 15th of July these had been brought down to 69,218,427 lbs. Even at that these stocks are 6,204,675 lbs. more than were on hand at the same date of 1921 and a very marked increase over the 14,055,765 on hand on Jan. 1 of this year.

Decreased Production

The melting and re-shipments show a proportionate decrease during that period in question but during the last week of the period an increase in the melting brought it up very close to the opening week of the four, which no doubt was due to the anticipated increase in the demand for August and September. It is also interesting to note that despite the apparent decrease in the production the total for the four-week perior is equal to twice the production of the same period of last year when the stocks on hand were much larger.

Large Stocks of Refined Sugar

Of refined sugar there is a much larger stock on hand this year according to these figures. While during the period these stocks steadily diminished their total is much more than that of 1921 and the manufacture of granulated sugar during those four weeks is nearly twice that of 1921. To be exact; for the month ending July 15, 1922, 113,462,928 lbs. of granulated sugar had been turned out while in the corresponding period of 1921 only 57,235,119 lbs. were made. The increased production is even more marked in the case of yellow sugar.

Less Buying in July

The total domestic shipment of sugar during the period in question was 98,043,243 lbs. and each week the amount showed a decrease which indicated the falling off in the consumption of sugar during that period. The export market however made up for the slack home market and during the period in question this year 122,041,271 lbs. of granulated sugar were sold while in that period of 1921 only 73,493,366 lbs. were disposed of.

General Improvement of Sugar

The proof of the general improvement in the sugar market lies in the fact that for Jan. 1 to July 15 of this year, 674,390,564 lbs. of sugar were sold by Canadian refineries while in the same period of 1921 only 400,203,752 lbs. were sold while the refineries were carrying over 73,686,478 lbs. of refined sugar from the previous year as compared with the 43,460,234 lbs. carried over this year.

Much Protest Over New Gasoline Pump Regulations

Retailers Object to Clause Stating That Pumps in Future Must be Placed on Sidewalks—Works Hardships With Merchants Who Have Pumps Already Installed

MONTREAL.—The proposed new by-law governing the installation of gasoline pumps in Montreal, is being received with considerable discussion on the part of many merchants, and disfavor is found in many quarters. A delegation of the Montreal branch, Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, recently waited on the special aldermanic committee and fully discussed the measure, recommending certain changes. The by-law is by no means a new one, it being brought to the attention of the city council two years ago, and again revived earlier this year. On both previous occasions action was deferred, but from present indications it would seem altogether probable that the law will be put into force on this, its third appearance, it being met with favor by the council with a few minor changes.

Provision is made in the new law that no reservoirs be installed under public property; that pumps must have an electric light on top of them illuminated for the same period as the street lights; that the centre of the pump must not be less than eighteen inches from the edge of the sidewalk and be at least five feet from any building, with the reservoir pipe at least four feet under the sidewalk. Permits to instal will only be given to the owners of the property at which the gasoline is to be sold, and accompanied by a plan and full details of the requirements.

Sidewalk Pumps

In discussing the proposals with M. Lapointe, local secretary of the R. M. A., it was pointed out that the clause which states that all gasoline pumps must be placed on the sidewalk was the one meeting with disapproval from the association. Many merchants who were now selling gasoline had their pumps installed inside the building with an overhead lead pipe to the edge of the pavement. This allowed them to sell the gasoline from the inside with no obstruction whatever to the sidewalk traffic. Under the new law they will be compelled to move the pump at least five feet from the building which means a complete tearing-up of the system. The worst feature is that many of these dealers will not be able to use their old pumps, as the specifications of the sidewalk pump call for a totally different apparatus than many of them are now using.

Merchants in Downtown Section

It is also clearly stated in the by-law that permits will only be granted in cases where a pump on the sidewalk will not hinder traffic or prove a nuisance in any way. At the present time there are a number of merchants in the downtown section, and even in the residential section of Montreal, selling gasoline. The question might well be asked, where will these dealers place their pumps? It is questionable whether a permit would be granted to such a store, certainly not on some of Montreal's busiest thoroughfares.

COST 27.8 P. C. TO DO BUSINESS

The common figure for total expense in 1921 for the three hundred and one firms from which reports were received was 27.8 per cent. of net sales. Substantially more than one-half the firms reported total expense between 24 per cent. and 30 per cent. of net sales; the concentration around the common figure was well defined. Although the common figure in 1921 was 27.8 per cent. of net sales, the grouping of the expenses indicated that the tendency is toward a lower ratio of total expense, probably approaching a normal in the future around 26 per cent. of net sales.

The highest total expense reported was 45.9 per cent. of net sales. This firm, which had a small volume of sales, had the highest figure for salaries and wages and also the highest net loss that was reported by any store. Its rate of stock-turn was less than one-half the common figure.

Hunters' Accounts Call for Special Service and Discretion—Window Displays Attract Trade—Good Service is Splendid Advertisement—A Suggestion for a Selling Window—Montreal Grocers go After This Trade

By Staff Correspondent Canadian Grocer.

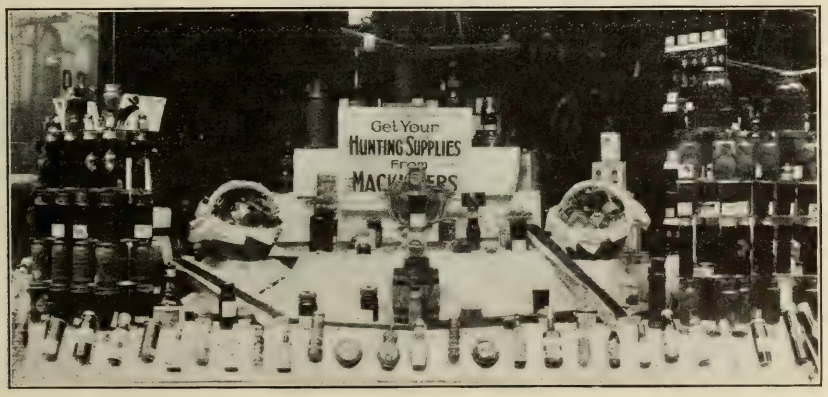
MONTREAL, Oct. 10.—There is now the opportunity for individual grocers to dress particularly attractive windows that will get new business. In every town and city in Canada there are a number of men, the number depending largely upon the size of the community, who are preparing to go on a hunting trip. Their needs are varied and peculiar to hunters. Men who, during the rest of the year, never think of buying groceries, leaving it to their wives or to their favorite restaurants or hotels, are now faced with the problem of buying provisions sufficient to carry them for one, two or three weeks. Then, too, their needs very often are in excess of their estimates, a sorry plight for a hunter, for their appetites are greater in the woods than in the cities.

Grocers To Their Aid

In this the grocer can be of great help to these men. They can suggest articles that will be needed and can check over the amounts and the items required. One grocer in Montreal every year gets orders from hunters to put up provisions for a number of men for a stated length of time. To him is left the problem of supplying all the provisions needed and the right quantities of those things. It is almost as annoying to have to take too much into the woods as too little, and therefore the grocer must execute his task carefully if he would hold the account and the confidence of the men for another season. It would be a poor stroke of business on the grocer's part to take advantage of the trust and include needless luxuries. There are a number of grocers in this city who have held the same hunters' accounts for fifteen years and each year pack and ship the provisions with no further instructions than that they are leaving on a certain date for a certain place.

A Good Advertisement

Such an accomplishment is a great advertisement for a grocery store for these men spread the word around their clubs and their lodges that they get their supplies from "so-and-so," who gives them particularly good service. In fact, service to this class of trade is of utmost importance, since men rarely barter over the prices.



C. P. Macklaier of St. James St., and George Graham of St. Catherine St. make a particular feature of this service during the hunting season and each year supply many camps and individual hunters. Mr. Macklaier, whose store is in the down-town section of the city where the business offices are located and where the men who do the hunting frequent the streets, makes it a point to dress a window each hunting season featuring this service.

Dressing a Hunting Window

A hunter's supply window offers the grocer a wide scope for originality. In the first place a list of all the lines of food required for a two weeks' stay in the woods should be carefully made. Then a suitable background should be arranged which will lend the atmosphere of the woods. This will largely depend for its nature upon the size of the window. Woodland scenes can be easily made in a fairly large window. Branches of fir and pine trees can be tacked up around the sides and back of the window and red and brown leaves strewn upon the base of the window, with perhaps some moss or a bag of sand spread on the floor. A camp fire is not difficult to make with a few stones piled up, an iron grating over the top and a pile of sticks, under which is hidden an electric lamp covered with a piece of red crepe paper. A few guns, some ammunition, a decoy for ducks, a haversack and a kit bag will complete the scene.

Where Sales Are Made

Then comes the selling point. Tins of condensed milk, canned fish, flour, bacon, butter, biscuits, cereals, tea and coffee, etc., can be arranged about the little camp and a card near the front of the window to tell of the special service to hunters will complete the window. The scene can be more or less elaborate according to the grocer's choice and the size of the window, but those who in other years have made such a bid for this kind of trade claim that it is a profitable undertaking.

C. P. Macklaier, St. James Street, Montreal, does a big business in catering to hunters' needs. The above illustration shows how he recently dressed his window with a view of increasing sales of hunters' supplies.

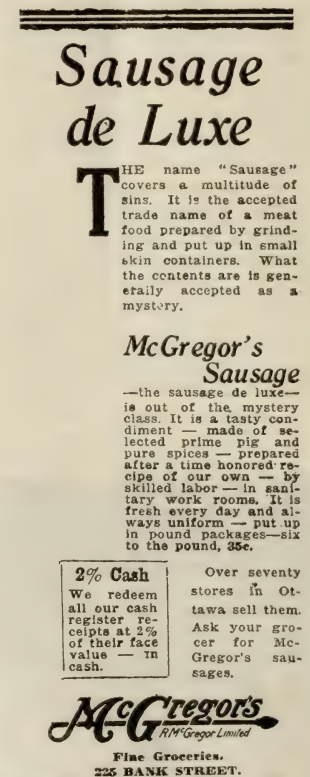
Grocer Who Advertises Should Consider Whether Attention is Secured and Held, Interest Aroused and Desire Created—Reputation of the Store Ought to be Evident in Every Statement—Some Points Worth Remembering

FROM time to time the editor of Canadian Grocer is in receipt of inquiries from members of the craft with regard to advertising. This is something in which every man in business is interested. As a merchant of Weyburn, Sask., pointed out recently, advertising pays only when the man who advertises makes it pay. Some points which the grocer will find useful in his efforts to make his advertising pay are presented hereunder, being extracts from an address delivered before businessmen's organizations in different places by the editor of a sister publication:

With regard to newspaper advertising it may be said that it travels far and wide. It is the medium through which the merchant gets his message to the people in their homes. The merchant who fills his ad with store news and interesting information about the goods he carries, is sure to win the favorable attention of the reader. It is not necessary to exaggerate to get the attention of prospective buyers. Of course, headlines like "The Greatest Value Ever Offered," will attract attention, but when used too frequently, will destroy confidence in advertising. It is sufficient to state facts. If you have an excellent bargain, say so, but tell the truth about the goods.



Salesmanship In Print

Simple words, short sentences, few ideas. These three rules might be kept in mind by those who write copy for newspaper ads. Big words and involved sentences will not be read. Newspaper advertising is not a mystic art. It is simply good salesmanship in print. It permits the merchant to talk to the customer in the home. A good deal could be said here about dressing the ad in the right type. In an attempt to emphasize some merchants overdo the thing and by the use of too much bold type, underlined type and cap type, they get, not emphasis, but a monotony of noise.

From what I have read and heard I believe I am safe in saying that ten merchants have failed because they advertised too little to every one who failed because he advertised too much. Certainly hundreds of stores have remained small due to neglect of advertising.

In your advertising, be absolutely honest. Put your reputation in every statement. You may, as a leader, occasionally sell goods "below cost," but don't overdo this sort of thing. Every person knows that no man can afford to do business on this basis.

No matter whether you have a daily or a weekly paper in your local field, considerable thought should be given to your newspaper advertising. Buying space in a paper should be considered the same as buying merchandise, to produce a profit and for no other reason. Advertising in your local paper can be made profitable if used right, but it is a waste of money if not used in the proper way. The first thing to do is figure out how much money you can afford to spend. Then proportion this amount over a year's campaign, because it is the best policy to advertise consistently with every issue of the paper and preferably the same location in the paper throughout the year, so that readers know unconsciously where to find it. Then set aside so much for special sales, for Christmas and other times, when it will pay you to use additional space. Then in preparing your copy give news about the merchandise you sell, its description, quality, price, etc. If careful attention is given to the appeal and if you advertise consistently along business-like lines there will be no doubt as to the result, but if you look upon the space as almost worthless and leave the same copy in for numerous issues at a time, not thinking it worth while to make a change, then you can be assured in advance that you have simply wasted your money.

Illustrating an advertisement that is bound to attract attention and excite interest in lines advertised.

Test of a Good "Ad"

How long would you take a daily paper that changed its subject matter only twice a week? Your answer relates to the query: How often should I change my ad?

The final test of a good advertisement should be as follows:

Does it command attention? Why?
Is the attention held? Why?
Does it arouse interest? How?
Does it create desire? How?
Has the reader any doubt how to act? Why?

The various fundamental appeals may be classed as:

(1). Profit or economy—for a money-saving appeal will meet with instant response.

(2). Health—peopie are always open to suggestions along this line.

(3). Pleasure and comfort—man loves ease, pleasure, comfort and satisfaction.

(4). Pride and vanity—through quality and style and the high character of the store.

(5). Affection—such as Christmas and June, the month of brides, etc.

(6). Knowledge and progress—educating public to uses of certain things.

If a man's advertising has some distinguishing feature the name will become a secondary feature. The public will know at a glance just whose message they are reading.

Spasmodic advertising is worse than useless. It is neither fair to the advertiser nor the medium. Old experienced advertisers will tell you that it is better to have never advertised at all than to have advertised and quit. Again, it may be all very well to tell people to stop at a certain store, but it is much better to tell them why to stop there. The "reason why" advertisement is proving to be the most profitable in these days of strong competition. The hundred per cent. efficient advertiser is the one who cares for his "ad" as faithfully as he posts his ledger. He finds out what ads appeal to him—and why. He analyzes them and picks out their good points.

Free Write-Up Menace

It is difficult to speak on this subject without mentioning the free write-up or puff. Gradually merchants are getting away from this. This free write-up does not mislead the reader. It merely destroys his confidence. Like the fake "ad," the free write-up hurts both publisher and advertiser in the long run. It is to their mutual profit, therefore, to make a good newspaper for the reader.

The main point, though, about advertising is that an engine of one-cat power running all the time is more effective than one of forty-horse power standing still, for the so-called advertising graveyards are filled with those who used forty-horse power campaigns, which covered only a certain distance and then came to a stand-still.

The advertising that pays biggest returns is the result of actively developed ideas backed by vigorous selling plans. Advertising should be considered solely as a business proposition, not as a charity, not as a duty, but simply because it is service with a cash value.

The fundamental principles of where to advertise are always the same, the application of these principles is always different. All advertising mediums have some value. What medium to use every advertiser must determine by an individual analysis. The determining factor for every retail dealer is the number of possible buyers of goods which the medium reaches. Newspapers and trade magazines are good. The former goes into the home. It goes where no other sales force can go. The trade paper secures dealers' co-operation. It shows just why such and such a line should be boosted. It enlists the merchant in the service of the manufacturer.

Trade Paper Advertising

Says Mr. Rowell, of the Lloyd Manufacturing Company: "We shall always be great advertisers. We know its power. We will most likely continue in the newspaper and magazine field, but we shall never forget the service rendered by trade papers." At the present time the Lloyd Company uses page space every month in every periodical given over to their line of activity.

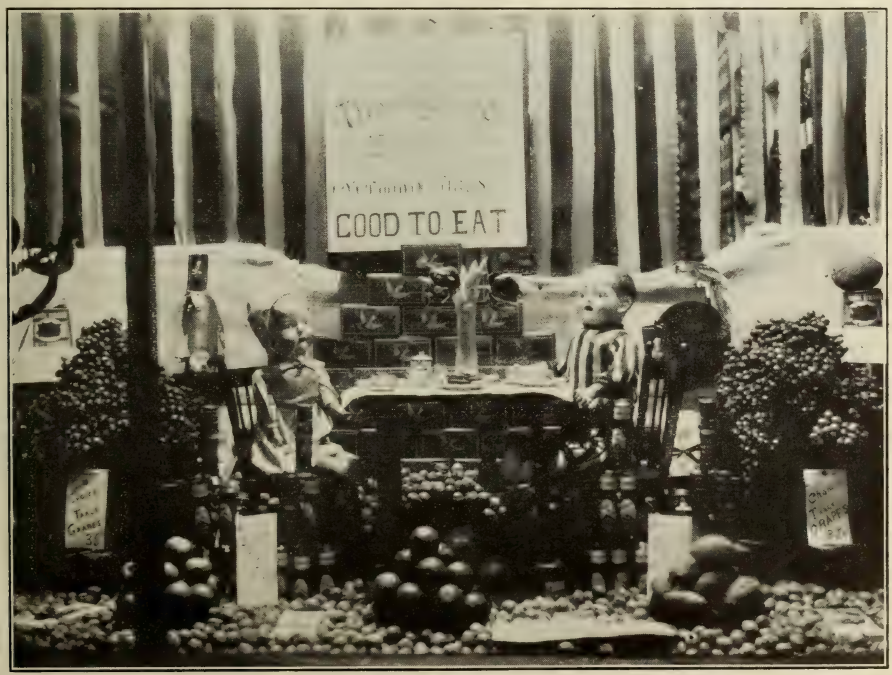
"In conclusion, it is admitted there are in all five results which may be secured by advertising:

"(1). The most progressive business men now budget the advertising appropriation to be attributed to insurance.

"(2). Aggressive advertising cuts down the cost of selling, thereby reducing the marketing expense.

"(3). Intensive advertising is employed as a means of increasing gross receipts through the raising of the price without loss of sales.

"(4). Intelligent advertising does the missionary work of the salesman who is sent out to enlarge markets by cultivating the established trade or by sales to new customers.



"(5). The growth of gross sales of a product is usually directly proportional to the extent or existence of the advertising, increasing when these increase, and falling off with the cessation of advertising effort."

A Wise Crack

The farmer was showing me the result of fine growing weather and superior skill in cultivating, when I said to him:

"Well, you ought to be satisfied with such crops as these. There is certainly nothing lacking. You have no cause for complaint this year."

The old farmer scratched his head and stood in a meditative mood for a moment, then hesitatingly replied: "Well, you know, such crops as these is pesky hard on the soil."

The above illustration is a splendid window display of good things to eat for the Thanksgiving season. The two dolls sitting at the table in the center is a good idea as it tends to put life in the display causing people to stop and look. The balance of the display is composed of grapes, nuts, apples, sweet potatoes, canned pumpkin, etc. The window was dressed by Jenkins & Sons, Charlottetown, P. E. I.

Hard Luck Finds Grocer Unprepared

Here is the Story of a Grocer Who Made Bookkeeping a Secondary Consideration and Regrets it—Was Doing so Well That He Neglected to Study His Business—Then Disaster Came and Left Him in a Bad Way

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

A MAN kept a little store centrally located where trade sought him out with spot cash trade and he prospered. He did so well that he neglected to study his business—things were coming too easily for that. Then a local disaster wiped him out, leaving him only a fund of $1,400 which fortunately he had in bank. He started with that, plus—well, let him tell it:

"I added some more to that, just how much I do not know. I just put in insurance money as it came in. My aim was to build the business. Kept no records, so do not know amount of investment. I know now I took the wrong course in making books my second consideration instead of having good records."

Now he needs a surplus to tide over readjustment, but he has not got it. He finds he has lost money and cannot tell where or how, but he "thinks it has been wrong figuring of margins and not keeping expenses as low as possible. To-day I owe very nearly as much as I own." He asks for frank criticism, advice, "scolding"; and he gives some details, thus:

"1st. Am I paying help too much? As far as I have observed, they are strictly honest. I pay store clerk $20 week, also young lady for clerking and help in office, $8. Delivery boy who keeps harness in shape, etc., $20. As for me, I keep record of everything I take for home, same prices as I sell for—no regular salary but just enough to get along on. I know I should take a salary, but it has been hard sledding and I am trying to keep business going."

Apparently Good Credit Manager

"2nd. We do mostly credit business, sales averaging $26,000. Credit losses from 1918 to December 31 this year will probably be $350—is that reasonable or not?

"I have been groping for a good bookkeeping system. At last have what I think will fit my needs in a total record book made by a certain firm and I use the same firm's credit register. I also keep purchase book. Only started all this last May. Wish I had started it four years ago, as a few minutes each day does all the bookkeeping—and now we know where we stand!

"I try to keep windows attractive—in fact, one window I give constantly to manufacturers who keep it in fine shape. I almost forgot to say that I was forced to move fourteen months ago to a location not so good as I had, but we give everyone a square deal and never allow a customer to leave dissatisfied."

I wrote this man that the information was not complete but enough for a beginning, as follows:

Certainly paying too much wages. Clerk, young woman and delivery boy cost $2,496. "I do not know what it costs you to live and you admit you do not know, probably not less than $100 per month. That is another $1,200 and makes wages expense of $3,696. Figuring against sales of $26,000 that is 14¼ per cent. Now, years ago wages were fixed at a limit of 6½ per cent. to 8 per cent. on sales. In 1919 the average was 8.3 per cent. Inasmuch as wages range less in your vicinity than the average over the continent, your limit should not be more than 8 per cent. The first move, therefore, must be to get down to 10 per cent.

"That means, as I see it, that you must immediately get rid of the clerk. That will take $1,040 out of expenses and run the wages down to $2,656. Then get somebody to deliver for less than $20 per week, which I am sure you can do with little trouble. Study every way to cut expenses. Remember that a dollar or fifty cents or any other seemingly trifling sum that goes out regularly piles up a lot of money in a year. If you can manage on $75 a month yourself, so much the better. That will help you get right so much the quicker.

Where to Get Information

"You are running credits remarkably well—provided you are correct in your estimate for remainder of this year. On sales of $26,000, annual losses of $130 would be allowable. You are running $116.66 average. Evidently you are a careful extender of credit and a good collector. Keep it up. Be everlastingly watchful and insistent on your credit terms. Have the courage to cut off anybody whose account runs behind. That is one splendid way of stopping what in many businesses is a ruinous leak.

"Your credit register system is all right. Any system is all right which tells you what you are doing. Yet you must have knowledge of the fundamentals. As a beginning, write to California Prune & Apricot Growers, San Jose, California, for 'Profits in Prunes.' It is free. It covers much of the fundamentals of all retailing. Write to Bureau of Business Research, Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., for bulletin No. 3 which covers a system of accounts for grocers, bulletin No. 13 on management problems and bulletin 18 which contains latest operating expense figures of grocery stores. If you tell the Bureau you are ready to co-operate in its work by supplying your annual figures—always held in confidence—I believe the pamphlets will cost you nothing; but in any event the bill will be inside of $2.50 and will be worth many times that to you.

"The study of expense tabulations will give you lots of valuable knowledge. Then write Theo Macklin, Agricultural Experiment Station, Madison, Wisconsin, for bulletins No. 324 and No. 327—both free. Then to Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., for bulletin No. 1044. That may cost you ten or twelve cents—send 15c and be thankful it is so cheap! Lastly, send to State Department Farms and Markets, Albany, New York, for 'A Study of Certain Problems of the Retail Grocers of New York City.' This I think is free, but anyway the cost will not exceed a few cents."

Lots of Stuff in Small Space

That list of pamphlets should be supplemented by every grocer with Macklin's "Efficient Marketing for Agriculture," published by MacMillans and obtainable at any book store for about $3. Do not shy at so much "agriculture." Practically everything you handle is agriculture! And all these studies are practical, down-to-earth dope that every merchant needs these days of keener competition.

Every grocer needs to study the various kinds of goods handled to arrive at the correct margin on each—for they are not all alike! Every merchant should discuss this with his wholesale grocer. I do not mean to talk only to salesmen, although the boys are very helpful if you know how to get real information from them, always willing to meet a merchant on his own ground. They will be seriously businesslike with serious minded men. They will be frivolous "story tellers" with those who lean that way.

Go to headquarters. Lay the case before the manager of your jobbing house and get him to refer you to somebody who can help you put right margins on your goods. Then continue to observe and adjust margins as may be suitable to your own business. Remember that general rules always must be modified to fit special cases, but remember also that modification must not always be downward. It is one outstanding weakness of merchants that modification nearly always means reduction in prices—"you can't get prices like that in my town!" is what they say and think. But the fact is that modification must be upward oftener than down if you are to be benefited. Moreover, it can be down in most cases in any old town—don't mistake that point! The man who realizes these facts makes money. He who thinks otherwise—and most do—is headed for the scrap heap.

What "Little Fraction" Can Mean to You

Finally, think of the importance of pennies and half pennies. This man is doing only $26,000 a year. He makes 78,000 sales, counting three to the dollar. An error of one cent per sale will cost him $780 a year. Half a cent will let him in for $390 losses. Think along those lines for a while. Then continue to think the same way. Figuring, thinking, watching must be continuous as your business if you want to succeed.

In closing I want merely to mention a typical item that reminds me of certain human weaknesses. Having written this gentleman at length in response to his urgent request to aid him out of his troubles if possible, I noted that his town is one of considerable interest and I have never been there. So I asked him to try to send me a little story, newspaper or otherwise, with some "views"—maybe a little historical sketch. I offered to pay. Did not want anything for nothing. To that I have no response—have no further word from him at all. Reminds me somewhat of a certain old-time story which contained a question: "Where are the nine?" Remember?

Of course, I bear him no malice. I write with my customary smile!

"Present Forms of Taxation Are a Burden on the Retailer"

Henry Watters, Dominion R.M.A. Treasurer, in Addressing Eastern Ontario Retailers, Expresses the Opinion That the Merchant Has Little Chance of Passing Sales Tax On

WINCHESTER, Oct. 9. (Special).—"Encourage your local merchant. He is making your municipality whatever it is. Give him the preference whenever you want anything."

The foregoing is the advice given to a large gathering of the residents of the town of Winchester, Ont., a few days ago by Henry Watters, president of the Eastern Ontario and Ottawa District branch of the Retail Merchants' Association. The occasion was the presentation of a charter to the newly organized branch of that town, and in addition to the attendance of retail merchants from Ottawa and various points in the district, there were a goodly number of townpeople present. The Ottawa contingent, which was made up almost wholly of the retail grocers and officials of the R. M. A., was dined at the Hotel Winchester, where they were met by representatives of the new organization. They later went to the town hall where the meeting was held. The speakers included Mr. Watters, Provincial Secretary W. C. Miller; District Secretary J. C. Campbell and Clarence A. J. Miller, representing the Retail Merchants' Underwriters' Agency. The Dominion Board, R. M. A., was represented by Assistant Secretary F. R. Perrott.

Support the Local Merchants

In his address, Mr Watters laid strong emphasis upon the importance of supporting the local merchant. "He is the man who is paying the taxes and contributing to the up-keep of the community," he said. "Whereas on the other hand, the mail order houses, hundreds of miles away, are not contributing a cent to the town's welfare."

Turning then to the merchants themselves, Mr. Watters urged everyone to link up with the association. It was the fond hope of the organizers to have every retail merchant in the country become a member of the association.

A Burden on the Retailer

It was to their advantage, because the stronger the association was, the more it could accomplish. On the question of taxation, Mr. Watters said the present government seemed disposed to impose a burden on the retailer, which should not rest on him. The sales tax was not fair, because the merchant had little chance to pass it on. The receipts tax would be irksome because it would cause many difficulties. It was not even known yet whether a cash register coupon was to be considered as a receipt. "We merchants want to pay a just taxation," he said, "but these forms of taxation are not just. The merchant is penalized for trying to expand his business. This is illustrated when the merchant borrows money from the bank to put into his business. He not only pays interest, but a tax on the amount borrowed."

Following Mr. Watters' address a resolution was passed urging that in the interest of sound business, the various forms of taxation in existence now, be abolished.

W. C. Miller then gave an exhaustive resumé of the legislative work which had been accomplished by the Dominion and provincial executive boards, for the purpose of relieving retail merchants from unfair conditions. He urged that closer co-operation between the merchants would be necessary, together with concerted action, in order to impress upon the powers that be, the vital necessity of taking away instead of putting obstacles in the way of legitimate trade.

The Sales Tax As It Applies To The Retail Cake Baker

Toronto.—Delegates at the annual convention of the Bread and Cake Bakers' Association of Canada, Thursday of last week, heard an address on the Sales Tax as it applied to the retail cake baker. The knotty problem as to whether the cake baker who sold his own wares should be classified as a retailer or a manufacturer occupied the greater part of the afternoon. The matter was one upon which nobody present was in a position to give an authoritative ruling as to how a baker refusing to pay the tax legally stood.

E. M. Trowern, of Ottawa, who dealt with the subject, called down coals of fire on the legislators responsible for the tax, which he said was beyond the task of any ordinary man to properly interpret. "If the tax applies to the little retail cake maker," he said, "then it would also apply to all the housewives who make their own cakes.

"The law says you cannot sell to yourself. My own opinion is that the tax is not meant to apply to the retail cake baker, and I should advise you to sit tight. We have got to see that the men we send to represent us shall frame laws that will be understood by the citizens."

Some of the delegates wanted to know what they were to do if the authorities proceeded against them, as the law provided for fines up to a thousand dollars for infringements. "You cannot pay if you do not know what you have to pay," replied Mr. Trowern. "Ask the authorities to send you in a bill. They don't know what it is; nobody knows, so how can you pay?" The delegates were pleased with this expression of opinion, but Z. Hilton applied a damper by stating that the best legal opinion in Toronto was that the cake bakers were liable to the tax.

The scene was a court house in one of the States in the South. A large audience was present, and the presiding magistrate who was new to the position, lost his temper.

"You, there!" shouted he, pointing to the old negro in front of him, "Are you the defendant?"

"No, yer honor, I ain't," said the negro. "I ain't done nothing to be called names like dat. I've got a lawyer man to do the defending."

"Then who are you?" demanded his honor.

"I'se de gen'leman dat stole de chickens," was the reply.

"Cleaning up" wit

O-Cedar Polish

NOW comes the big Fall "clean-up."

Fall "house" cleaning with the women.

Fall profit clean-up with the merchants.

And, since women use quantities of O-Cedar Polish in the course of their Fall cleaning, you can count on O-Cedar to bulk largely in your September—October profit-taking.

Bottle Sales Versus Tin Sales

At this season no dealer should be content with "bottle" sales of O-Cedar.

It's easy to sell it by the tin.

With the average customer, it is merely a matter of making the suggestion.

Say to her:

"A quart tin contains 9½ times the Polish of a 4-oz. bottle—and yet the price is only 5 times as much. There is an even greater saving when you purchase by half-gallon or gallon tin."

She will readily see from this, the economy of purchasing by the tin.

It is by such suggestions that a merchant increases his turnover.

"More volume" is your aim—go after it by selling goods in quantities where possible.

O-Cedar is one product you can sell in quantities—especially at Fall House Cleaning Time.

Retail Prices: O-Cedar Polish in Bottles, 30c and 60c. In Tins, $1.50, $2.50, $3.50.

O-Cedar Polish Mop, large size, triangular shape, $2.00.—O-Cedar Dusting Mop, large size, triangular shape. $2.00.

O-Cedar Polish Mop, small size, triangular shape, $1.25.

Comparison of Operating Costs

RETAILERS will find interesting the leading story in this week's issue dealing as it does with the operating costs of departmental stores. The common figures for total expense, as pointed out in this article, in 1921, for three hundred and one firms from which reports were received was 27.8 per cent. of net sales. Substantially more than one-half the firms reported total expense between 24 and 30 per cent. of net sales. The highest total expense reported was 45.9 per cent. of net sales.

In view of the fact that the cost of doing business in service grocery stores averages 16 per cent. grocers will be impressed with the much greater percentage of expense in the larger stores. However, the fact must not be overlooked, that in spite of a higher percentage of costs, and a general depression in business, the department stores showed an average net profit for 1921, whereas some of the individual branches of trade showed a net loss.

The chief items which were higher in ratio to sales in 1921 were salaries and wages, rentals and advertising. Many of the smaller items were almost the same in percentage of sales in both years. The gross margin between the cost of merchandise and the sales was slightly higher in 1921 than in the preceding year, but the difference was less than the increase in total expense. Consequently the average net profit was lower in 1921.

Heavy Orders for Canadian Wheat

THE PRELIMINARY estimates of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics for the wheat crop of Canada is 388,773,000 bushels, an average of 17.25 bushels per acre, as against final returns for 1921 of 300,858,000 bushels, or an average of 13 bushels per acre. This is equivalent to an increase of 29 per cent. over the volume of wheat harvested last year, says the Canadian Bank of Commerce monthly statement, and when it is remembered that this return comes within 5,000,000 bushels of the record harvest of 1915, there is good reason for thankfulness. The general level of the grain market, however, continued to be low until the latter part of September, when uncertainty as to the outcome of the crisis in the Near East gave a considerable stimulus to wheat. Although the farmer has been handicapped by the continued high cost of threshing and, in some sections at least, by a scarcity of farm labour, and although market prices are still a severe disappointment to him, he is on the whole in a much better position than at this time last year. The element of uncertainty which always enters into the market favored, at that time, a further decline in agricultural prices; today the probability is that they will show greater firmness. The deciding factor is, of course, the demand from abroad and the ability of would-be purchasers to pay, and at present nearly every element in the situation appears to favor an increased and steady demand for Canadian wheat. The world production of wheat is reported to be about 40,000,000 bushels below that of last year. The United States Department of Agriculture estimates the year's crop, exclusive of Russia and Mexico at 3,019,526,000 bushels. It is thought that the Russian crop will meet all the requirements of that country this winter, but in any event this factor is not likely to affect the market—its chief importance will probably lie in its giving Russia the ability to take an active part in Balkan affairs. The Indian and Japanese crops are larger than last year, and it is reported that the Argentine will be able to put on the market in 1923 a larger amount of wheat than she did this spring. The decrease in the European wheat harvest, however, amounts to 139,000,000 bushels from last year, and 174,000,000 bushels from the pre-war average. Europe should, therefore, require considerably more wheat from Canada this year than last, and the general improvement in sterling and the continental exchanges, together with the lower price of wheat, should enable her to increase her purchases. The figures quoted below, under the heading of Foreign Trade, show that there has recently been a marked acceleration in orders for Canadian wheat. The facilities of the chief Canadian ports are being taxed to their utmost, and already, in the early part of September, Montreal is reported to have made a world record by loading 1,569,393 bushels of wheat for sea in a single day. Farmers are marketing their grain freely, and the crop movement from Western Canada is proceeding at a satisfactory rate.

Reports that business is showing marked improvement are becoming more and more frequent from all parts of the country. There is still, of course, an unevenness in industrial conditions, and certain industries which depend primarily upon large supplies of coal, iron and steel have, in a number of cases, been obliged to close their plants. But this is obviously the result of an artificial curtailment of supply rather than of a decreased demand. In the case of the wholesale and retail trades the sobering experience of the last two years has modified to a large extent the general opinion as to what constitutes an autumn revival of business. Orders, though moderate in volume, have become steadier, collections have improved, and there appears to be a disposition on the part of customers to be satisfied with a much shorter term of credit.

Are You Building Goodwill?

AN ARTIST who painted very poor pictures once took one of his canvases for criticism to Whistler, the great American artist. Whistler shrugged his shoulders and made a grimace that spoke volumes.

"But a man must live somehow," urged the near-artist, divining what was in Whistler's mind. "Only a few will know the difference."

"True," replied Whistler. "But those few have tongues. When those tongues get through wagging, everybody will know what kind of work you turn out. Better paint good pictures, or none at all."

There's a moral in this little story for merchants as well as artists. We are all helping to serve the public—hundreds of thousands of people with wagging tongues. What are those wagging tongues saying about your service? Are they building goodwill for you, or are they tearing down your business to its very foundation?

Canadian Grocer Will Appreciate Items of News From Readers For This Page

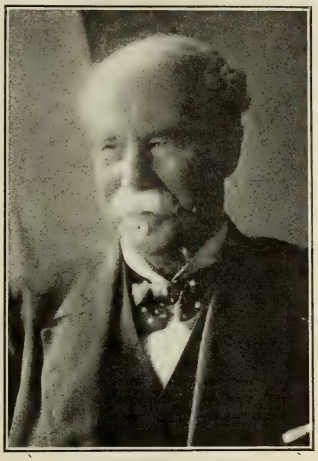
Maritimes

A new grocery store has been established at the corner of Waterloo and Peters Streets in St. John by D. A. Porter.

K. E. Chittick has opened a grocery store on Prince Edward Street in the store formerly occupied by H. Barker, now Barker Bros. Mr. Chittick is handling groceries only.

The building on Union Street, St. John, owned by McPherson Bros. and used on the ground floor by that firm as a grocery store for many years, is being repaired and will be ready for occupancy shortly. Fire damaged the building in July.

After a trial of the weekly half holiday through the summer, the grocers of West St. John have adjudged the plan an entire success, and, instead of returning to the normal hours the first of September, continued the weekly half holiday plan through September.

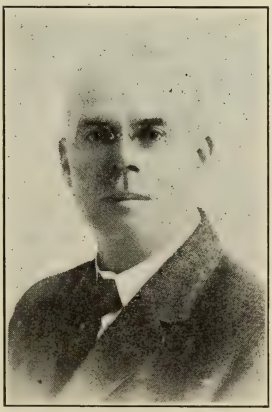


Barker Bros. have opened a new store on Main Street, St. John, at the corner of Portland Street. This firm had a branch in the north end some years ago but discontinued it. The main store of the firm is on Princess Street. Another is located on Prince Edward Street. Barker Bros. have stores in Amherst and Moncton also.

Quebec

Owing to ill health, J. Grenier, junior partner in the firm of Grenier & Co., retail grocers, St. John St., Quebec, has been forced to leave his business and retire to the country for some time.

The Match Co., Limited, Montreal and Berthierville, have appointed C. Louis Allen to the position of vice-president and general manager in charge of all the branches of the company's business. Mr. Allen was formerly vice-president in charge of sales.



J. P. Malagodi, who has been vice-president of the firm of Amoroso and Malagodi Co., Ltd., wholesale grocery specialists of Montreal, has resigned his position and connection with the firm to open his own business, that of commission merchant. His new office is at 59 St. Peter St., Montreal. J. E. Schroeder, who for some years has been treasurer of the firm, is now vice-president and general manager in Montreal. Since the business has grown considerably during the past few years more capital has been put into it and new and larger accommodation has been sought. The firm will move to their new offices at 248 St. Paul St. West, Montreal, on Nov. 1st.

RICE AT FIFTY CENTS PER POUND

Rice at 50c. per lb. It seems out of all proportions, doesn't it? It is nevertheless true however. A grocer in Peterborough, Ont., is offering black rice at this figure. It is native rice picked by the Indians at Rice Lake, about 20 miles south of Peterborough.

Wholesale grocer of Prince Rupert B.C. who has been appointed a member of Canada's National Railway Board.

Ontario

B. F. Amos, sales manager of the Nestle's Food Co., New York, was in Ontario last week. He visited the wholesale trade in Hamilton on Thursday and spent Friday in Toronto returning to New York that night. This company, which manufactures condensed and evaporated milk, has a Canadian factory at Chesterville, Ont.

Frank W. Robinson of the Grimsby Brokerage, has just returned from a two months' business trip covering Great Britain. When in London Mr. Robinson made his headquarters at the Canadian Club of Great Britain, 19 Stratford Place, and reports that this club and also the Canadian Chamber of Commerce at 55 Holborn Viaduct, are very anxious that Canadian business men should make themselves known there when visiting London.

Toronto Has New "Chain" Known As Superior Stores

Toronto, Oct. 13. (Special).—A new chain of grocery stores, known as Superior Stores Ltd., was inaugurated here on Friday last. This new organization represents fifty Toronto grocers who have been operating independent retail places for some time past, and who now have joined forces for the purpose of buying collectively, and they claim at such advantages as to meet the competition of other "chains." All these Superior stores are known by their yellow fronts, and just at the present time are being operated as they were before the change was made. Service of delivery is being given, and this will be continued for the time being at least. Former proprietors of these stores who have entered the Superior organization are, of course, retained as managers of the various Superior branches.

While this new organization, it is claimed, is separate and distinct from the York Trading Co., a wholesale buying concern, these stores are in agreement to buy from the York Trading Co., but at the same time, providing that prices are equally attractive, there is nothing to prevent them making purchases from other places.

Would Make One Collection of Sales Tax

Effort Being Made by Some Organized Manufacturers to Have Sales From Maker to Wholesaler Exempt—Manufacturer or Wholesaler Would Then Collect 4½% From Retailer

EDITORIAL NOTE:—Canadian Grocer would like to hear from retailers and others interested, with their views on the above suggested change.

A WELL organized effort is being made by a number of manufacturers' associations to have some amendments put through in regard to the collection of the sales tax by the Dominion Government.

This movement has in view the following changes:

That the sales tax could not be absorbed by any section of the trade, that the sales tax from manufacturer to wholesaler on goods bought for resale and from one wholesaler to another be entirely eliminated; that the tax from wholesaler to retailer be 4½% and from manufacturer to retailer 4½% when the manufacturer sells direct.

Those behind this movement claim that this system would ensure more equality between the manufacturer who sells direct to the retailer, and the wholesaler who now charges the retailer only 2¼%. The heads of the movement state that in many cases through competition or pressure, many manufacturers are absorbing the 2¼% to the wholesaler but when selling to the retailer they have to charge 4½%.

It is planned by the men behind the proposed changes, that the matter will be taken up with the Government through the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

New Root Vegetables' Act Must Have Plenty Of Publicity

Ottawa, Oct. 9. (Special).—Measures for acquainting the public with the provisions of the new Root Vegetables Act were under consideration at a recent meeting of the advisory committee of the grocers' section of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada. It was thought advisable to give the matter the widest possible publicity in view of the misunderstanding that was likely to exist for some time, and the suggestion was made that letters be sent to each of the newspapers, in which the weights, together with the weight of a bag or a bushel, would be stated. The suggestion was referred to the grocers' section.

The Federal Department of Agriculture's proposed campaign for the purpose of promoting the sale of eggs graded according to government standards, came in for considerable discussion. In fact the meeting was called especially to consider this matter. W. A. Brown and E. Rhoades, of the Poultry Division of the Live Stock Branch, were present and explained the intentions of the department.

B. G. Crabtree, of Ottawa, was appointed to represent the grocers' section on a committee which will also include representatives of the Producers' Association and the Wholesalers' Association, which committee will stand ready at any time to advise with the Federal Department of Agriculture and give its assistance when required.

The action of the United States Federal Commission investigating the case of a food product firm in that country which is charged with restraint of trade, was referred to. It is reported that this concern has refused to sell its products to a syndicate of retail grocers but is selling to chain stores and co-operative societies. The retail grocers of the United States are endeavoring to find out the reasons for the alleged discrimination against them. As this question is one which is not confined only to the United States, the grocers' section is awaiting the result of the investigation with much interest.

Committee Will Hear Opinions on Anti-Combine Bill

Toronto, Oct. 13. (Special).—The special committee appointed by the Ontario Legislature at the close of the last session to deal with the Anti-Combine Bill introduced into the House is meeting on Tuesday next at the Parliament Buildings at 10.30 a. m. It will be remembered that this bill was given its first reading shortly before the session closed, and it was decided to appoint a committee to hear opinions on a bill of this kind. An opportunity will be afforded anyone having anything to say on this question to appear before the committee next Tuesday and express their views in regard to the same. The personnel of the committee is as follows:—Hon. W. E. Raney, Hon. Manning Doherty, Hon. H. C. Nixon, J. W. Currie, Murdock, Casselman, Greenlaw, W. Hay, Sinclair, R. R. Hall, Black, Hill and Buckland.

Western Canada Notes

Screaton & Whiteside, manufacturers' agents, Winnipeg, have been appointed representatives for Western Canada for The T. Upton Co., jam manufacturers, Hamilton, Ontario.

G. T. Benson, president of the Canada Starch Company, Montreal, is on a business trip to Winnipeg, and called on their Western representatives, Mason and Hickey.

H. P. Pennock & Company Limited, Winnipeg, who are representing Rosenberg Bros. & Company, San Francisco, packers of dried fruits, in the Province of Saskatchewan, have taken over the representation for the additional territory of Manitoba and Western Ontario.

OFFICIALS ATTEND QUAKER OATS DANCE

Saskatoon, Sask. (Special).—A well attended dance was held by the Quaker Oats Club recently at their clubhouse near the Quaker Oats mill.

There were about 75 couples on the floor, and Thos. Reynolds, the local manager, and officials of the company from Chicago joined in the dancing. A four-piece orchestra supplied the music and refreshments were served.

UNTIL GROCERS ARE PLACED ON THE EXEMPTED LIST

"The members of the Retail Store Association are quite willing to abide by the early closing bylaw until groceries are placed on the exempted list," said W. D. McKinnon, secretary, last night, speaking on the coming into effect of the new civic regulation. "All the same," he declared, "there is no business city in which foodstuffs cannot be procured after 6 p.m." In commenting on the early closing bylaw, J. H. Curle, secretary of the Manitoba section of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, says it represents an agreement arrived at at a conference between the classes more particularly affected and the association.

TORONTO TRAVELLER HERO OF NORTH FIRE

North Bay, Ont.—A. P. Whitlock, of Toronto, a traveler for the Swift Canadian Co., badly burned about the arms and hands, but with the proud record of having saved the lives of 32 persons in North Cobalt, was the centre of a crowd here of those he succored. Whitlock, while making light of his injuries and his heroism, told of the rush of the fire into North Cobalt. He was able to commandeer a truck on which he placed his charges, and brought them into Cobalt in safety, later putting them on board the relief train.

New Grocers' Organization at Coast

Grocers In Vancouver Organize Separate and Independent Association, Unaffiliated With the R. M. A., But Distinctly Not In Opposition To It—James Harkness The New President

Written by ROY A. HUNTER, Vancouver, for Canadian Grocer

VANCOUVER, B. C., Oct. 9. (Special).—The biggest news in retail circles in Vancouver in the last few days is undoubtedly the formation of a new retail grocers' organization entirely separate and distinct from the Retail Merchants' Association.

While it has been felt that the Retail Merchants' Association was not getting as far with the retail grocers as many would have wished, the idea of starting a new association entirely would have been the last thing that many of the members would have countenanced.

The stumbling blocks in the way of the Retail Merchants' Association getting anything like a hundred per cent. of the grocers into their membership were not so numerous as they were insurmountable. For one thing, there are apparently many merchants these days who do not feel they can pay $25 a year to hold membership in a trade association. I am not discussing whether their stand is justifiable or not, but that such is true in a very real sense, one can readily ascertain by having a chat with an organizer in this or any other province.

Credit Rating Service Valued

Now an association giving the service that the Retail Merchants' Association gives cannot function on any nominal subscription per annum. Many merchants consider the credit rating service worth many times what they pay for it, and feel that any reasonable amount under fifty dollars is well spent for membership in the association and participation in this one advantage—not to mention the other services. These merchants would frown upon any move on the part of the officers to lower the dues by curtailing the service. There you have the stumbling block in the way of bringing all the retailers into the association.

Add to this the fact that at the last provincial convention it was decided to discontinue the Vancouver branch with a separate secretary and to merge the Vancouver branch in the provincial office. Mr. Ing, who was formerly known as the Vancouver secretary, is now assistant provincial secretary. Here again some of the local grocers feared that in spite of the size of their dues they would be in danger of receiving less local service. They probably would get all the service they demanded, but the change lent color to the statement that less service might now be expected. For the last few weeks I gather that the various factions that were dissatisfied with their present association were ripe for a split. A clean cut from the association would have been countenanced.

Wanted Separate Organization

At this juncture a certain group in the Retail Merchants' Association made up of retail grocers who had their ears to the ground, unknown to the officers of the association, laid all their plans for the formation of a distinctly separate association of retail grocers under the name of The Greater Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association. And all the organization committee are members of the Retail Merchants' Association.

The mountain couldn't come to Mohammed and the prophet couldn't budge an inch, as it were, so this committee faced the situation and midway between the two, as you might say, they staked, sub-divided and are putting on the market an oasis where messages between the said prophet and the said mountain may be relayed.

In other words, this committee intends to maintain its membership in the national body, organize the local retailers and sell them the idea of "co-operation through association" at a nominal fee, and then act as "contact men" between the Retail Merchants' Association and the dozens of small retailers whose assistance they really need to put anything across in a strong way. In fact the constitution of the new association, I am told, provides that for every 25 members carried in the "Greater Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association" one membership in the Retail Merchants' Association must be purchased—and the member whose dues shall thus be paid in the R. M. A. shall be a man who is not already holding membership in the R. M. A.

The Men Responsible

The chairman of the organization committee, who was elected as the association's first president, is James Harkness. Mr. Harkness is now and was also last year chairman of the provincial grocers' trade section in the Retail Merchants' Association. Associated with him in the organization work, and all members also of the R. M. A., were George Carter, J. F. Merrilees, H. Curry, A. A. Blain, Con. Clarke (of the A. & C.), T. W. Vincent, W. Allison and Sam Pritchard.

The new officers elected, beside the president already mentioned, are also prominent in the Retail Merchants' Association. Vice-president R. Thompson is also president of the North Vancouver branch of the R. M. A. Second vice, James Borthwick, South Vancouver; honorary secretary, W. D. Brown; treasurer, J. E. Merrilees, and executive secretary, R. Hill Fairley, an officer also trained in the Retail Merchants' Association, although not associated with the R. M. A. recently.

Mr. Harkness states, "There are quite 400 retail grocers in Greater Vancouver. Our objective is at least 300. We must speak for the majority of the trade if we wish our voice to be considered authoritative. Although as an association we are only a few days old," stated the president, "we have over 100 members, and the interest promises to increase."

The literature of the new association states:

"This committee, who are all members of the Retail Merchants' Association, wish it distinctly understood that they are not out in opposition to the R.M.A." but at the same time Secretary Fairley points out that "while many of the Greater Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association are also members of the grocery section of the R. M. A., the organizations will not be in any way affiliated." The new organization should go a long way. It is in the happy position of truthfully telling the disgruntled exmember of the R. M. A., if there be any such, that there is no affiliation, and yet may also truthfully point out to the merchant who admires the R. M. A. that "they are distinctly not in opposition to it." For a fact, doesn't it look as if both Mohammed and the mountain ought to move and second a vote of commendation for the long-headedness of the promoters of the said oasis?"

Thunder Bay Farmers Form Co-Operative

Fort William, Ont. (Special). — The officers of the Thunder Bay Farmers' Co-operative Company announce they have disposed of sufficient stock in the company to insure its operation.

The provisional directors are: D. C. Garver, Slate River; W. J. Edmond, Dorion; W. Boulter, Dorion; W. White, Murillo; F. R. Mayotte, Stanley.

The formation of this co-operative company is the outcome of a meeting held on June 22 when it was decided to make an effort to organize this company with a capitalization of $100,000. It was necessary to sell $25,000 in stock within ninety days from that time.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THE feature of the markets for grocery commodities this week is the strength of the sugar market, following a period of general weakness. Close on the advance as announced in last week's issue, came another jump in prices at the week-end, when all Canadian refiners announced a price of $7.25 per cwt. Montreal basis. The whole situation is reported very much improved. The raw market is higher, and according to advices the upward movement in raws is very decided. Sales of Cubas are reported on the basis of 3½c c. & f. equal to 5.28c duty paid. It appears that buyers of refined sugars in the States, having refrained from buying, have run out of supplies, and are now in the market for granulated. This general buying has been responsible for advances in the refined article on the other side. It is stated in advices from New York that stocks of raws in all parts of Cuba are now 430,409 tons, an important part of which is controlled by strong hands or else is contracted for under toll agreements and this should preclude the possibility of heavy offerings from Cuba except at very satisfactory prices. Porto Rico has only limited supplies of sugar available for shipment, whlie Philippines afloat are reduced to 18,000 tons.

Canned goods are moving fairly well these days, buying appearing to be more active. Prices on most lines of canned vegetables are attractive. The situation in dried fruits is much the same as a week ago. Raisins and currants are both quoted at very strong levels, the latter being slightly higher this week. New California raisins should be available on this market shortly, and the new pack prunes is also expected very soon. Shipments of Smyrna figs have been received, and are offered at strong figures. Cereals continue to sell in small quantities, according to immediate requirements. The market is inclined to be easy, and prices for rolled oats rule at the declines noted last week. Teas are much the same, that is, very strong, and indications from primary centres point to steadily advancing quotations. There is a moderate demand for rice at unchanged prices, there being little feature to the general situation. Spices are steady. The flour market shows no change. Domestic fruits continue to be offered although supplies are not offered so freely. Apples are coming forward plentifully, and are quoted at fairly easy levels. Potatoes are moving to market in good volume, and prices are holding at firm figures.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, October 11.—Wholesalers, grocery brokers and retailers report a marked improvement in business during the past two weeks. More interest is manifest on all sides. The sugar market shows more strength and some refiners doubt the weakness that was predicted for sugar this month. The raw sugar market is advancing and the demand shows an improvement. Canned goods prices are lower and buying is heavier. There is a wide margin in the prices quoted on walnuts, particularly Bordeaux shelled. Immediate deliveries of the new crop are high but easier prices are expected. Raisins, currants and figs continue to advance. Molasses and corn syrups are unchanged. There are a few changes in package goods. Cereals are stronger and the demand is heavy since the retail trade has been carrying very light supplies. The rice market shows an easier tendency. Oranges are easier in price but the export demand for apples has advanced prices on that line. The vegetable market is well supplied and prices are easy. Tea prices are strong and some wholesalers have advanced Ceylons two and three cents a lb. The coffee market shows no change. Spices are steady.

SUGAR MARKET FIRM

Montreal.

SUGAR.—The sugar market is on a stronger basis with raws c. & f., New York quoted at 3½c. The local refiners are standing firm at the present basis and claim a strong future for sugar since the carry over of both raws and refined is light. Yet the future is indefinite. The beet sugars are due on the market this month and they may have a weakening effect, depending largely upon the attitude of the refiners who handle this type of sugar.

Montreal.

CEREALS.—The new crop of rolled oats has started through the mills and yet the market stands strong and so far there is no realization of lower prices. Millers state that the demand is good and the trade is brisk. Transportation is reported poor and supplies on hand are short. An advance in the price is not expected but the market throughout is firm.

CANNED GOODS REDUCED

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—Local wholesale grocers have set their prices on the new pack of canned goods. While these prices are much lower the packers have emphasized the fact that they have made a big effort to make a reduction in the price so as to stimulate buying and increase the consumption. They state that lower prices are not warranted by the size of the pack and that in reality the pack of tomatoes this year is only 6 per cent. of the average of the past three years, but the quality is excellent. Tomatoes, 2½s are quoted at $1.42½ for standard and $14½ for choice. The 2s are quoted at $1.05 per doz. and the gallon standards at $5.25. Corn on cobs 2½s is quoted at $2.40 a doz. and 2½s are quoted at $1.20 for standard, $1.30 for choice and $1.40 per doz. for fancy. Yellow peaches in heavy syrup are quoted at $2.35 a doz. for 2s standard, $2.40 for 2s choice and $2.65 for 2s fancy. Bartlett pears in heavy syrup are quoted at $2.35 for 2s standard. Niagara sliced pineapple in one pound gladd jars, heavy syrup, are quoted at $5.25 per doz.

PRICES ON SHELLED WALNUTS VARY

Montreal.

NUTS.—Various prices are being quoted on Bordeaux shelled walnuts and in some instances the price is as low as 52c. per lb. in 55 lb. boxes, and 58c. per lb. in small quantities. Other prices run as high as 60c. per lb. for future delivery. In reality the market for Bordeaux shelled walnuts is quite firm and the first deliveries will demand a higher price on spot stocks. There is a weak tone to the almond market and spot stocks are quoted at from 39 to 40c. per lb. The peanut market is weaker, but no changes in wholesale prices have been made.

CURRANT PRICES HIGHER

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—There is marked strength in currants and prices for spot stocks advanced to 17c. per lb. Local importers state that currants will be scarce this season. Prices in almost all lines are fluctuating rapidly but in the wholesale trade they have shown little change so far. In New York figs and raisins are advancing. In the past week figs have been picked up locally by brokers at higher prices which would indicate an advance in wholesale prices in the near future.

COFFEE PROSPECTS GOOD

Montreal.

COFFEE.—There is no change in the condition of the coffee market. The upward tendency apparent in August and September has disappeared and now prices are just maintained. Reports on next year's crop are good. The blossoms are healthy and the weather is good. The prospects for the December crop in the West Indies and the April crop in Brazil are good.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Oct. 13.—The feature of the markets this week is the advance in the price of sugar. All refiners are now quoting on the same basis, $7.59 per cwt. delivered Toronto. There appears to be a general improvement in the situation. Raw sugars are selling higher, and it is stated that refiners' supplies are in small volume. There is a better inquiry for canned goods. New pack Canadian corn is quoted at $1.25 per doz., and the new pack tomatoes is offered at $1.47½ for 2½s. Dried fruits continue strong. New crop California raisins should be obtainable in this market shortly. Currants are higher on spot this week. Some houses are quoting Smyrna figs this week, shipments having arrived recently, but the supply is said to be very limited, and prices are high. Teas on spot are said to be in light supply, and new buying is at very much higher levels than present spot quotations. Cereals both in bulk and in the packages are quoted at fairly easy levels. Rolled oats are steady at the declines of last week. The flour market is steady and unchanged. Fruits and vegetables are in good supply. Potatoes are selling at from 80 to 90c per bag.

NUTS ON SPOT STEADY

Toronto.

NUTS.—Prices on the new crop California walnuts range from 22½c to 26½c per lb. f.o.b. California. These prices are from 2 to 3c lower than opening prices last year. Both French and Italian walnuts promise fairly heavy crops this year and should be available at attractive prices. California walnuts should arrive on this market in about two weeks, but the European walnuts as a rule do not arrive until late November or early in December. They should be obtainable in time for the holiday trade. Advices from New York report the situation in pecans very strong. Shipments are being received from Mexico, and are helping to relieve the shortage on the New York market. Prices on spot are unchanged.

CANNED GOODS IN BETTER DEMAND

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—Buying of canned goods is in better volume and the lower prices that are ruling on new packed goods, appear to be attractive to buyers. Wholesalers are quoting the new packed Canadian corn at $1.25 per doz., and new tomatoes, 2½s at $1.47½ per doz. There appears to be a very active demand for canned salmon, and prices are firm. Wholesalers quote Sockeye 1s at $5 per doz., and the ½s are selling at $2.70 and $2.75. Other canned goods are unchanged. Jams are quiet, but prices are steady.

DRIED FRUITS CONTINUE STRONG

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—The situation in both raisins and currants continues much the same as a week ago. New raisins are expected on this market in a fortnight. Prices while very strong are steady at present levels. The new crop prunes are also expected shortly, and should be available in the course of a week or ten days. All currants at primary markets are still very strong, and wholesalers on spot are quoting slightly higher levels this week. Filliartras are offered at from 17½ to 18c per lb. Greek patras are selling at 18½ and 19c per lb. Excelsior dates are firmer this week, and are quoted at $4.10 for cases of 3 dozen packages. Shipments of figs from the East are reported to have arrived on this side, and with supplies in rather limited quantities, together with the likelihood of a scarcity prices are very strong. One wholesaler in this market is quoting layer figs, 5 Crown 10 lb. boxes at $3.

SPOT TEAS IN SMALLER VOLUME

Toronto.

TEAS.—Spot stocks of the cheaper teas are growing smaller, and dealers state that before long higher prices will have to prevail in view of the stronger quotations that have to be met for new supplies. According to advices received, both the London market, as well as markets at producing points show a continued tendency to advance. In Colombo an advance of 1d was reported last week, while in London there was a rise of approximately 1d on common Indian pekoes. Sales at Calcutta are also reported to have been at higher figures. The tea market on spot is fairly active, and prices are of course very strong.

POTATOES ARE PLENTIFUL

Toronto.

POTATOES.—Shipments of potatoes are arriving freely, but prices, in spite of the fact, appear to be fairly strong. Wholesalers are quoting them at from 80c to 90c per bag. Compliance with recent government regulations in regard to the sale of roots and vegetables is being made, and this fact may be responsible for a slight enhancement of the market. Onions are unchanged, and are selling freely. Sweet potatoes are in great demand, and hampers are quoted at from $1.75 to $1.85. Turnips are from 65c to 75c per bag. Cauliflower is easier at from $1 to $1.25 per doz., and celery is steady at from 50 to 75c.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, October 11.—The feature of the grocery market has been the advance in the price of sugar. Quotations f.o.b. Winnipeg are $8.25 per cwt. Teas continue to show strength and coffees are ruling firm. New prices on canned tomatoes and corn have been announced and tomatoes are about 50c per case less than present quotations, while corn is about the same. The situation in the East has given the dried fruit market a firmer tone and raisins and currants have advanced. Cereals show no change. Heavy shipments of apples are arriving and sales are reported good. Local vegetables are in abundance and as the demand is only local, business is reported quiet.

COFFEE MARKET IS UNSETTLED

Winnipeg.

COFFEES.—Reports from primary markets state that due to fluctuations in Brazilian exchanges conditions show a depressing influence, as buyers are just purchasing in sufficient quantities to meet immediate requirements. There is a fair demand locally as spot stocks are sufficient to supply the immediate demand.

Paraffin Must Not Be Used in Making Confectionery

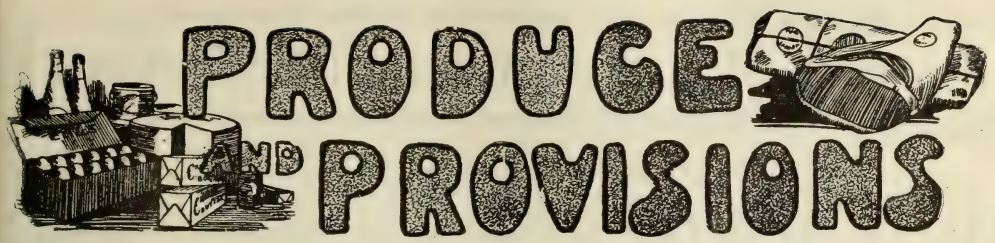
The Department of Health, Ottawa, has just issued a regulation in regard to the use of paraffin in the making of confectionery, especially caramels and chocolate products. This practice it is pointed out, is prohibited under section 3 (1) of the Food and Drugs Act, 1920, which reads as follows:

Food shall be deemed to be adulterated within the meaning of this Act, if it contains any poisonous ingredients or any ingredient which may render it injurious to the health of the person consuming it, whether added with intent or otherwise.

Paraffin is devoid of food value and harmful in the digestive tract.

This ruling will be effective from November first.

Western Can. Flour Profits Are Lower



Toronto, Oct 13, (Special).—Net profits of the Western Canada Flour Mills Co. for the year ending August 31, 1922, after making provision for reserves, amounted to $318,125, according to the statement presented to the shareholders at the annual meeting held here yesterday. This is a nominal decrease from the figures for the previous year, when net profits stood at $325,970. This small decrease in earnings, it is pointed out by the President, Mr. Andrew Kelly, is due to the operations being conducted on a declining market, the value of wheat and flour at the close of the year being practically on a pre-war basis. Production, Mr. Kelly pointed out, had increased during the year.

The net profits for the year of $318,125, when added to the balance carried forward from profit and loss last year, made a total available for distribution of $520,228. This was applied as follows:—Bond interest for the year, $70,560; dividends at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, $230,000; balance carried forward, $219,668. Total assets are shown at $5,373,319.

GROCERS WHO SUFFERED IN THE NORTHERN FIRE

Among the business men who suffered loss as a result of the devastation wrought by the terrible fire that visited Haileybury in northern Ontario, the latter half of last week are the following grocers, E. Ashmead, S. Boussinault, A. J. Carson, E. J. Elkins, Graham Bros., E. Hargraves, J. G. Mills, E. Simard, Smith and Gill. At Englehart the general store of J. Clark was destroyed, as well as the following grocery stores, H. Powell, and D. Korman.

One of the newly established grocery stores in St. John is that of Northrup's Cash Store, Paradise Row.

How Eggs Must Now be Graded

Regulations Respecting the Grading and Marking of Eggs, Applying Both to Eggs for Export as Well as to Eggs Imported, Have Just Been Issued and Are Now Effective

REGULATIONS respecting the grading and marking of eggs have just been issued by the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, and are now effective. Canadian eggs for export out of Canada and eggs for domestic consumption intended for shipment from one province to another as covered by these regulations, but not including eggs intended for incubation, shall be classified, candled and graded as follows:—

CLASS (1) FRESH—Eggs which have not been held under refrigerator at a temperature of 40 degrees Fahrenheit or less, except when in transit, or subjected to artificial preservation.

Grade (a) Specials—Eggs of uniform size, weighing 25 ozs. to the dozen and over, or 47 lbs. net to the 30 dozen case; clean and free from stain, strong and sound in shell; air cell small, not over 3/16 of an inch in depth; white of egg to be firm and clear and yolk dimly visible. Maximum allowance at time of inspection not to exceed 8 eggs per half case below the grade stated.

Grade (b) Extras—Eggs reasonably uniform in size, weighing at least 24 ozs. to the dozen, or 45 lbs. net to the 30 dozen case; reasonably clean, sound in shell; air cell less than ⅜ inch in depth; white of egg to be firm and yolk dimly visible. Maximum allowance at time of inspection not to exceed 8 eggs per half case below the grade stated.

Sub-Grade (1) Pullet Extras—Eggs which have the quality of extras but which fall short in weight shall be known as pullet extras, providing they weigh at least 20 ozs. to the dozen, or 37½ lbs. to the 30 dozen case. Maximum allowance at time of inspection not to exceed 8 eggs per half case below the grade stated.

Grade (c) Firsts—Eggs weighing at least 23 ozs. to the dozen, or 43 lbs. net to the 30 dozen case; reasonably clean, sound in shell; air cell less than ½ inch in depth; white of egg to be firm, yolk may be distinctly visible but moving freely; air cell stationary but may be slightly tremulous. Maximum allowance at time of inspection not to exceed 8 eggs per half case below the grade stated.

Grade (d) Seconds—Eggs sound in shell; may contain weak, watery eggs, eggs with heavy yolks, and all other eggs fit for food. Maximum allowance at time of inspection not to exceed 6 eggs per half case below the grade stated.

Storage and Preserved Eggs

CLASS (2) STORAGE—Eggs which have been "held" under artificial refrigeration at a temperature of 40 degrees Fahrenheit or less.

CLASS (2a) PRESERVED—Eggs which have been subjected to any process, liquid or otherwise, intended to preserve their quality.

Grade (a) Extras—Eggs reasonably uniform in size, weighing at least 23½ ozs. to the dozen, or 44 lbs. net to the 30 dozen case; reasonably clean, sound in shell; air cell less than ⅜ inch in depth; white of egg to be firm and yolk slightly visible. Maximum allowance at time of inspection not to exceed 8 eggs per half case below the grade stated.

Grade (b) Firsts—Eggs weighing at least 22½ ozs. to the dozen, or 42 lbs. net to the 30 dozen case; reasonably clean, sound in shell; air cell less than ½ inch in depth; white of egg to be firm; yolk may be distinctly visible but moving freely; air cell stationary but may be slightly tremulous. Maximum allowance at time of inspection not to exceed 8 eggs per half case below the grade stated.

Grade (c) Seconds—Eggs sound in shell, may contain weak, watery eggs, eggs with heavy yolks, and all other eggs fit for food. Maximum allowance at time of inspection not to exceed 6 eggs per half case below the grade stated.

Cracked and Dirty Eggs

CLASS (3) CRACKED AND DIRTY—Eggs, shell of which have been checked or broken, smeared, soiled, or damaged in shell, but fit for food; allowance at time of inspection not to exceed 6 eggs per half case below the class stated.

2 (a). Every case containing Canadian eggs intended for export out of Canada shall be marked on both ends in a legible and indelible manner, with the name of class and grade of eggs contained therein, and the words "Canadian Eggs."

2 (b). Every case containing eggs that is to be shipped from one province to any other province within Canada in shipments of one hundred cases or more, shall be marked or labelled on both ends with the name of the class and grade of the eggs contained therein according to the Canadian Standards and with the name of the country of origin when other than domestic product. The letters in such markings on the cases specified in this section shall be block letters not less than one inch in height.

3. No person shall ship eggs or cause eggs to be shipped or delivered or displayed for sale in cases or containers which are marked or labelled with the name of any class and grade specified in these Regulations unless the quality and weight of the eggs contained therein is equal to or better than such class or grade.

4. Any inspector charged with the enforcement of these Regulations may enter any premises or conveyance to make examination of any case or cases of eggs suspected of being improperly or falsely marked in violation of the provisions of these Regulations.

(a). Whenever any case containing eggs is found to be improperly or falsely marked it shall be the duty of any inspector charged with the enforcement of these Regulations to stamp the case with the words "Falsely Marked" and shall immediately notify the consignee in person or by telegraph or telephone. In instances where five per cent. or more of the cases examined are found to be falsely or improperly marked, it will be considered sufficient evidence to warrant the inspector stamping or labelling all the cases in the shipment or delivery "Falsely Marked."

Packing for Export

5. Canadian eggs for export out of Canada shall be tightly packed in Canadian standard cases in new dry white fillers and flats, with kiln dried excelsior or corrugated cushions at top and bottom, or one-third fillers on bottom with flats over top and under bottom fillers.

6. Canadian standard cases shall be made to contain thirty dozen eggs. They shall be made of clean, dry and odorless wood. The ends and centre partition shall be not less than five-eights of an inch thick, the sides, top and bottom not less than three-eighths of an inch thick.

7. Eggs for shipment from one point to another point in Canada in case lots covered by these regulations shall be packed in sound serviceable cases, in clean dry serviceable fillers and flats and with dry excelsior padding or corrugated cushions at top and bottom, on one-third fillers on bottom with flats over top and under bottom fillers.

8. Cases containing Canadian eggs in lots of twenty-five cases or more intended for export out of Canada and eggs intended for shipment from one province to any other province in shipments of 100 cases or more, shall not be shipped or delivered until they have been inspected and marked by an inspector and certificates issued.

10. Certificates for export shall be marked across the face of the certificate with the words "Export Certificate."

11. No person or persons shall ship or accept for shipment in any one day, or in any one car lot or less than one car lot, shipments of eggs addressed or billed or invoiced to any one consignee or his representative, in excess of the quantity stated in clause (8) unless all of the requirements of the regulations have been fulfilled.

How Marked

12. The mark of approval to be placed on each case, hereinafter called the "Government Mark," shall include the Maple Leaf and the words "Canadian Eggs," and "Government Inspected" together with the in-

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Oct. 12.—There are only two changes of note in the produce and provision market. Eggs have been advanced again. The market is firm however and wholesale dealers do not favor another advance immediately. Lard is higher one half cent a pound on account of the increased demand which comes with the cooler weather and the clearing up of surplus stocks. The hog market shows no change. There is weakness in smoked hams and a decline would not be surprising. Cooked meats are unchanged, but cooked hams show weak tendencies. The beef market is stronger, although wholesale prices do not yet show a change. Haddock is easier in price, but salmon and halibut are firm at the high price on account of bad weather on the fishing grounds. The cheese market shows more activity and strength. Butter prices are unchanged, with little or no development in conditions. Receipts continue to show an increase and the export market is dull.

BUTTER MARKET STEADY

Montreal.

BUTTER.—There is a steady tone to butter but receipts show a marked increase both over the previous week and that of last year. The make has been heavy and tends to keep the prices down. The export market shows no improvement.

The conjurer was performing in a room adjoining a gunpowder factory. A sailor and his parrot were enjoying the show. The conjurer changed half a crown into a penny.

"Now that's a fine trick," said the sailor, lighting his pipe. "I wonder what he'll do next?" The sailor then threw away his match.

A minute later there was no sailor, no factory, no room, no village. On a steeple a mile away the parrot, with one feather remaining, said, "Now that's a fine trick. I wonder what he'll do next?"

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Oct. 11.—Changes in the market for produce are few this week. The live hog situation is much the same with prices ruling at easy levels. Fresh meats are steady, and smoked lines are for the most part unchanged. Slightly lower levels are ruling on the cooked meats with a somewhat lessened inquiry prevailing. The butter market is firm, with a good demand for domestic consumption. Cheese is slightly higher, and receipts of fresh eggs continue to show a falling off with a corresponding enhancement of values. Dealers are paying lower prices this week for live poultry in the country. Offerings are fairly heavy. Fish is in good demand and is unchanged.

BUTTER MARKET STEADY

Toronto.

BUTTER.—The market for butter is steady with a week ago. There continues a fair inquiry for the same, chiefly of course for domestic account. Number one prints are quoted at from 38 to 40c and the number twos at from 35 to 37c.

NO CHANGE IN PROVISIONS

Toronto.

PROVISIONS.—There is a very good inquiry for smoked meats, but the market continues at fairly easy levels. The market for live hogs is inclined to be easy, and the lower prices ruling in the live market are reflected in the smoked products. There is an improved demand for most lines. Ordinary breakfast bacon is quoted at from 32 to 34c per lb. and special trim bacon is 37c.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, October 11.—There are few changes in the produce market this week and prices for the most part are ruling steady. Butter holds at last week's levels as also cheese. Eggs show a stronger position as with light receipt prices have advanced. There is no change in quotations on hogs, selects being quoted at $10.50. The demand for smoked ham and bacon is showing an improvement. Cooked meats have eased off due to the approach of Fall weather. Poultry receipts are heavier and the demand is improving. There is little change in the fish situation.

BUTTER SHOWS NO CHANGE

Winnipeg.

BUTTER.—No change is reported in quotations on butter. The local demand for creamery is good and an improvement has been noted. No. 1 creamery prints are quoted from 38c to 40c per lb. and creamery prints No. 2 are 36c and 38c per lb.

CHEESE HOLDS FIRM

Winnipeg.

CHEESE.—Reports from the East state that the cheese market is showing a firmer tone. New September cheese has arrived and is quoted at 20c per lb.

EGG PRICES ARE HIGHER

Winnipeg.

EGGS.—Production of eggs continues to show a decline, and receipts of fresh eggs are in small volume. Prices as a result show an upward tendency with No. 1 quoted at 29c and selects in cartons at 38c.

LARD PRICES STEADY

Winnipeg.

LARD.—The local market for lard is steady with a fair amount of business passing. Pure lard in tierces is selling at 18c per lb. Shortening shows no change and is quoted at 15½c per lb.

SMOKED MEATS UNCHANGED

Winnipeg.

PROVISIONS.—There is no actual change in the market for smoked meats but the undertone is easy on account of the lower prices paid for hogs. Smoked ham is quoted at 32c per lb. Best quality breakfast bacon averaging from 4 to 10 lbs. is quoted at 42c.

POULTRY RECEIPTS HEAVIER

Winnipeg.

POULTRY. — Receipts of poultry show an increase and dealers look for heavier shipments as the season advances. The demand locally is improving and prices show no change.

FISH IN FAIR DEMAND

Winnipeg.

FISH.—There is a fair demand for all lines of fish especially on halibut and salmon. Salmon is quoted from 15½c to 21c per lb. and halibut from 16c to 17c.

NO CHANGE IN HOGS

Winnipeg.

FRESH MEATS.—There is no change in quotations on hogs. Selected live are quoted at $10.50 while lightweights are quoted from $9.50 to $10.

HOW EGGS MUST BE GRADED

spector's number the device to be in such form as the Minister may approve.

13. Before the Government mark is placed upon any case, the inspector shall draw samples of at least five per cent. of the cases to be marked and shall examine at least one-half of the eggs in each case. The Inspector shall satisfy himself that the samples taken are representative and shall take any further samples and make any further examination that he deems necessary.

14. No cases containing eggs shall be marked with the Government mark unless the warehouse or room in which the eggs are held are in a clean and sanitary condition, and further, no case shall be marked unless suitable accommodation is provided for Inspectors to make the necessary examination, such accommodation to include a dark room, facilities for candling, and such fittings as may be required to insure a proper examination.

15. No person other than a duly appointed Inspector shall apply any Government mark to any cases containing eggs.

16. No person shall have in his possession empty egg cases bearing the Government mark. After the contents of any case bearing the Government mark have been removed, such mark shall be obliterated. This shall be done by the person or persons removing the eggs from the case, or the person or persons receiving the cases when returned from a foreign country.

17. Collectors of Customs throughout Canada shall not allow any Canadian eggs to be shipped for export out of Canada that are not marked in accordance with these regulations or any shipments of 25 cases or more to be shipped out of Canada unless accompanied by an export certificate as specified in Clause (10) of these regulations.

Regarding Imported Eggs

18. All shipments of eggs in the shell, imported into Canada for domestic consumption in shipments of ten (10) cases or more shall be subject to inspection and marking at the port of entry in the Dominion of Canada by duly authorized inspectors.

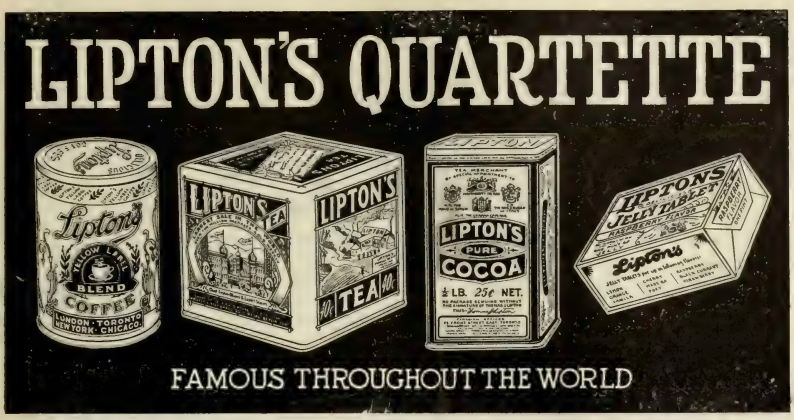
19. Collectors of Customs and Excise shall not release for delivery any importations of eggs in shipments of ten cases or more intended for domestic consumption until they have been inspected as required by these regulations. Such certificates shall be attached by the Collector of the Customs entry form and forwarded to the Department of Customs and Excise.

20. All cases of eggs imported into Canada for domestic consumption in shipments of 10 cases or more if not previously marked shall be marked on both ends by the importer with the name of the country of origin and with the words "Fresh Seconds," "Storage Seconds," or "Preserved Seconds" as the case may be in all instances where the eggs are graded as "Seconds" by the inspector providing that the importer may exercise the privilege of rehandling the shipment under the supervision of and subject to the approval of the inspector.

When in warehouse all such shipments shall be piled separately from all other eggs and no cases of eggs originally graded as "Seconds" by an inspector, shall be shipped or delivered or displayed for sale by the importer, his agent or employee until they have been reinspected and marked by an inspector. All cases of eggs reinspected by an inspector and graded as "Seconds" shall be marked on both ends by the importer with the words "Fresh Seconds," "Storage Seconds," or "Preserved Seconds," as the case may be, the lettering in all such markings and the name of the country of origin to be block letters not less than one inch in height.

Same Method of Examination

21. The method of examination shall be the same as that prescribed in the examination of export and interprovincial shipments covered by the regulations with the exception that in the instance of imported eggs and other eggs examined at destination a maximum allowance of twelve (12) eggs to the half case below grade stated will be allowed. The method of taking weights shall be as follows:



The Inspector will ascertain the net weight of each of the 10 cases. If one or more cases weigh less than 43 lbs. net to the 30 dozen case, the entire sample drawn shall be weighed. If three or more cases in the sample drawn weigh less than 43 lbs. net the entire shipment shall be marked "Fresh Seconds," "Storage Seconds" or "Preserved Seconds" as the case may be.

22. Eggs that have been imported into Canada when repacked shall be in the cases in which they were imported and the marking showing the country of origin and grade shall not be removed or obliterated, providing always in any case where such eggs cannot be repacked in the original case, other containers may be used, but such containers shall be marked to show the class and grade and the country of production and the marks used shall be the same in form and character as those on the original package.

23. The mark of approval to be placed on each case of foreign eggs, by the inspector, shall include the words "Foreign Eggs" and the words "Government Inspected" together with the Inspector's number, the device to be in such form as the Minister may approve.

24. No cases containing foreign eggs imported into Canada for domestic consumption in shipments of ten (10) cases or more shall be shipped or delivered or displayed for sale until they have been marked with the mark of approval as provided in these regulations.

25. All these Regulations shall be in effect on and after the publication thereof in the Canada Gazette.

Five Points of Superiority that Sell More Gasoline

The new Bowser Chief Sentry piston-type measuring pump has five outstanding points of superiority over any other gasoline pump, which enable you to give better service, increase your business and enlarge your profits.

(1) It is hand or air-power driven—easily convertible either way.
(2) It has large easy-to-read dial registers for both customer and operator which show the quantity of gasoline being served.
(3) It is equipped with the Bowser centrifugal water separator which positively separates all moisture and dirt from the gasoline, assures your customer of dry, clean, full-o'-pep gasoline and most miles per gasoline dollar.
(4) The sight glass, through which the customer sees that the measure is full, and sees the gasoline flowing from the discharge into the hose leading to his car. This means satisfied customers—steady trade.
(5) The tally bell which audibly announces the completion of each gallon measurement.

By our widespread national advertising motorists are being told to look for this pump and to demand Bowser Service. You will profit by giving this service. Write to-day for booklet C-11.

CALIFORNIA WALNUT CROP IS REDUCED

The heat wave recently in California has reduced the 1922 walnut crop below the previous estimate of 26,500 tons, says a report. The crop of 20,068 tons of 1921 was the largest ever grown except that of 1919 when it was 28,450 tons. Confirmations of orders for walnuts have exhausted the allotment to the New York territory, says the New York Journal of Commerce. The New York market could easily handle 40 per cent. more nuts than have been apportioned. They have requested a larger allotment but get no favorable response. The recent reduction in vacuum packed tins and glass shelled nuts have increased the demand, cleaning up the spot supplies.

The Tobacco with a heart

Every Dealer Knows It!

Ask any dealer about Macdonald's and he will tell you it's the name that sells it.

More than 60 years ago "The Tobacco with a heart" first came into prominence. It has stood "since the fifties" as Canada's standard. For four generations they have called for MACDONALD'S.

There is only one Macdonald standard, but a range of types including cigarettes. Two Blends with but a single aim—to please the individual taste—the now famous MACDONALD'S CIGARETTES and the new BRITISH CONSOLS Cigarettes.

Fixing Resale Prices in the Balance

Ontario Legislature Committee Hearing Views of Lawyers and Business Men—Government Board to Regulate the Spread Advocated by Some—This Would be Opposed by Ford Motor Co. Who Claim the Manufacturer Only Can Do This

Special Staff Correspondence

TORONTO, October 18. (Special). The special committee appointed during the spring session by the Ontario Legislature to consider the proposed new Provincial Bill with the purpose of preventing the fixing of resale prices, met on Tuesday morning to hear the pros and cons. The Bill was the outcome of the case brought by the Attorney General of Ontario against a number of wholesale grocers and manufacturers some months ago. That case was in itself an outcome of the Board of Commerce investigation into alleged combines existing among manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers which began in Hamilton in 1920 and ended in Toronto some time later. At that investigation A. W. Roebuck, representing the Attorney General of Ontario, discovered what he considered were combines in restraint of trade. The Board of Commerce, consisting of W. F. O'Connor and James Murdock, the present Canadian Minister of Labor, in their judgment decided that up to that time they had not heard any evidence to condemn the retailers, wholesalers or manufacturers for their resale price agreements, etc., but stated that they were making further investigation and a definite decision would be given later. However, the Board of Commerce ceased to function a short time afterwards and no further investigations were made.

Had No Jurisdiction

The Attorney-General through Mr. Roebuck then instituted suit against certain wholesale grocers of Ontario and a number of manufacturers. The judge decided that the Attorney-General had no right to bring such an action, but made no decision as to the rights or otherwise of a manufacturer to fix resale prices.

The Bill introduced into the last Ontario Legislature endeavored to give the Attorney-General this right, to prevent entirely the right of a manufacturer to fix by agreement his resale price from wholesaler to retailer or from retailer to consumer. Several objections were raised to the Bill at the time and it was decided to hold the matter over and in the meantime to secure opinions from the various parties interested. Hence the special committee and the session this week.

Similar U. S. Cases

Mr. Roebuck in support of the Bill reviewed several combine cases that had come before the court during the past twenty years. He also cited the Colgate and the Shrader cases in the United States. He claimed that the Shrader case came under the anti-combine Sherman Act of the United States and that the point in the judgment was that it was illegal to agree with a purchaser that he will not sell goods at a certain fixed price.

He then quoted from certain agreements between Canadian manufacturers and the Wholesale Grocers' Association. Among these was the agreement with the Bowes Company made in October, 1918, in which it was agreed that the manufacturer would sell only to the wholesale trade and that the wholesale trade must sell at list prices. Mr. Roebuck referred to the agreement with W. C. Macdonald Reg'd Inc., and stated that before this agreement went into effect wholesalers were making ½%, whereas afterwards they were allowed 9 to 10%. He was asked as to whether the agreement increased the price to the consumer but he was unable to say whether it did or not.

Some Willing To Take Less

He referred to the Wholesale Grocery Limited, and to Kenneth Knowles who operated this concern. Mr. Knowles had stated in the witness box that he was willing to sell certain products on a 10% basis whereas the regular discount to association wholesalers was 12½%. He had also been informed by Milton Cork of the Loblaw Groceteria Stores that he had purchased at times certain goods below the list price, and that this better price entered into the sale price to the consumer. He maintained that there should be free play in competition and that the best man should win. He thought that the most ironbound agreement of all was that between The E. W. Gillet Company and the wholesale houses. In this the wholesaler was bound to sell at a fixed price and had to make an affidavit whenever called upon that he had lived up to the agreement in every way. There was also a second form of agreement between the same manufacturer and the wholesale trade in which the wholesaler was entitled to a rebate each six months if the price had been maintained.

Not All Admitted

Hon. W. E. Raney asked if a wholesaler were to cut the price what would happen to him by the Association. Mr. Roebuck was unable to say what would happen him.

Mr. Raney—"Did any one ever apply for membership in the Association who did not get in?"

Mr. Roebuck—"Yes, Frank Morley for instance. I consider him a wholesaler but some of the others do not." "Why?" asked Mr. Raney.

Mr. Roebuck—"They say he has no warehouse, that he doesn't carry a complete stock, that he sells direct to the good houses and that he hasn't the overhead expenses of a wholesaler. Mr. Morley claims he has a warehouse and that he sells to the good houses but the others do the same."

"Do the railways fix their rates so that there won't be competition?" was asked by one member of the committee.

Mr. Roebuck—"The Dominion Railway Board arranges that."

Scope of the Bill

Mr Roebuck referred to the method of the E. B. Eddy Company in selling the trade. They notify, he said, their customers of the price at which goods are to be sold to the retailer only, but there is no agreement as I understand it. The Bill as drafted would only touch re-sale agreements and would not for instance affect such an arrangement as the Eddy Company's.

"Is there any such legislation in any other province?" was asked. "No," was the answer.

E. M. Trowern—"Nor in the world."

Mr. Roebuck—"There are in several states of the United States."

Mr. Trowern—"But not in operation."

"Could the Dominion Government enact a similar law?" was asked.

"I don't think so," was the reply. "This is clearly a civil matter for the legislature."

Under this Bill, Mr. Roebuck stated, it would be impossible for a Montreal manufacturer for instance, to collect a bill in Ontario if he had a re-sale agreement with the Ontario firm.

Hugh Blain—"They would send it with a Bill of Lading attached."—(Laughter).

Hon. Mr. Raney thought the big point at issue was whether the consumer and the retailer should be bound by an agreement to which they are not a party.

Mr. Ellis of Barber Ellis, manufacturing stationers, stated that he had been fifty years in business. Fifty years ago the business slogan was, "Business is War." To-day, however, this has been changed and the motto is, "Co-operation." He maintained that business men should co-operate more and not try to cut each other's throat. He made the point that if such a law were to come into effect in Ontario it would not affect for instance Manitoba, where his firm has a plant in Winnipeg. If a representative of theirs were to do anything contrary to this Act in Winnipeg a competitor of ours would come into Ontario and find us guilty of a criminal offence. He thought that was one feature that undoubtedly should be considered carefully.

Mr. Raney—"Is it fair to the consumer that the price of any commodity should be fixed?"

Mr. Ellis—"We are all fair and honest business men and if we are honest and fair with others we will be to the consumer."

Mr. Raney—"Would the consumer not be adversely affected?"

Mr. Ellis—"It would undoubtedly be the exception if he were."

Advocates Trade Regulating Board

Hugh Blain, president of Eby-Blain, Limited, wholesale grocers, Toronto, referred to some of the statements made by Mr. Roebuck. The latter mentioned the case of one manufacturer who had increased the discount to the wholesale grocery trade. Mr. Blain said this firm felt that if the wholesale grocer could not make money, it could not do as much business and undoubtedly that was the reason why this discount was increased. He had always advocated the fixed price policy, and also that these prices should be regulated by some government official or board.

"This Bill does not affect the manufacturer selling to the retailer at a fixed price," said Mr. Blain, "then why should a manufacturer not be allowed to fix the re-sale price from wholesaler to retailer? This Bill would tend to wipe out the wholesale dealer on this account. If a manufacturer wanted to have a fixed price to the retail trade, he would sell direct if he could not sell through the wholesaler. If the wholesale dealer is not an economic necessity, then we should be wiped out."

The Attorney-General asked Mr. Blain about what percentage of his lines were sold on the fixed price basis. Mr. Blain replied that between 40 and 50% of their business was on proprietary articles and that perhaps 25% of the volume of business was done through price agreements.

Postage Stamps Could Be Cut

E. M. Trowern, Secretary of Dominion Board, Retail Merchants' Association, Ottawa, made one of his characteristic fighting addresses in defence of the retail merchant and against the meddling in business affairs by men whom he claimed knew little or nothing about them.

He asked the Committee if they appreciated the number of things that the Bill, if passed, would affect. For instance there were postage stamps. What would happen if every dealer in postage stamps was allowed to cut the price? Then there were automobiles, all of which were sold on the fixed price basis from dealer to consumer. There were sheriffs' and lawyers' fees, shoe polish, dry goods, furniture, different kinds of food products, implements, optical goods, pianos, sewing machines, typewriters, newspapers. There were also milk dealers. What would happen if the farmers were not allowed to fix the price of their milk to dealers?

Mr. Raney—"Are you in favor of the appointment of a board of some kind to regulate these prices?"

Mr. Trowern—"Yes, if the board is properly constituted and includes merchants." His suggestion was perhaps three manufacturers, three wholesalers and three retailers. Mr. Trowern maintained that in business there were perhaps three per cent. fakirs or pirates and ninety-seven per cent. endeavoring to make a fair and honest living. Included in the former were those who cut the price of one article and "soaked" the public on others.

"Without your merchants this country would not be worth a cent," he declared emphatically.

R.M.A. Has to Watch Legislators

R. R. Hall, M.P.—"What about co-operative societies? In the Old Country you will see streets without any merchants. The business there is operated by co-operative societies."

Mr. Trowern—"I don't want to enter into a discussion on co-operative societies but I will just say to Mr. Hall that they don't pay five cents of income tax."

Mr. Hall—"What are the objects of the Retail Merchants' Association?"

Mr. Trowern—"It would require at least three or four hours to tell you that, but I might briefly say, to watch governments to see that they do not put over improper legislation on us; to watch fake advertisers, to assist merchants in bettering their business, etc."

Mr. Trowern referred to the intimation by members of the Committee that the consumers should be called in in the matter of fixing rates. He asked if consumers were called in in connection with fixing prices on railway tickets, on the sale of theatre tickets. "It can't be done. It is absurd," he declared.

Hon. Mr. Drury, Prime Minister, asked if he was in favor of fixing the prices on all farm products.

Mr. Trowern replied that he was as far as it was possible. But there are cases where it would be impossible, for instance, if one farmer grew a better quality of apples than another, he would be entitled to a better price.

The Ford Co.'s Agreement

H. S. Pritchard of the Ford Motor Company read the agreement his company has with their dealers in regard to the re-sale of Ford cars and parts to the ultimate consumer. They sell outright to the dealer for cash and the dealer signs a contract preventing him from selling at a price less than the fixed re-sale figure. The agreement, he said, was air-tight and that for each violation the dealer was assessed $100.00 and the contract was also terminated. They had the same prices in every part of Canada from Halifax to Vancouver, apart from freight charges, and he believed this was the correct principle. He also considered that the ultimate buyer was benefited by such a principle. He showed that in 1914 the price of the Ford touring car was $495.00. He traced the advances during the war on account of higher costs but at the present time it was $445.00. The ultimate buyer was getting the benefit of lower costs.

His firm endeavored to fix the re-sale price at as low a figure as possible because the lower the figure the greater the turnover and the more money made by both company and dealer. The manufacturer, he said, was the one most interested in setting the price, not excepting the consumer, because of the desire on the part of the manufacturer to secure turnover. Their dealers are chosen carefully and have to subscribe to certain definite standards. They are allowed 20% margin to cover their net profits and overhead and their overhead includes a certain amount of service to their customers, as well as the usual other things. This percentage is low and a dealer must sell many cars to make any net profit.

Would Advance the Price

Mr. Pritchard said that the Bill would prevent his firm from agreeing with the dealer on the margin of profit he se-

Dressing the Window for Hallowe'en

The Festive Time of Hallowe'en Offers the Grocer a Special Opportunity to Boost the Sale of Certain Lines—Many Effective Ways of Dressing the Windows With a View to Stimulating Sales

WITH Hallowe'en just ten days away, the grocer should make the best of the next week and endeavor to push those lines that are particularly appropriate for the Hallowe'en party, and a proper celebration of this annual event. The Hallowe'en party is a popular occasion for the young people, and the grocer can do a great deal by suggesting lines to his customers, that are bound to please their guests at social gatherings of this kind.

A window display of course will do a great deal to help the sales of specialities for a fitting celebration of Hallowe'en. The window here reproduced was dressed for last Hallowe'en by Cudmore Bros. of Charlottetown, P. E. I., and it will be agreed that it is generally effective both from the standpoint of being particularly fitting as an observance of Hallowe'en, and also of selling value. It features apples and grapes, and Mr. Cudmore reports the sales of both these articles greatly increased as a result of the window. Apples, grapes, nuts, pop corn, preparations for sandwich making, brown sugar for the toffee pull, are all good lines to boost at this time, and the grocer who makes an effort to increase his turnover by taking advantage of such an opportunity as an occasion like Hallowe'en provides, will undoubtedly be well repaid.

Another effective Hallowe'en trim is done in orange and black crepe paper in these two colors covering the background. Orange crepe predominates, with narrow ribbons of black crepe hung down the orange background. Suitable articles were attached to this appropriate background. The central exhibit was a boy's automobile, seated at the steering wheel of which was a boyish wax figure. The boy was dressed up in a Hallowe'en costume and was masked.

Another merchant curtained off the rear with alternate black and orange crepe paper ribbons. These ribbons, suspended from the ceiling, were covered with orange and black crepe paper, with here and there a pumpkin cut-out serving as a mat. More orange and black crepe paper ribbons were festooned from the ceiling.

The Hallowe'en atmosphere might be injected into a window by means of a unique broom. The straws of the broom were simulated by strips of orange tissue paper, caught in at the proper place. There was a handle on the broom, the whole being suspended in the middle of the trim by a thin wire. Orange and black tissue paper ribbons ran from this central feature to the different articles comprising the display.

A Toronto merchant took particular pains to make his Hallowe'en window central exhibit an unusual one. This assumed shape in the dummy figure of a tramp—posed in the attitude of sitting on an upturned packing case in front of a fire. The fire was made of charred twigs with red tissue paper underneath, through which an electric light gleamed. The fire certainly was most realistic. Corn on the stalk formed the background, with cardboard pumpkins, lit up by electric lights, placed here and there among the corn. Down in front an effective display of suitable merchandise was made.

For the Hallowe'en Party

An unusual effect was produced in a Toronto window by starting a number of black ribbon chains from the middle of the window pane. The chains radiated outwards just like the rays of the sun. Black cut-outs of witches, bats and cats were pasted on the spaces in between each ribbon chain. The centre of the window background was adorned with a round cut-out of bright blue with golden stars. Against this was the silhouette of a witch riding on a broomstick. The floor space across the rear was occupied by a row of corn-husks, beautifully gilded. Black velvet served as the floor covering, with timely merchandising suggestions contained on the same.

The background was composed of

This Store Has Some Unusual Problems

Question of How to Bill Goods to Branch Stores From the Main One Again Comes Up, and is Discussed Here—Readjustment Brought About Conditions Hard to Cope With

By HENRY JOHNSON, JR.

OFTEN it is very difficult to give an adequate picture of a business without danger of revealing identity. That is the case this week. Yet I must keep confidence at all hazards, so certain figures will be disguised though the essential facts will be truly reflected. All of this so that some unusual problems may be touched upon—if only to show that none of us had a monopoly on hard nuts to crack.

This is the continuation of correspondence dating back to last Spring at which time I indicated that the management of a branch store was not an easy task. This letter reveals that much of the trouble was the, at present, very common one due to the rapid slump in values in 1920. On that point my correspondent now writes:

"We marked down pretty heavily certain lines, especially dry goods. After stock taking, the party who assumed the business took the stock at an all around discount of 15 per cent. This added largely to our loss during the first eight months of the year but after taking stock, even at new values, there would be a corresponding profit for balance of the year.

"The unusual marking down of all dry goods was due to stock bought at high prices. On account of the serious financial depression in this section, this stock was largely carried until Spring when prices dropped. Farmers here depend almost entirely on tobacco crops. When they could not sell, they were practically without cash. Groceries they must have but could do without dry goods.

"Another difficulty: Though we are apparently within easy reach of wholesale markets, this is only true really eight months. Navigation closes December 1st and re-opens April 1st. We must carry supplies in all lines sufficient for the interval."

Readjustment Hard to Cope With

"In these circumstances, much of our dry goods, bought for winter, was carried into the second winter and appeared again in our inventory. Some lines, intended to be well marked down for September 30th inventory, might have been missed in changing cost marks on the goods themselves and so been taken in again at too high a figure.

"The isolation accounts for our heavy stock. We must carry many unusual lines, such as caskets. These sell slowly and run into money—perhaps only two or three sales a year, but as there is no other store here, we must carry them."

This shows that all merchants have not the same kind of troubles, but that some have such as we should not like to face. The readjustment difficulty seems to have been practically universal. Only those who pushed the knife in to the hilt succeeded in getting out with little or no loss. Harvard's last investigations seem to show that department stores were the only stores that, as a class, profited in 1921. Practically, all of this merchant's troubles hinge on the readjustment proposition.

He gives more details of his branch store management and accounting. Those details are not of general interest, and I think I have done all I can hope to do to help him through suggesting certain factors. He must work out the details himself, and I feel rather sure he will do that.

The chief difficulty and the one which may result in the discontinuance of the branch as unprofitable, is indicated in the following:

"Now, as you state, to add a wholesale percentage to branch store goods, to cover handling, billing, etc., in main store, probably would prohibit any showing of profit in the branch, yet we must arrive at some method of ascertaining the cost of doing business with the branch and charge that against it to give the main store a fair deal. Goods delivered to branch increase the volume of our business, but bring us no profit, nor even pay for the handling, and from your suggestions and explanations, this would decrease turnover and add to expense.

"One advantage we must remember: so long as we maintain this store, we keep competitors from opening up. If we were to drop it, another store would be apt to start, and the business and population would not support two stores with profit to either."

Now, have we not hit on the real solution? There is not business for two stores with profit for either. And if that is true of two stores owned separately, it is equally true of two stores owned jointly. The figures all have indicated that when all proper handling charges are included, when rent is charged, salary allowed and all other items fairly included, the branch does not pay. Therefore, it does not pay—and that is all there is to it.

Branches Often Suckers, not Feeders

Such a condition is more prevalent than you may think. In many businesses branches are a delusion. On paper, they look fine. In practice, they sap blood from the parent instead of contributing to its support. I know how hard it is to face such facts and act on their teachings. It seems about the last thing anybody wants to do—abandon a going business. Yet if a thing, after demonstration and trial, is found not to be self-supporting, it seems to be folly to continue it.

I have been through that kind of experience. I have felt reluctant to "disturb" my business by dropping things apparently convenient to customers but quite plainly unprofitable to the business. But the discontinuance did not hurt a bit! The time and attention they had absorbed were devoted to profitable things. Those flourished better and the business was as much strengthened by the pruning as a tree usually is.

Again, it may be that two separate stores each run by a man who devotes all his energy to its success, may prove profitable where two owned by one man, one managed at arm's length, fail to produce profits.

The man on the spot must make the final decision. I can only suggest things to think over. I can understand that if the business as a whole is profitable, one will hesitate to cut any of it off. But if plainly it is not profitable, we must do something.

I often wonder, in such cases, whether the merchant is getting enough for his goods. So often businesses are starved for the lack of two or three per cent. extra added to their prices. All over the continent I find men who have had no courage to advance price ratios on the basis, say, of one cent in fifteen, marking 15c. items 16c., 30c. items 32c., and so on over a big preponderance of the stock. The difference has been around three per cent. average. The result has been to turn apparent failure into assured success.

Without Competition, This Can Be Tried

Nowhere that I know of has such a thing been done where the merchant enjoyed virtual monopoly, yet it has been successful. Surely, where a man operates without competition and is such a necessary factor in the life of his community, it should be easy to do. Are you forgetting the eternal, economic truth that the laborer is worthy of his hire? Don't. He is and he should get it. Moreover, he must get it or he will starve. If he starves, another who is not foolish enough to work for nothing will come to fill his place—and the last state of that community may be worse than it would have been had the first man got what was coming to him.

And again: Don't say "Can't" too suddenly or conclusively! More I do not feel that I should try to suggest.

From a New Brunswick town comes this:

"Dear Sir:—What would you consider a fair salary for husband and wife running a small grocery and delicatessen store for wife's parents? Mother also helps in store at times, owns building and pays all insurance on store and stock. The clean profit for one year runs as high as $2,700 to $3,000, out of which we receive third part of profit. Is that enough?"

What kind of trouble shall I get into in this family circle if I answer at all? Here is one of those intimate, close-corporation, family affairs where it is so difficult correctly to appraise what each contributes to the entire business and where, whatever we assume to decide, we are sure not to please all parties. Things seem to be going fairly well as they are.

Yet I must answer. And it seems to me that the share of this husband and wife should be half the net profits. That is simply my judgment, given equitably, with no knowledge of the circumstances other than the few words above quoted.

Toronto Grocers Give $100 to Fire Sufferers in North

Toronto, Oct. 17.—At a recent meeting of the grocers' section of the Toronto Retail Merchants' Association, the sum of one hundred dollars was voted towards the relief of the fire sufferers in Northern Ontario. The chair on this occasion was taken by the president, Jerry Burns. Business in connection with the picnic of Toronto grocers held early in the summer was disposed of. It was also decided to hold the first euchre party of the season on November 20th, at McConkey's. The success that attended these social gatherings last season, should be duplicated this year.

A Second Nations' Food Show at Olympia in 1924

London, Eng., (Special).—A meeting of the principals of British and foreign firms now exhibiting at the Nations' Food Exhibition was held at Olympia when it was unanimously decided to support a second Nations' Food Exhibition to be held in September 1924 also at Olympia. Several speakers stated that this year's Exhibition was the most successful they had ever been associated with and hearty congratulations were offered to the management. Both for magnitude of displays and attendance of the public the existing Nations' Food Exhibition has created records but the next one will be half as large again as it will occupy not only the main building, the annex and the wide galleries but also the vast extension to Olympia now in course of construction.

Two Factors in Success of Window Displays

MONTREAL, Sept. 11. — A few weeks ago Canadian Grocer published an article in which it was claimed that the best "selling" windows in the grocery trade were those dressed with only one or two different lines and that these were impressed upon the passers-by by the lay-out of the display and the fact that attention was centered upon the products themselves.

A local retail grocer, J. A. Hewson, of 871 St. Catherines St. west, read that article but held a different opinion and promptly endeavored to prove that he could dress an attractive and selling window with a great variety of lines. This window contained bulk shelled walnuts, package teas, canned fruit and vegetables, raisins, figs and cereals, all arranged on tiers of narrow shelves built up in the window. Each shelf had a different color combination yet all the colors blended with a pleasing effect upon the eye. Blue and white and red and white combinations were used.

Illustrating how J. A. Hewson, 871 St. Catherine Street, Montreal, recently dressed his window. A number of lines are used and the price tickets, it will be seen, are very prominent.

Mr. Hewson claims that the success of a window display as a selling force depends upon two things. First, the arrangement and colors must be attractive and yet pleasing, and secondly, well printed price tickets must be placed on the goods. His idea in dressing the window with such a wide variety of lines at this season of the year is that people are now returning to the city after a summer in the country and their pantry shelves are bare by necessity. Therefore the grocer has a splendid opportunity to restock those shelves with a variety of articles that not even the people realize they need. The energetic grocer therefore can make extra sales by the power of suggestion and a good window can be a great help in getting this business.

The Northern Ontario Fire

THE devastation, destruction of property and the terrible suffering that followed as a result of the fire that swept Northern Ontario, wiping out the town of Haileybury, as well as many smaller municipalities, has awakened the heartfelt sympathy of thousands of people throughout the length and breadth of the land. Many merchants lost heavily in the disaster, and to them is extended the sympathy of Canadian Grocer, as well as their fellow-retailers in all parts of the country, coupled with the hope that soon from the ashes of their former stores may rise bigger and better ones, with many years of prosperity and success ahead for them.

Parcel Post Shows Big Deficit

IN CONNECTION with the introduction of the new C.O.D. Parcel Post service in Canada, as outlined in recent issues of Canadian Grocer, it is interesting to note that postal officials in the United States are finding it necessary to increase rates on Parcel Post in view of deficits which have followed its operation. Rates in that country on such mail matter are being advanced to cover an annual deficit of nearly seventy million dollars. The increase will mean an average of $3 a year to every family. The U. S. Postmaster-General makes it plain that the Parcel Post service has not been paying its way. Steps have been taken to establish responsibility for the deficit and it has been found that first class mail is paying a profit; that second and third class are at least making expenses; that special services cost the country two to three million dollars a year and that Parcel Post is carried at a considerable loss. It is not known yet exactly what the increase will be but it has been estimated that increased rates of three cents a parcel will be necessary to cover the deficit.

The situation in Canada is similar in some respects, notably the fact that the Parcel Post branch of our mail carrying service has also been operated at a loss. Yet despite this fact the new C.O.D. service has been introduced since October 1, bringing with it increased accommodation for mail order houses and large city department stores who seek business throughout the country in direct competition with local retail stores. This accommodation brings with it a responsibility to the government which did not exist under the former plan, and it leaves the strong likelihood that the government may be unable to secure 100 per cent. collections. If the attempt is being made to put the parcel post service on a paying basis by endeavoring to increase the volume of material carried, it is questionable if this can be accomplished at rates which have so far shown a deficit, to say nothing of the increased liability to the carriers under the new plan.

Inferior Product Loses Customer

A FRIEND was telling one of our representatives the other day about how his grocer lost him as a customer for a certain kind of canned fish. This man is very fond of this particular fish and has been in the habit of eating a great deal of it. Some weeks ago he was leaving on a camping trip and ordered a supply of the brand he had been getting for some time back. The fish packed under this brand were of a very fine quality and he always enjoyed them.

When his daughter called at the grocery store to order the supply she was informed by the merchant that he did not have any of the same brand in stock but he had a line that was easily as good, if not better. Moreover, the price was considerably lower. This brand was purchased and taken on the trip.

The first tin opened actually made him ill. That was the only tin that was opened and since that time he has not tasted his favorite fish. He claims that the quality was not nearly as good as the former brand he had been purchasing and as a result of the merchant getting him to accept the cheaper line, he has taken a dislike to this fish and it may be a long time before he will purchase any again.

The moral of this incident is plain to every merchant. Some dealers have got into the habit of thinking that people want to buy cheap goods at the present time. This is not the case. Nine-tenths of the purchasing public want quality regardless of price. Price is forgotten if the article is one that pleases and gives full satisfaction.

Undoubtedly there are too many retailers to-day who are buying on a price basis and paying little or no attention to quality. This is a mistaken idea and is the means of losing a great many customers. It is particularly true in some of the large centers where perhaps competition from chain stores is more keen than in the smaller towns and country districts.

Canadian Grocer has always maintained that quality in purchasing foodstuffs should come first. This is as true to-day as it ever was in the past.

Editorials in Brief

When you have made the customer want the goods by what you have said about them, you have used the kind of salesmanship that produces results.

Don't be afraid to emphasize the quality of your goods unless they lack that quality you know people want to find in them. If they do lack quality, get some better goods.

In order to get your advertising message across, avoid the use of technical language or of fancy phrases and flowery descriptions. Talk plain common sense in an understandable way.

There are two kinds of discontent in this world—the discontent that works and the discontent that wrings its hands. The first gets what it wants and the second loses what it has. There's no cure for the first but success; and there's no cure at all for the second.—Lorimer.

The approaching festival of Hallowe'en should not be overlooked by the enterprising grocer. It is a good time to boost the sale of a number of lines that should have a ready appeal. An article dealing with appropriate window displays for this occasion in this week's issue should be found interesting and helpful.

Eddy Co. Officials Are Pleased With the Outlook

Ottawa.—That Canada is about to enter a new era of prosperity in the immediate future is the opinion of J. T. Shirreff, vice-president and assistant manager of the E. B. Eddy Co., Limited, Hull, Canada.

Mr. Shirreff's optimism is based upon first hand knowledge gleaned during his recent tour of Western Canada. Accompanied by Mr. J. F. Taylor, secretary and sales manager of the Eddy Company, Mr. Shirreff visited every important centre west of the Great Lakes, calling upon their many selling agencies throughout this vast territory. Both executives were impressed with the spirit of optimism apparent in every quarter of the West and report that, consequent upon the excellent crops now harvested, there is every indication of a real boom in fall and winter business throughout the entire Dominion.

N. J. Appleton has opened in the grocery business at 1802 Danforth avenue, Toronto.

Grocer is Fined $25 for Selling Adulterated Butter

Montreal, Oct. 17.—Twenty-five dollars fine or one month in jail for selling adulterated butter was the sentence meted out by Judge Enright to Jos. Lamothe, grocer, of 1004 Orleans street, when found guilty of a charge preferred by the Federal Health Department.

Lamothe conducts his business under "Lamothe, Enregistre." G. St. Onge, health inspector, gave evidence to the effect that he visited the premises of the proprietor and indiscriminately took a pound print of butter labelled as creamery. He cut it in two, retaining one half for analysis, leaving the other piece with the grocer.

The sample was analysed and found to contain 25 per cent. adulteration in the form of cocoanut oil.

N. K. Laflamme, K. C., M. P., defended Lamothe, and sought to discredit the value of the analysis. Then Leonce Plante, prosecuting for the Government, called Dr. Aime Valin, Government analyst, to the stand to corroborate his own finding.

A heated argument ensued, Mr. Laflamme contending that the cocoanut oil complained of was not injurious.

True, Mr. Plante replied, this was not harmful, but it was an adulteration. People were paying for butter, which is supposed to be composed of butter fat, while they were getting a high percentage of a foreign substance. Butter fat was selling for 30 cents a pound while cocoanut oil could be purchased for 9 cents.

The court found Lamothe guilty and imposed the sentence provided by the Pure Food and Drugs Act. There are 29 other similar prosecutions which will be heard soon.

Want to Have Street Peddling Done Away With

Ottawa, Oct. 17. (Special).—The grocers of Ottawa are attempting to have peddling on the streets abolished. The matter was dealt with at a regular semi-monthly meeting a few days ago, when it was decided to give full support to the efforts of Alderman Walter Cunningham to have the city council pass the necessary legislation. Alderman Cunningham, who is a member of the association, has given the question a good deal of consideration lately, and is prepared to offer his fellow associates on the city council some sound economic reasons why the peddler should no longer be allowed to sell his wares on the street.

It was stated by J. Basil Bambrick that some peddlers had succeeded in evading the payment of the necessary yearly license by using their market license which they only paid five cents a day for. Others complained that the peddlers were becoming altogether too numerous and were interfering seriously with their business. It was finally arranged to have the market committee of the association work in co-operation with Alderman Cunningham.

Aid Fire Sufferers

The Ottawa grocers are anxious to do their bit in aiding the fire sufferers of Northern Ontario. Ways and means of doing this were discussed at the meeting. After various suggestions had been made it was decided to notify the central committee in charge of the relief work in Ottawa that the members of the association were prepared to offer the use of their trucks for the collection and transportation of parcels and packages to and from any points in the city. To the suggestion of one member that a committee be appointed to secure money donations from the grocers, the chairman pointed out that it was likely each and every grocer would be canvassed for this purpose by the city relief workers.

Are Canvassing Restaurants

There was some discussion concerning the relations between the wholesale and retail grocer, which arose through the announcement by one member that a certain alleged wholesale grocery firm in the city was conducting itself in a manner contrary to recognized business ethics, which were destined to work considerable injury to retail grocers in the immediate vicinity. This brought the statement from another member that he knew it to be a fact that several wholesale firms in the city were making it a business of canvassing the restaurants, boarding houses and drug stores and thus taking considerable business from the retailers, which should rightfully be theirs.

The majority of the members expressed the opinion that there should be closer co-operation and better understanding between the wholesale and retail grocers.

Alex. Phillips, who has had considerable to do with devising ways and means of dealing with the street peddler, was added to the membership of the market committee at the suggestion of T. W. Collins.

In the absence of President A. E. Kelly, the chair was occupied by Vice President T. A. C. Kennedy, and the other members in attendance were Messrs Duncan Bell, treasurer; J. C. Allan, secretary; Alex. Phillips, J. Basil Bambrick, A. S. Moreland, P. G. Allan, R. W. Porteous, J. Patterson, J. Gladstone, T. W. Collins, P. Lamoureux and J. W. Regan.

G. H. Robertson, sales manager of the Carnation Milk Company, Toronto, spent a few days in Winnipeg with their Western representatives, Tees & Persse. Mr. Robertson is going as far West as Edmonton.

The post office at Oyen, Sask., was broken into in the early hours of last Tuesday morning after the arrival of the train.

The mail sacks were cut open and the registered mail stolen, also some cash, but the intruders did not tamper with the safe. The bandits are still at large.

NEW SIGN BY-LAW IS PASSED IN WINNIPEG

Winnipeg, Oct. 17—Amendment of the new signs by-law has been approved by the health committee of the city council. As soon as the change goes through it will be unlawful for anyone to affix a sign, poster, etc., to any occupied house, store or other building without having first obtained a general bill-posting license from the city and without having also the consent of the owner of the property.

As regards vacant property, no person can post any sign without the consent of the owner or the owner's agent. The by-law reads "on or in" vacant property. This means when read in conjunction with another clause of the by-law, that travelling shows that paste their announcements inside the windows of stores would have to remove them within forty-eight hours of the show leaving the city. At present scores of windows are still announcing a carnival which visited Winnipeg on Aug. 7.

Manager of Milling Co. is Killed in an Automobile Accident

Regina, Sask., Oct. 17.—Norman McAllister, manager of the Glenavon Milling Company, at Glenavon, Sask., was killed instantly, and Frank Millard, manager of the Bank of Toronto, was injured painfully last week in an automobile smash just north of the town.

With John Harris, hotelkeeper, they were driving to Grenfell. On a steep hill the brakes failed to work and the car got out of control. On the bridge at the foot of the hill was a heavy farm wagon loaded with lumber. The auto smashed into the load at a great speed smashing the cart into atoms and throwing the occupants from their seats. McAllister struck the load head-on and never regained consciousness. Millard was taken to his home. His injuries, it is stated, are not serious. Harris was unhurt. McAllister was 35 years old and came from Ontario.

Retail Merchants Want Municipalities to License Transients

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 16.—Neglect of municipalities to pass bylaws requiring licensing of transient traders while at the same time the municipalities are assessing the stocks of local merchants, was strongly protested by the provincial executive of the Retail Merchants' Association, which was in session in the city last week under the chairmanship of T. A. Connell, Winnipeg. It was decided to insist that municipalities require temporary dealers to take out licenses if they wanted to trade in the same area as the established merchants. This, it was claimed, would only be fair to both classes.

It was reported that the taxation recommendations of the association had been submitted to the United Farmers' organization and discussed with the executive of that body with a view to getting its co-operation in having the distribution of taxation in the province placed on an equitable basis.

Approval was given the convention of automotive dealers to be held in the city during the time of the automobile equipment show, which will take place some time in March.

Manitoba Leads in Butter Quality

Winnipeg, Oct. 17.—Production of high-class butter in Manitoba has now reached such a stage that the standings of the various competitions held throughout Canada at the provincial fairs this province ranks in front of others in the number of awards with the possible exception of Alberta. Competition between Manitoba and Alberta is so keen that the average of the awards makes it look like a dead heat.

With the completion of the exhibition season a total of the awards for creamery butter has been compiled by L. A. Gibson, provincial dairy commissioner, the result giving the province one first in all Canada at the Winnipeg exhibition, a championship cup for the highest average score at the Toronto exhibition and 32 first prizes in addition to numerous seconds, thirds, fourths, fifths and sixths, numerous gold and silver medals and diplomas.

The latest results are from the London exhibition, where Manitoba Creameries took two first prizes, three seconds and a fourth.

BRANDON POTATO CROP HEAVY—PRICES DOWN

Brandon, Man., Oct. 17—Fifteen degrees of frost Thursday night put the final touches on the glory of the flower gardens and damaged any vegetables above ground. However, local gardeners have made great headway during the last few days in getting in their crops and another week should see the balance of the root crop harvested. As most of the grain has been garnered no damage by frost was reported in this immediate district. This was the most severe frost this season.

A bumper potato crop is being harvested in this district and the supply is likely to greatly surpass the demand. The bottom has fallen out of the market and consequently prices have dropped to pre-war levels. Potatoes are selling for from 40 to 50 cents a bushel.

FIXING RESALE PRICES

cured and putting him under a penalty for infraction of the contract. He maintained that if the price of the Ford car was not controlled, that it would be higher to the buyer. Their dealers must sell a certain number of cars in order to make any profit. If the dealer's price was not controlled he would take advantage of it and would at times charge more for the car and more for the parts than he should. This would cut down sales and the business would devolve on a lesser number of dealers at wider distances. This would be a disadvantage to the purchaser. The localized effort would be gone and there would be less volume. While his firm did not receive many complaints, most of them were from overcharging. This was what would happen if there was an open price. The dealer would then charge the "price of opportunity." The firm would lose the confidence of the buyer and the discredit would certainly work back to them. His firm also fixed the price of labor on a certain job on a car. He did not believe that the same principles that made his firm a success should brand it as a criminal as this Act would do.

Effect of Competition

There were also certain laws of business that could not be changed. One of them was competition. If they fixed their price too high someone else would step in and get the business. They would be the only sufferers.

Strength of Raw Market Will Depend on Volume of Demand for Refined Sugars

An American Refiner Says Prices Are Too High and Closes Plant—Bigger Production is Reported But There is Also a Bigger Demand—Turn in Market is Predicted for January But May Come Sooner

MONTREAL, Oct. 18 (Special).—According to the Journal of Commerce, New York, what the immediate future may have in store for raw sugar is generally conceded to depend upon whether or not the demand for refined sugar continues in volume large enough to compel the refiners to make additional purchases, some believing that having provided for their requirements for two or three weeks to come jobbers will wait for a while before taking on more refined. In that event the refiners who have acquired supplies sufficient for the balance of this month are expected to withhold interest from the offerings of raws with the result that a quiet period may be seen with the possibility of some recession from the recently established levels of 3¾ cents c. & f., New York. Various attitudes towards the sugar market have been taken by prominent refiners in the United States and Canadian refiners refuse to make any statement. The majority seem to be unable to forecast anything for the future. Most of the refiners profess to be working chiefly on present levels and discredit the "bearish" reports. C. A. Spreckels of the Federal Sugar Refining Co. of New York, made a statement last week to the effect that he was closing his Yonkers refineries as a protest against excessive and speculative high prices of raw sugar. A few of the leading refiners in the United States agree with Mr. Spreckels' explanation but are disposed to attribute to his early closing a slightly different logic as to the market. Some assert that they are not finding any difficulty in running their refineries on sugars bought at lower prices and selling their output. They are amused that Mr. Spreckels finds himself in an "awkward predicament" because of his persistent adherence to a different idea of values for raws from those held by others for a long time past.

One American refiner is reported to have said that it is quite true that sugar prices are high and that when the new crop comes in it will probably be at lower prices, but that most refiners are not afraid to buy raws for their requirements during the next five or six weeks, and that in the majority of cases they are working on a basis of two weeks ahead.

Canadian Situation Uncertain

There is much difference of opinion in the wholesale trade with regard to the refined sugar market. Some refiners are buying as usual, but others claim that they are taking no interest in the market and are refusing to buy in any quantity at the present time.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THE strength of the sugar market is the feature of the grocery markets in Canada this week. All Canadian refiners have advanced their prices 25c per cwt., making the quotation, Montreal basis, $7.50 per cwt. The whole situation is stronger. Refiners' stocks are said to be low, and second hand sugars too have been pretty well cleaned up. According to Willett & Gray, exports of raws to the Atlantic ports are in small volume. Stocks of sugar in Cuba have decreased, and the total quantity in all parts of Cuba, both at the ports and in the interior, is now 398,175 tons. One Central continues to grind. The weather continues favorable for the new crop.

A decline is noted in the price of flour this week, some millers quoting a reduction of 30 cents per bbl. Millfeeds on the other hand are now very firm. There is a very active export inquiry, and this fact is responsible for the new strength in the market. Cereals rule at fairly easy levels. There is a moderate inquiry for most lines. Canned goods are moving in better volume, present quotations appearing to be sufficiently attractive to induce freer buying. The situation in dried fruits continues much the same. Strong prices prevail for most lines. Raisins and currants while unchanged as compared with a week ago, are holding at firm levels, with a fairly good demand for the same. The new pack California prunes should be available on this market very soon. Indications from primary markets point to strong quotations on this dried fruit. New rice to arrive is quoted lower. Spices continue to move freely, and quotations on the same are strong and unchanged.

The potato market at the present time is strong, and while supplies are moving to market in heavy volume, the prices are firm. All dealers are not quoting them according to grades as yet, but will do so as soon as the necessary supplies such as tags, etc., are ready, so that the bags may be properly designated. Apples are arriving freely, and are lower in price than a year ago. Other domestic fruits such as plums and peaches are still coming forward, but offerings of course show marked falling off.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, October 18.—There is a marked improvement in the grocery trade. Buying is freer and more interest is manifest on all sides. Some price cutting is still in evidence. Sugar is demanding most attention and varied views of the situation are taken by the wholesale and refining trade. The price advanced last week and raws are strong, yet some read weakness in the near future. Teas are strong and on the point of another advance. The coffee market shows no change. Syrups are steady with an improved demand. Spot rices are firm and there is firmness in cereals. Buying is active in canned goods and prices in general are firm. Soaps and package cereals are the main points of price cutting. Evaporated apples are lower in price as are also dates. Raisins are strong and the California market is taxed to meet export demand. Prunes are advancing and deliveries are late with the probability that full deliveries will not be made. There are some advances in the spice market. The transportation situation in the southern States has hindered deliveries of oranges. There is a good demand for Canadian apples and the market is firm. Potato prices are easy. Marbot walnuts, almonds and filberts are reduced but peanuts are advanced.

CORN PRODUCTS STRONG

Montreal.

CEREALS.—There is a firm tone throughout the cereal market and a particularly strong note in corn products. In the United States deliveries are slow. Pearl hominy has been advanced by some of the wholesalers to $2.40 a bag, which is a result of the gradual advance that has come in that market. There is no change in rolled oats prices but a firmer feeling is noted.

SOME CHANGES IN PACKAGE GOODS

Montreal.

PACKAGE GOODS.—Cutting in some cereals in the local market has lent an unsteady tone locally. Some package dates are reduced in price. Dromedary dates are quoted at 3.60 a case and at the same time Excelsior packages have been advanced. Some wholesalers are making cuts in toasted corn flakes. Kraft-Maclaren cheese is advanced in price.

CANNED GOODS FIRM

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—There is a firm feeling in canned goods with improved buying and more confidence on the part of the trade. On account of some small stocks being offered by independent packers some prices are quoted on corn and tomatoes that are a little below the general list prices. In one case $1.30 a doz. is quoted on standard 2½'s tomatoes by a local wholesale grocer. Although the pack of tomatoes is larger than last year the wholesale trade is confident that the pack will be easily cleaned up this season. The favorable feature in this market is that there is nothing to worry about in carry overs and the retail trade is carrying a very small stock at the present time.

STRONGER TONE FOR PRUNES

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—A stronger tone in the prune market is noted and some of the local wholesale grocers are withdrawing their prices and awaiting developments. It is claimed that the deliveries of the Santa Clara prunes will not be complete and that some prices quoted locally are below present market values. Dates are easier in price and are quoted as low as 10c. per lb. Dromedary dates in packages have been reduced to $3.60 per case. Smyrna sultana raisins, which have slipped through the trouble zone and reached this market are quoted at 24c. per lb. for four crown, 26c. for five crown and 28c. for six crown. The new season's muscatel raisins are now on their way to Montreal. The crop has been splendid and the price for the 3 crown is 15c. per lb. Evaporated apples are much reduced in price.

Lack of English Buying Responsible for Easier Salmon

Writing from Vancouver, B. C., a prominent salmon broker and shipper refers to the salmon situation as mentioned in Canadian Grocer of Oct. 6, in part as follows: "There has been very little speculation by brokers in Sockeye and the only houses that have speculated to any extent are branches of English firms who have already shipped their Sockeye to England. The reason Sockeye is weak is because the English buyers have not yet come into the market. Several of our principals who are reliable packers and give special attention to this pack as their managers are financially interested in the canneries, have authorized us to quote less than the opening prices on all qualities of 1922 pack B. C. salmon."

This broker does not think the reason for the weaker situation is due to some speculative brokers being forced by the banks to turn their stocks into cash as stated in the item in Oct. 6 issue.

SPOT RICE FIRM

Montreal.

RICE.—Spot rice showed a firm undertone during the past week, the direct result of a shortage of fresh receipts in primary markets, and a better trading volume at the source of supplies. Another thing which contributes to the situation is the moderate local holdings of all grades, as distributors have reduced their supplies almost to the point of bare floors. Buying for the domestic trade is good for the season. The future however, shows an easier tone since good supplies are expected from India.

SPICES.—In primary markets there is little change. Peppers are low and the market shows no particular activity. Locally, however, there are some changes which are the result of developments in primary markets for months back. Cayenne pepper is advanced to 38c. a lb. Ground nutmeg in 5, 10, and 25 lb. boxes is advanced to 35c. a lb. Package cinnamon is advanced 20c. a doz., the small size now quoted at 90c. per doz.

TEA MARKET STRONG

Montreal.

TEAS.—A strong tone features the tea market with some minor advances in prices. Buying shows improvement and Indian and Ceylon teas are on the point of another advance. In the London market the advance was most pronounced in common and lower grade teas which amounted to 1½d to 2d per lb. The trade demand has been unusually heavy since spot stocks have been cut down to a minimum. Taking the tea market as a whole its aspect has been stronger than for some considerable time past, the comparatively high rates ruling for fine teas and the more restricted supply of the same having eventually diverted more attention to the common and cheap grades.

EASIER TONE TO NUTS

Montreal.

NUTS.—There is an easier tone to the nut market and prices in many cases have been reduced. Marbot walnuts have been reduced to 20c. per lb. and Three Crown Valencia shelled almonds have been reduced to 40c. per lb. by the wholesale trade. Sicily filberts in bag lots are quoted at 12c., but the better grades of large peanuts have been advanced ½c. per lb. this week.

OPINION DIFFERS ON SUGAR

Montreal.

SUGAR.—There is much difference of opinion on the future of the sugar market. Last week there was another advance of 25c bringing the price of refined sugar to $7.50 per cwt. Some local wholesale grocers have taken the attitude that the price is only temporarily high. Others feel that the market will hold up fairly well until the first of January and are buying as usual. In the U. S. market there is the same difference of opinion and the situation is now practically a gamble. Cuban raws are firm at 3¾c. c. & f., New York, and reports state that Cuban sugars have all been cleaned up. On the other hand there is an increase of about 600,000 tons of sugar produced in Europe and this combined with the increased production of beet sugar in this country will likely have some effect upon the market. The retail trade would be wise to watch the sugar market carefully.

COFFEE MARKET STEADY

Montreal.

COFFEE.—The spot demand for coffee is not active. Prices are steady and unchanged. Local dealers are satisfied with the present basis and do not look for a material change. The visible supplies of Brazil coffee are the best for months past. Much coffee is held as collateral by American bankers on the Brazilian loan and the situation hinges on the plans of the bankers for disposing of these stocks.

PRICE CUTTING IN SOAPS

Montreal.

SOAPS.—Laundry soaps are again the field of conflict among the wholesale grocers and prices are being cut. During the past week no less than seven instances of cut prices on laundry soaps have come to the attention of Canadian Grocer. These cuts are not warranted by market conditions and the retail trade may find the situation advantageous for buying for the future.

BIG BUSINESS IN APPLES

Montreal.

FRUIT.—Apples feature the local fruit market and a big export trade is being done. From all appearances although the crop has been heavy this year the price will be strong this winter since the U. S. has furnished an eager market and Europe is open for all the winter apples that Canada can ship. Florida grape fruit is expected on the market this week. Oranges are hurt by the car shortage in California and supplies are likely to be late in arrival with a consequent strong market. Grapes are plentiful but the peak of the supply has been reached and the price is on the upward trend. The whole crop, which was a large one, has been marketed in a remarkably good fashion and the price remained firm. There has been an excellent export demand as well as a good domestic consumption.

VEGETABLE PRICES STEADY

Montreal.

VEGETABLES.—There is little or no change in the vegetable market. Prices are steady, except for an advance on red tomatoes which are about over. Green tomatoes are in good supply. There are large offerings of potatoes and in one case a retail firm is offering Green Mountain potatoes at 1c. a lb. Onions are unchanged and cabbages, carrots, and cauliflower are in good supply. Cranberries are quoted at $14 a barrel whereas a year ago they were listed at $21 and $22 a barrel and later went as high as $30.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, October 18.—The feature of the grocery markets this week is another advance in the price of sugar. All Canadian refiners announce a jump of 25c per cwt. and the sugar situation generally shows improvement. Flour, on the other hand, is easier, millers quoting prices 30 cents per bbl. lower. Dried fruits are ruling at strong levels. Raisins are ruling at firm prices. as are currants, although no changes are reported in quotations this week. New pack of prunes should be available on this market in the next week or so. Canned goods are moving in better volume, and present prices appear to be attracting buying. Cereals are selling at fairly easy levels, and package goods are in good demand at unchanged figures. Teas continue to advance and spot prices are lower than quotations on new stocks. Spices are steady, and new rice to arrive is quoted lower. Fruits and vegetables are at steady levels. Potatoes are quoted at from 80 to 90c per bag. Supplies are arriving freely, as are also shipments of apples. The latter are ranging in price from $4 to $6.50.

BEANS ARE UNCHANGED

Toronto.

BEANS.—The market for beans shows no change as compared with a week ago. There is a very good demand, and offerings at country points are fairly plentiful. Dealers are quoting Canadian hand-picked and 1 lb. pickers at from $3 to $3.25 per bushel. Cal. limas are 11½c. per lb.

SHELLED NUTS IN GOOD DEMAND

Toronto.

NUTS.—Some dealers are quoting shelled almonds at slightly easier levels this week, at 45c. per lb. Bordeaux shelled walnuts, halves, are offered at from 55 to 60c. per lb., and the Manchurian shelled walnuts are quoted at from 53 to 57c. per lb. Broken walnuts range anywhere from 40 to 45c. per lb. Filberts, shelled, are said to be rather scarce, and some dealers are without supplies. Peanuts in bags, unroasted, are somewhat easier at from 12 to 12¼c. per lb.

CANNED GOODS SELLING WELL

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—Demand for canned goods is showing steady improvement. Price changes are few, but the market appears to be strong at present levels. Wholesalers are quoting the ¼ lb. tins of lobsters at from $2.80 to $2.90 per doz., and the halves at from $5.40 to $5.75 per doz. Canned beets are quoted this week all the way from $1.90 to $2.85 per doz., and golden wax beans are easier at $1.92½ per doz. New canned pumpkin is now available, and is quoted at lower levels at $1.45 per doz. for 2½s. New canned peaches in heavy syrup are quoted lower this year at $2.85 per doz. for twos. Black currant jam is quoted at from 80c. to 91c. for the 4 lb. tins.

DRIED FRUITS STEADY AND STRONG

Toronto

DRIED FRUITS.—The dried fruit situation shows little change, the market being generally strong. The new raisins are not yet available on this market but should be shortly. Prices of spot stocks are very firm. Buying is very good. Some dealers are quoting table raisins this week, 4 Crown at $6.75 per box, and 5 Crown at $7 per box. Currants are very firm on spot and cables from Greece indicate a strong market in all grades with very active buying by foreign countries. The market in prunes is reported very strong at the Coast, and an apparent shortage in some sizes is said to be the cause of the firmer situation. New prunes have not yet arrived on this market, but importers state shipments should come forward very shortly now. Recent consignments of figs from the Far East although in limited supply, have been in very good demand, and quotations on the same are steady at last week's figures.

RICE TO ARRIVE IS LOWER

Toronto.

RICE.—Some wholesalers are quoting fancy blue rose rice to arrive at $6.25 per bag. Spot prices on this quality are quoted at from $7 to $7.50 per cwt. According to information from primary markets, the situation in New York is strong, and an improved tone in all grades is reported. Demand for rice on spot is quiet, and buying just at present is in limited volume. No changes are reported in tapioca, and dealers here are quoting it at from 7½ to 8c. per lb.

SUGAR IS AGAIN HIGHER

Toronto.

SUGAR.—The sugar situation is again very strong, and all Canadian refiners report higher prices. An advance of 25c. per cwt. is announced, making the price delivered Toronto, $7.84 per cwt. The market generally is on a much firmer basis. Supplies of raws in refiners' hands are said to be very limited. The refineries have not been working to capacity, and there is now a very much improved demand for the refined article. Stocks of second hand sugars have been pretty well cleaned up, it is stated, and there is a better inquiry all round for sugar. Sales of raws were made to Canadian refiners last week on the basis of $4.25 c. & f. Halifax. American refiners have also advanced their prices, quotations in New York ranging from $6.60 to $6.75 per cwt.

SPICES ARE AT FIRM LEVELS

Toronto.

SPICES.—Prices ruling on spices are at firm levels. There is still a very active inquiry on spot, with practically no changes in quotations as compared with a week ago. Indications from primary markets point to lower prices on white peppers, according to information received in New York from shipping positions. Cassia looks stronger, and cloves too continue to show a strong market for new supplies. Nutmegs too, are firm.

Toronto.

TEAS.—All new buying of teas is at higher levels than present spot quotations. The Indian crop which is the best indication of the real situation in teas, is reported to be twenty-five million pounds short of the world's requirements. In fact all tea markets at primary positions are exceeding strong, and gradually climbing to higher levels. With the exhaustion of low-priced stocks, spot quotations are bound to be very much higher.

VEGETABLES ARE STEADY

Toronto

VEGETABLES.—Few changes are noted in prices of vegetables this week. There is a very good demand for all kinds. Potatoes are plentiful and range in price from 80 to 90c. per bag. Dealers are not quoting them in grades as yet, as required by government regulation, awaiting supplies of tags, etc., in order to comply. Sweet potatoes are offered at $1.75 per hamper. Onions are unchanged, and selling well at present quotations. Other vegetables are steady.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, October 18.—The grocery market continues to show more activity. The feature has been the advance in quotations on sugar. New prices on canned tomatoes and corn have been announced and at the lower levels a good volume of business is being done. The dried fruit situation is strong and higher levels are quoted on practically all lines. The tea and coffee market continues in a strong condition. Rices are steady with an improved demand. Cereals are inclined to be easier and lower prices are named on package rolled oats. New Ontario beans have arrived on the market and are quoted at lower figures. Due to unfavourable weather conditions olives are reported scarce and price tendencies are upward. The flour market is steady under an active demand. Large quantities of grapes have arrived and are selling freely.

COFFEE MARKET STRONG

Winnipeg.

COFFEE.—The primary coffee market is showing a firmer tone and uncertainty prevails regarding futures, with the result that buying is only for immediate requirements. The demand locally is improving although purchases are made only in sufficient quantities to meet the retailers' needs.

CANNED GOODS IN DEMAND

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—Canned goods are moving in better volume. New pack corn and tomatoes are now on the market. Many retailers throughout the country are selling canned goods at a price which compares with wholesale values in order that they may clean up all old stock before the new pack arrives.

DRIED FRUITS FIRM

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUITS.—The dried fruit market generally is showing more strength. The raisin market is strong and dealers look for even higher levels. Limited quantities of prunes have arrived and sales are reported good. Prunes on primary markets have advanced about 2c. per lb. Apricots and peaches are ruling firm. Seedless raisins are expected to arrive within a few weeks.

Winnipeg.

NUTS.—The shelled nut market is in an unsettled condition, and although new cracked Bordeaux walnuts continue firm for prompt shipments lower prices may be looked for after Christmas. New crop almonds are practically back to pre-war prices and are considered good buying at to-day's quotations. Shelled pecans continue to advance and Brazils have an upward tendency. No old crop peanuts are offered and new crop will not be ready until after the first of the year.

Apple and Potato Production in Most Provinces is Lower Than Last Year

Quebec is the Exception to the Rule, However, as the Apple Crop is Reported to be 75 Per Cent. in Excess of 1921, While the Potato Crop is Equal to a Year Ago

OTTAWA, Oct. 16 (Special).—The most recent estimate of the fruit and vegetable crop prospects in Canada, compiled from reports received at the Fruit Branch of the Department of Agriculture, at Ottawa, indicate decreases in apple and potato production in most provinces.

The exception to the rule, however, is the province of Quebec, where the apple crop is reported to be 75 per cent. in excess of 1921 or 61,600 barrels. The early varieties are particular heavy. The potato crop throughout Quebec will average about equal to that of last year. The quality is, however, expected to be considerably better.

Onion Crop 100 Per Cent. Larger

The most encouraging feature of the report of conditions in Ontario is that the onion crop is 100 per cent. larger than 1921, and the quality excellent. The apple production is 90 per cent. of last year, or 796,500 barrels. Baldwins are very light, as also are Greenings and Spies. The potato acreage throughout Ontario is considerably larger than that of last year but the yield per acre will be somewhat less due to rot in many districts. The total estimated production will be 18,480,000 bushels.

B. C. Apples 80 Per Cent. Crop

In British Columbia it is estimated there will be 2,538,000 boxes of apples, which is 80 per cent. of last year's production. Delicious and Jonathan are heavy but Wagners are light. The potato crop in that province will be about 90 per cent. of last year, or 2,646,000 bushels.

The potato production in the other western provinces will be as follows: Alberta, 85 per cent. of 1921, or 6,861,000 bushels; Saskatchewan, 70 per cent. of 1921, or 7,240,800 bushels; Manitoba, 95 per cent. of 1921, or 969,000 bushels.

The apple crop in New Brunswick is sizing and coloring particularly well and is expected to be 25 per cent. in excess of 1921 with a total production of 41,250 barrels. Dudleys have been picked and Wealthies are now being picked, under most favorable weather conditions. The potato crop in this province is expected to be about 50 per cent. of normal and 60 per cent. of last year's production.

Potatoes Off in P. E. I.

In Prince Edward Island the potato crop will not be more than 75 per cent. of that of 1921. Late blight is chiefly responsible for the decreased yield. Early varieties such as Irish Cobblers have suffered less than later varieties as they have come to full growth before the tops blighted. Last year the growth was very rapid from Sept. 1st, but this year there has been very little growth.

1,628,800 Bbls. of Apples in N. S.

The weather conditions throughout Nova Scotia have been satisfactory during the past month and picking, packing and exporting of apples is in full swing. The crop will be about 80 per cent. of 1921, or 1,628,800 barrels. The fruit is of large size, of good color and on the whole remarkably clean and free from scab and insect marks. The potato crop of this province is approximately 10 per cent. larger than that of last year in spite of the fact that the tops died early due largely to blight. The production will be about 7,055,400 bushels.

Canadian Entries in the Imperial Fruit Show 1922

Ottawa, Oct. 16 (Special).—Entries for the Imperial Fruit Show, 1922, closed at the office of the Fruit Commissioner, Ottawa, Sepetmber 25th. There are practically the same number of entries as for the 1921 show, in spite of the fact that the date upon which it is held—October 27th to November 4th—is most unfavorable to the Canadian grower.

Arrangements have been made for practically all exhibits from Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia to leave Montreal October 11th on the S. S. "Melita," which will ensure their arrival at the Crystal Palace, London, England, in good time. It is expected also that P. J. Carey, packing specialist, Dominion Fruit Branch, who is to be the Canadian representative on the board of three judges at the show, will sail on the same boat and so be in a position to give his personal supervision to the transporting of exhibits.

Grinding Pepper at the Table as Required

Montreal, Oct. 5.—There is a new fashion in vogue in the grocery trade. It is something more than mere fashion that is now calling for table ground pepper. People are just realizing that there is a distinct flavor to fresh ground pepper.

At the present time, jewelers, departmental stores and novelty stores are featuring pepper casters that grind the whole peppers just as it is required. According to the managers of some of these stores, they are selling a large number of these table grinders and the fashion is spreading. Those who have used them tell others and so on and the demand is rapidly spreading. As it spreads, it is creating a demand for whole white and black peppers. Wholesalers state that they have already felt the new demand and they expect it to grow. Spice merchants claim that whole peppers should sell a little lower than the ground for several reasons. In the first place because there is a grinding charge on the ground pepper and in the second place because most of the ground pepper is now sold in packages and tins and that costs money.

It was his wedding-day.

Radiant in the newest of outfits he started for the church, accompanied by his best man.

But his shoes hurt his pet corn, and it looked as though he would have to hobble up the aisle.

The best man had a brain-wave, and stopped at a boot-shop where a larger pair of shoes were purchased.

When the happy bride and bridegroom knelt at the altar rail a general titter passed through the ranks of the guests; for on each sole of the new shoes, turned up for all to see, was the following intimation:

"Reduced to $5.25."

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, October 18.—A weak feeling features the hog and fresh pork market that has a marked effect upon bacon and smoked meats. The weakness, however, is reactionary and responsible for the reduced figure quoted on hogs by the packers. Local bacon prices do not show a change but there is a reduction in smoked hams. There is no change in the cooked meat market. Lard prices are maintained with smaller stocks being carried in the wholesale trade. The butter market is quiet but there is an improvement in demand since many dealers are stocking up for the winter. Cheese shows strength with a firm market abroad and smaller stocks on hand than a year ago. Eggs show another advance with a steady falling off in production and a good demand in the domestic trade. Easier prices are quoted on poultry. Salmon prices are higher but halibut is easier.

BUTTER MARKET QUIET

Montreal.

BUTTER.—After a flurry of strength which occurred last week, due to an improved foreign demand, the butter market is quiet with prices unchanged. The local receipts are showing a decrease, both over the previous week and that of last year and since many dealers are laying up supplies for the winter months, storage supplies are being absorbed.

CHEESE MARKET FIRM

Montreal.

CHEESE.—A stronger feeling is evident throughout the whole cheese market. The total receipts since May of this year are 356,395 below that of last year but during the past week the receipts have shown some increase. The export market shows an improvement and the general feeling in the trade is that higher prices will be quoted on cheese within the next month.

POULTRY MARKET EASIER

Montreal.

POULTRY.—Easier prices are quoted on poultry with large offerings on the market and a general weakness all around. There is a wide margin in the prices quoted, both wholesale and retail. Milk fed roasting chickens are quoted at from 33c. to 38c. and selected chicks from 28c. to 32c. per lb. This difference in grading is responsible for the big difference in retail prices.

HOG MARKET WEAK

Montreal.

HOGS.—A weak tone is evident in hogs with prices in many centres reduced. Local prices remain about the same, light weights quoted at from $11,-50 to $12.00 per cwt. weighed off cars. Packers state that the present values are unprofitable due to the low bacon prices in England. Prices on dressed hogs and pork show no change. There has been a firmer feeling of late in the beef market and although wholesale prices show no marked change there is a stronger tone.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, October 18.—Changes in the markets for produce are few this week. The market for live hogs is still inclined to easy levels, and this is reflected in quotations on pork products. Butter is steady and cheese shows slightly higher prices. Domestic demand for butter is good, but export inquiry is inclined to be quiet. Supplies of fresh eggs are small in volume and receipts coming forward are very light. Prices on storage offerings are very strong. Poultry receipts show increase but prices are steady. There is a better demand for fish, with prices steady and unchanged.

BUTTER IS UNCHANGED

Toronto.

BUTTER.—No change is reported in the market for butter this week. Wholesalers report prices steady, with a very good inquiry for the same for domestic account. Creamery prints No. 1 are offered at from 38 to 40c, and No. 2 prints at from 35 to 37c.

An Appreciation of Cooperation and Friendly Interest

NO one knows better than the manufacturer of food products how much of the success of his business is dependent upon the good will and cooperation of the Grocery Clerk.

For after all is said and done, after the housewife is finally persuaded through advertising to try a package of Post Toasties, Grape-Nuts, Instant Postum or Postum Cereal, the Grocery Clerk has it in his power, by a word, to recommend the product, and thereby increase the prospective customer's immediate, and possibly, her future interest in the purchase.

We feel, therefore, that we have been singularly fortunate in having enjoyed the valued assistance and whole-hearted support of practically every Grocery Clerk in Canada in promoting the distribution and sale of Post Toasties, Grape-Nuts, Instant Postum and Postum Cereal.

And we wish to express here, our sincere thanks for your cooperation, and for the friendly interest you have always exhibited. We hope that this interest may continue, bringing increased sales and an ever-increasing number of satisfied customers to the store, and increasing salaries or commissions to our friends—the Grocery Clerks.

Testing and Tasting

Heinz Food Products are as good as skill and knowledge can make them.

In the Heinz experimental kitchen a chef dedicates his ability to the task of improving the 57 Varieties. Continuous research and experiment serve ever to advance their quality. Any new product considered for manufacture is thoroughly tried by experiment and by tasting committees. It must pass severe tests before it is considered worthy of being added to the list of Heinz Products, and not until we are sure that it is the best in its line is it put on the market.

This quality will serve you by making the 57 Varieties increasingly popular with your patrons.

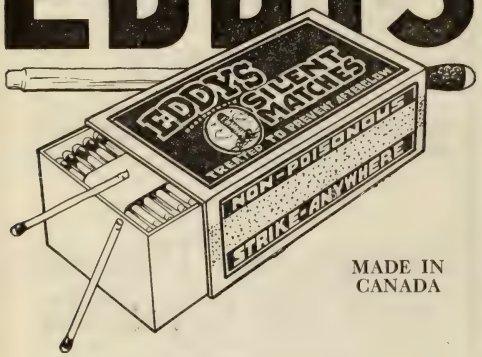
The best way to get KLIM on your customers' shelves is to display it prominently on your own



THE most effective individual advertising medium is a thoroughly satisfied customer. People like to tell their relatives, friends and neighbors about the commodities they like. They like to brag about them a bit—and that bragging means sales for whoever sells the merchandise.

Display your stock of KLIM Powdered Milk prominently and talk about it to your customers—it has a lot of good points and no bad ones. Before you know it, you'll have all the Joneses, the Smiths and the Browns bragging about it. And they'll be transferring it from your shelves to theirs.

Your jobber can supply you with KLIM in one-half, one and ten pound containers.

CROP OF OLIVES IS NOT PROMISING

The Spanish olive crop, grown in the Seville district, has shown no improvement during the past few weeks and all of the best sources of information unite in confirming the scarcity as compared with last year. The yield will be about 50 per cent. of 1921, but half of it will be defective. There have been some rains of late, but they are too late to do much good. The latest cargo was cleaned up quickly by the filling of jobbing orders which exhausted nearly all of the supplies while the vessel was still at the dock. The Villano sailed on October 8 with 1,838 barrels and 1,013 hogsheads, a small offering. Holdings of olives in the United States are very much reduced, and this is true of Seville, so that the new crop will come on a bare market after the turn of the year. Curers are paying high prices to farmers, and the consensus of opinion of reliable shippers is that there will be 10,000 to 15,000 hogshead of first quality Queens and 8,000 to 10,000 hogsheads of Manzanillas. Stuffed Manzanillas promise to rule at high prices, because the crop is short and because Latin peoples in Cuba, South America and along the Mediterranean are users of Manzanillas with pits. This will reduce the available supplies for stuffing, added to which is the similar shortage of pimentos in Spain.

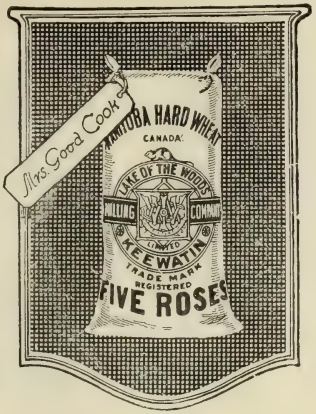
Part of a Big Organization

The Largest Organization of its Kind in the British Empire.

WE HAVE often been asked why it is that prompt service is always given to enquiries received from any part of Canada;

Also why we are able to present to our readers every week such widespread market reports and other information about business methods of merchants, food regulations, etc.



Only a business paper that is a big national institution can do this. We find that the aggressive druggists, those with the bigger ideas, who want to extend their knowledge beyond their own small locality and beyond their own province, want and demand this service.

CANADIAN GROCER is one of the principal parts of the MacLean organization—the largest publishers of business and technical papers in the British Empire. Its connection with the other business and technical papers of The MacLean Publishing Co., all leaders in their respective fields, is an important reason why we give our readers this invaluable, national service.

Let the Users Speak for Themselves!

These two letters came in the same day—unsolicited. We quote them not because they are unusual (we receive similar recommendations every day) but because the success was scored in open competition in a spectacular way at Canada's two greatest exhibitions.

FROM A HOUSEWIFE

Sept. 12th, 1922.

"I thought you would be pleased to know that through using FIVE ROSES flour it enabled me to take 1st prize for whitebread at the Canadian National Exhibition. I have used other flours for bread but I have proved the best and the most perfect is the FIVE ROSES. Therefore I can and will recommend it to anyone."

Mrs. J. Fordham, 44 Lambton Ave.,
Mount Dennis. Ont.

FROM A PROFESSIONAL BAKER

"You will be pleased to learn that James Walker (Ottawa), baking FIVE ROSES exclusively, won the first prize for bakers' bread at the Central Canada Exhibition."

Not only the advertising done by this company, but every good word spoken of FIVE ROSES can be turned to your advantage—if you also stock the best-selling flour in Canada.

MACDONALD'S

The Tobacco with a heart

Every Dealer Knows It!

Ask any dealer about Macdonald's and he will tell you it's the name that sells it.

More than 60 years ago "The Tobacco with a heart" first came into prominence. It has stood "since the fifties" as Canada's standard. For four generations they have called for MACDONALD'S.

There is only one Macdonald standard, but a range of types including cigarettes. Two Blends with but a single aim—to please the individual taste—the now famous MACDONALD'S CIGARETTES and the new BRITISH CONSOLS Cigarettes.

Price Agreements and Cost of Living

Are They Cause and Effect, and if so, is Cost of Living Lowered or Enhanced by Fixed Prices?—This is Problem to be Decided by Special Anti-Combine Committee—Or is Spread Due to High Cost and Inefficiency of Labor?

Special Staff Correspondence

TORONTO, October 25.—In last week's issue reference was made to the investigation of the special Anti-Combine Committee of the Ontario Legislature into the question of fixing of resale price by the manufacturer. Altogether three days and a half were taken up hearing those who wanted to appear before the committee to present their views, and several more classes of industry are still to be heard.

Apart from A. W. Roebuck, Toronto lawyer, who introduced the matter on Tuesday of last week, there was no one who spoke against the principle of fixing the resale price. All were in favor of it.

Think C. of L. Still Too High

During the last day and a half several members of the committee intimated that what they wanted to get at was a reduction in the high cost of living. It was plain, they said, that the cost of living was still mounting and that there did not appear to be any let-up. This statement was questioned by E. M. Trowern, secretary Dominion Board, Retail Merchants' Association, who claimed that cost had gone down and that living was cheaper. The big point at issue so far as the committee of the Legislature was concerned was as to whether fixing the resale price of an article from the wholesaler to the retailer and from the retailer to the consumer enhanced or otherwise the cost to the ultimate consumer or user.

Several automobile manufacturers were heard, also representatives of the retail, wholesale and manufacturing druggists. Hon. W. E. Raney intimated that apparently there was some justification in the automobile and drug manufacturers fixing the resale price.

Would Withdraw Opposition

Hugh Blain, wholesale grocer, Toronto, interjected that if the committee felt that their cases were properly made out, that the wholesale grocers would not desire to enter any further objections to the bill. "If it does not include agreements for the automobile manufacturers and the druggists it does not include us," he said.

The attorney-general, however, said he did not want to give the impression that the case of the patent medicine manufacturers and automobile manufacturers had actually been decided by the committee. He simply wanted to state that they had presented their case in an apparently logical manner.

Statement of Policy Versus Agreement

The point also came up as to the difference between the Colgate and Shraeder cases in the United States. Mr. Roebuck stated that in connection with the former it was decided that the manufacturer could state his policy to the trade in regard to his resale price as long as there was no agreement between the two. There was an announcement as to what the resale price should be. In such a case the Colgate people could decline to sell any firm that cut the price. In the Shraeder case there was an agreement between the parties and this was considered illegal.

Mr. Blain again intimated that if a manufacturer of a food product could state his resale price and maintain it as the Colgate people had done, he would then withdraw his opposition to the bill. If that was the purport of the bill, as far as he was concerned he would be quite satisfied, but, he said, if the automobile manufacturers are excused then the grocery trade should also be excused. He considered that a proper understanding should be arrived at because it was cheaper to straighten out the whole question at such a conference than to go before the courts later on. Former proceedings against the wholesale grocers had cost them several thousand dollars.

J. W. Curry, K.C., M.P.P., said that the committee was there to get at the facts of the entire case and it was not their purpose to interfere with trade getting a fair profit and with the manufacturer retaining some interest in his proprietary line.

Effect of Cut Prices

In his statement of the case, Dr. R. B. Stanbury, of the Manufacturing Druggists' Corporation, made the point that if a merchant cuts a price on a well-known line to cost or below he must make up on other lines about which the public has no idea as to their value.

Dr. Stanbury claimed that there was no argument to the point that if a manufacturer fixed his resale price he would gouge the public. "For instance, take the cough mixtures. There are plenty of other cough mixtures on the market besides ours so that people do not have to buy any particular one. Competition naturally brings the price to the proper level. There is a big difference in a few manufacturers getting together and controlling a specific article and one manufacturer arranging his resale price."

Mr. Curry.—Is there any understanding between any of the drug manufacturers in regard to price?

Dr. Stanbury.—There is no agreement and no understanding whatever between manufacturers.

If Jobbers Were Eliminated

Further arguments were heard from Mr. Berliner of the Berliner Gramophone Company, Montreal, and by a representative of the Piano and Organ Manufacturers' Association in favor of fixing the resale price.

Answering Mr Roebuck, Mr. Berliner stated that in the United States manufacturers sold to jobbers who were at liberty to sell at any price they liked. This, he said, had created a great deal of evil in the trade which was driving jobbers out of it because they were not making any money. If there are no jobbers the retail trade and the public will not get the service, and if they do not, the public will not buy. This reduces production and lower production inevitably raises prices. He did not believe in the appointment of a board to fix the resale price. The manufacturer who knows his production costs and who keeps them down as low as possible would be at a disadvantage compared with the one whose production expenses were higher. The manufacturer realizes that to increase turnover costs must be low and the sale price as low as possible.

Mr. Curry.—As long as manufacturers do not combine you can keep your prices at the lowest point and the public will get the benefit?

Mr. Berliner.—Yes, that is the case.

Method of the Eddy Company

J. F. Taylor, secretary and sales manager of the E. B. Eddy Company, Hull, Quebec, explained that his company distributed their output to the legitimate wholesale grocery trade through the retailer. "We think," he said, "that is the proper method. If someone writes to us asking the privilege of buying our goods we investigate their case fully. We write them a confidential letter asking for full information and if that letter is acknowledged they secure our goods. We send them our price list and they are to maintain those prices to the retail trade. We do not, however, say at what price the retailer shall sell to the consumer. We have always felt that if we did not give the distributor a fair margin of profit, it would only be a matter of time when he would not be interested in our line.

Failures Due To Cutting Prices

"We frequently hear of statements to the effect that the wholesaler is robbing the public by charging too much to the retailer." He stated that recently a number of wholesalers to his knowledge had gone out of business.

Mr. Curry.—But then these are abnormal conditions. No doubt they were stocked with too many goods at high prices.

Mr. Taylor.—No, the conditions were not abnormal. They were not stocked up. The trouble was too much cutting. We have a hard time getting jobbers to maintain prices.

Big Saving in Matches to Consumers

Mr. Taylor explained the excise tax on matches. He said that when the Dominion Government decided to put this tax on, his firm had to stamp every individual box. It happened that the president, George H. Millen, had previous experience along this line and suggested that instead of stamping each individual box after the matches were packed in it, it should be stamped by the lithographer when the box was being made. This represented a saving of about $300 a day which was passed on to the consumer. His firm had done everything possible to assist the consumer.

One member of the committee asked why matches were cheaper in the United States.

Mr. Taylor.—There is no tax over there. Here there is a tax of $7.20 on a case of matches of one hundred and forty-four boxes to the case. When the tax was put on, it was higher than the price of the matches. There was, too, a tax of 1c on a small box of matches whereas it should have been ½c as it is now. The tax then amounted to $14.40 a case, about twice the list price of the matches themselves.

Freight Costs on Direct Shipments

R. K. McIntosh, general manager for Canada and director of the Canadian Postum Cereal Company, strongly upheld the principle of fixing the resale price. From experience his firm had found definitely that it was cheaper to sell their goods through the wholesale grocer to the retailer. They much preferred this method to a sales organization of their own as the former was more economical. That was the only reason they used the wholesale grocery channel of distribution. They do sell goods direct to the retailer but the orders are turned through the jobber if they are for one or two cases. If for five cases in many instances the goods are shipped direct but billed through the wholesaler.

He quoted freight rates to show that on the C. P. R. it cost $1.06 for his company to send five cases or less of their products to any one of forty-one towns in Ontario. About 13 per cent. of their output goes out direct to merchants in that way. Through the wholesale grocer distribution channel 87 per cent. were sent out, practically all in one or two-case lots. If his firm were to eliminate the wholesale grocer it would cost them $106 to send out one case or two cases to any one of those forty-one towns. That is the minimum rate. Through the wholesale trade the cost is about 21 per cent.

On the G. T. R. the minimum cost is 75.4c to his firm if shipped direct and about 14c per case through the wholesale grocer.

The average cost to them if shipped direct is about 86c per case and to the wholesale grocer 17 2/3c.

Could Sell Direct to Retailer

Mr. McIntosh claimed that the bill, if it became law, would not interfere with his firm selling direct to every retail grocer at a fixed price. If not, then, he asked why they should be prevented from selling their goods at a fixed price from wholesaler to retailer which they knew to be the cheapest?

His firm did not consult the wholesale grocers when fixing their price. The natural tendency was to get this as low as possible in order that more goods could be sold and therefore more produced.

"When prices are cut," said Mr. McIntosh, "somebody has got to pay, and ultimately it is the consumer."

He quoted a specific case showing that where a price had been cut below cost in one particular city other grocers were refusing to handle the goods. This cut down sales and production and if it were general would undoubtedly mean higher prices.

"Is there any understanding between your company and any other?" was asked.

"No, none whatever."

Should Agreements Be Vised?

Mr. Curry suggested that every one consider the proposition of asking that all agreements between manufacturers and wholesalers and retailers be filed and that some individual or board be appointed to consider whether the prices were fair or not. This was merely a suggestion on his part.

E. M. Trowern.—We would like to hear from someone who favors this bill. Up to the present there is no one appearing against it.

Mr. Curry.—It is the duty of those who represent the people to look after them and that is why we are here. There have been too many complaints against the cost of living.

Mr. Trowern.—It seems to me that if some official of the Government who understood business conditions were to explain to the public that the retailer is not asking an undue profit, there would not be so many complaints.

Mr. Curry.—We want to know why the man who is only paid $10.00 a week cannot live.

Mr. Trowern.—You can't bring every one down to that level.

Mr. Curry.—But there is a continual clamor about the high cost of living.

Mr. Trowern.—Not so much now. Prices are down, that is generally understood.

Mr. Roebuck asked what would be the average overhead in the retail grocery business.

W. C. Miller, secretary Ontario Board Retail Merchants' Association, replied that the Dominion Government Income Tax experts had allowed 18 per cent. He said the average grocer's mark was about 20 per cent.

Labor High and Inefficient

R. R. Hall, M.P.P., wanted to know why there was such a great spread in so many instances between the price the producer received and the price the consumer paid.

It was suggested by one that this was often due to the high wages that were still paid and the inefficiency of labor in general. This was particularly the case in the recognized trades. "We cannot get the output we did in former days," he added.

The conference adjourned until called again by the chair when representatives of several other industries and trades will be heard, including the wholesale grocers.

Says Cleanliness is the Deciding Factor in Meeting Keen Competition

"The Benny Stores" Feature Quality and Cleanliness—Benny Altrovitch, Who Two Years Ago Was in the Employ of Another Firm, Now Operates Three of His Own Stores

MONTREAL.—Just two years ago Canadian Grocer published a story of one of the grocery stores in a chain in this city which was managed by Benny Altrovitch, a little man with big ideas, whose hobby was cleanliness and who had visions of some day owning his own chain of stores. To-day he has realized his vision and has three stores of his own known as "The Benny Stores." He advertises himself as "Just Benny." Few customers know him as anything else.

Systematic Cleanliness

When he was in the employ of another firm he told Canadian Grocer that he had a plan whereby every package, tin, box and bottle in the store was systematically moved and dusted every week. He still has that system and his feature is cleanliness. Everything in his stores, except the refrigerator, is enamelled white. Another feature is that there are shelves only along one side of the store and that on these shelves are only small quantities of each variety of goods carried in stock. Mr. Altrovitch has a two-fold reason for this. In the first place it makes it easier for him to carry out his plan to have every package moved and dusted once a week, and in the second place he is of the opinion that if quantities carried on the shelves are kept down to a minimum the items are turned over more regularly, insuring the freshness of the goods. Sometimes when there is a large stock on the shelves some of the goods are shoved to the back of the shelf and there they stand until they become unfit for sale. This is particularly true of cereals and care should be taken that this line is sold in the proper order.

A Cash and Carry Trade

Mr. Altrovitch has adopted the cash and carry plan, for in that system he has had his experience. He claims that he is able to meet competition in price when he is able to get cash for his goods and has no delivery expense. He admits, however, that location is everything in this class of trade.

People Appreciate Cleanliness

A. Spector, manager of the "Benny Store" at 131 Laurier Ave., West Montreal, told a Canadian Grocer representative that in his opinion cleanliness was the deciding factor in drawing trade in a district where there is keen competition. "The appearance of the store is everything in attracting trade," said Mr. Spector. "A dirty store or an untidy store casts a slur upon the goods sold there. On the other hand it is not only easier to keep the quality up to the best in a well-kept store but the very appearance of the store emphasises the quality of the goods sold there."

SAULTE STE. MARIE WANTS THE EDDY MATCH CO.

Saulte Ste. Marie, Ont., Oct. 24 (Special).—The Saulte Ste. Marie Board of Trade has taken up with the E. B. Eddy Company of Hull the location of a branch factory in this city, which, it is claimed, would be an ideal site for such an industry. The advantages of the city and district have been placed before the company and the board has strong hopes of inducing it to build here.

HEAD OF CADBURY BROS. DIES AT BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND

London, Oct. 24.—George Cadbury, Chairman of Cadbury Bros., Ltd., chocolate manufacturers, and at one time owner of The Daily News, died to-day at Birmingham, aged 83. He was greatly interested in social reform, and, in support of that work, bought in 1891 four small newspapers in the Birmingham district. Ten years later Lloyd George persuaded him to give financial assistance to The Daily News, with the result that a few years later he was obliged to assume full financial responsibility for the newspaper. He had had, however, no part in its management for some years, as he had transferred his interests to a trust managed by his sons.

This window was dressed by Jas. McCaskey in Campbellford, Ont., and its artistic as well as tempting arrangement won much favorable comment.

New Light on C.O.D. Postal System

Discussion of Service at Conference of Postal Officials in Ottawa Brings Out Interesting Suggestions—Retailers Can Send Goods by Mail to Persons Who Might be Considered Doubtful From Credit Point of View

That retailers and others would be in a position to send goods by mail under the C.O.D. postal service to persons with whom they had not previously carried on business and where they were reluctant to give credit, was one of the points outlined by postal officials to Canadian Grocer's Ottawa representative. That orders could be placed by telephone and filled by mail, was another suggestion, while the fact that jobbers might wish to make use of the service in sending goods in small quantities to merchants in rural districts, is another consideration. It was also pointed out that mail order houses have been getting money in advance for their goods and would lose this advantage if they utilized the C.O.D. system to any extent.

AT THE recent Dominion conference of postal officials in Ottawa, there was some discussion of the new C. O. D. postal service regulations. But this discussion was brief and failed to cover the ground that should have been covered in connection with so important an issue. Officials, after the conference was over, discussing the matter with Canadian Grocer, stated there was really no justification for any lengthy consideration of the question as the system had just been inaugurated.

However, the general impression of the delegates was that the C. O. D. Postal Service would prove of particular benefit to persons living in rural communities not served by express. It was, however, stated that mail order houses would not make very great use of the service as they were now getting money in advance for their goods and there would be no advantage in accepting deferred payment, as this would occasion the payment of a C. O. D. fee, and they would not be sure that goods when sent would be accepted.

It was maintained by some that manufacturers of small products, of various kinds, and also retailers, would be in a position to send goods by mail to persons with whom they had no previous business dealings and to whom they would not care to extend credit. The thought was expressed that in many instances, orders could be placed by telephone and filled by mail, the C. O. D. service working to the advantage of both the customer and the merchant taking advantage of it.

It was also thought that jobbers and wholesalers might make use of it in sending goods in small quantities to retailers in outlying points. The opinion was also expressed that the service could be extended to offices at which postal notes were sold. This suggestion is to be considered when the present service has passed the experimental stage.

No tangible suggestions were made other than to point to the few instances mentioned above, where the system might prove helpful to certain lines of trade.

The question of the adoption of a uniform registration system for the whole of Canada, came in for some consideration. In order to make the registration system uniform at all offices in the country and to simplify the system, without in any way decreasing its efficient workings, it was proposed to discontinue acknowledgement of receipt of registered mails and also to adopt the original number registration system now used in the International mails. The proposed simplification would likely save in the neighborhood of $50,000 per annum and would facilitate the tracing of registered articles.

The question of using stickers in place of a rubber stamp was also considered, but certain officials stated that they had found that stickers occasionally became detached from the article to which they related, and that the rubber stamp was much better for that purpose.

The hand to hand registration system was discussed and a committee appointed to work out a more efficient and uniform system to provide additional safeguards for registered mails. At offices where this hand to hand system had been tried out it was reported that not one single article had been lost.

Examples of Safety

Emphasizing the safety of the existing Canadian system, it was stated that within the period of a year, only one out of sixty-two thousand registered letters had been lost, while only one out of eighty thousand letters containing cash remittances had disappeared.

Important changes in regard to registered articles were approved. This came under the heading of the advisability of increasing the maximum indemnity for the loss of registered articles and the fixing of a scale of fees to cover varying amounts of indemnity. The votes taken favored:

1. Increase in the maximum indemnity for the loss of registered articles. The present maximum is $25. The new maximum suggested is $100.
2. Indemnity to include abstraction and damage.

In regard to the last named, indemnity is now paid only if the registered article is totally lost. Should the decision of the conference be adopted, indemnity will be paid if the contents are partly missing or damaged.

Suggestions for Service

"What demands are there on the part of the public for additional services which the post office might render?"

The above is one of the questions put to the gathering, but very few had any reply to make.

One delegate brought forward an important suggestion, and that was that stamped envelopes in different sizes be issued. It was pointed out that this system was practised in the United States and that it was considered to be very much to the advantage of big business houses. At present only one size stamped envelope is sold in Canada, but the United States have them in twenty or more different sizes. It was the general opinion of the delegates that if such a scheme were adopted in Canada it would be appreciated by the business interests.

More than usual interest was aroused over the consideration of postal arrangements between Canada and the United States. Suggestions were offered for increasing the maximum weight on parcels from 4 lb. 6 oz. to 11 lb. and estimates of the effect of doing this varied greatly. Some were of the opinion that the incoming volume would be increased from five to six times. One delegate was sure that the change would greatly benefit the mail order houses of the United States.

It was stated that Canada was now receiving about two million pounds more in parcel mail from the United States than she was sending. Another delegate, however, took the view that the number of parcels coming from the United States would not increase very considerably, but that where two parcels weighing four pounds each are sent into Canada now, only one parcel weighing eight pounds would come in under the proposed regulations.

Some Suggestions Re-Sales Tax Amendments

Would Eliminate Sales Tax From Manufacturer to Wholesaler on Goods Bought for Re-sale, and Would Make Sales Tax From Wholesaler to Retailer 4½ Per Cent.

IN CONNECTION with proposed amendments in regard to the collection of the Sales Tax by the Dominion Government, W. T. Pepper, sales manager of Wilson, Lytle, Badgerow Co., Ltd., Toronto, writes Canadian Grocer as follows:

"In response to your editorial invitation on page 28 of October 13th issue of Canadian Grocer, we desire to place ourselves on record as being enthusiastically in favor of the measures mentioned in the article on Sales Tax, as follows:

1. That the Sales Tax may not be absorbed by any section of the trade.

2. That the Sales Tax from the manufacturer to wholesaler on goods bought for resale be eliminated.

3. That the Sales Tax from wholesaler to retailer be 4½%.

4. That the Sales Tax from manufacturer to retailer be 4½%.

"We have found the current method to be a very severe hardship in connection with our business, inasmuch as a wholesale grocer selling a barrel of vinegar only charges the retailer 2¼% whereas when we sell the same retailer the same vinegar we are obliged to charge 4½%.

"On the other hand the margin of profit on our goods does not warrant our absorbing 2¼% so as to place ourselves on the same basis with the retailer, as the wholesale grocer enjoys, and consequently we have been operating hitherto under this handicap which has the tendency to drive the retail trade directly into the hands of the wholesale grocer.

"Of course it may be claimed by the Government that inasmuch as we save the wholesale grocer's 15% trade discount when selling to a retailer, then we should be well able to absorb 2¼% Sales Tax, when we sell the goods to a retailer, but while this looks plausible, yet, at the same time the fact remains that our costs are based largely on our sales to the retailer, with our sales to the wholesaler quite secondary, and hence an encroachment of 2¼% on our retail business is a distinct hardship in connection with vinegar, which being heavy calls for high freight charges, and also being low in price it does not show much margin of profit.

"If we can do anything by our vote or our influence, to help this project to a successful consummation, we will be only too happy to do so.

"Concerning this we will wait to be advised, by either your good selves or by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

Declare That Business in the Grocery Trade Shows Decided Improvement

Montreal Retailers as Well as Wholesalers Are Agreed That Latter Half of September and First Part of This Month Have Seen an Increasing Volume of Business

MONTREAL, Oct. 25. (Special).—A change for better has come in the grocery trade and retailers, wholesalers, brokers and manufacturers are united in the opinion that a good fall trade is ahead for the grocers. The improvement has come definitely during the last two weeks of September and the first two in October. Three retail grocers of this city told a Canadian Grocer representative that last Friday and Saturday were the best two days they have had in the past year. The improvement is general. The wholesale trade finds a marked increase in buying and the representative of a cereal firm stated that for the past four weeks the total business done exceeds that of any four weeks in the past year.

Lower Prices Help

The main reason seems to be that the aggregate cost of living is lower than that of last year. The index figure given by the government for September is only $10.28 for the family budget on 29 staple foods as compared with $11.82 for September 1922. This is the lowest point reached since October 1917, and is an important factor in building up the grocer's volume of business. More attention also is being paid by the retail trade to volume and it is noticed that the resale prices are following more closely the actual wholesale costs than in the past. In the cities where competition is keen this is a most important feature and profit rests almost entirely upon turnover.

Credit Is Improved

Another good sign is the improvement in credits. The wholesale trade reports better collections and in turn the financial conditions of the business as a whole are promising. The lower prices quoted on canned goods have had a good effect upon the trade. At the same time the firm basis which has been established in canned goods and the strong note evident in the leading lines in the grocery trade has established confidence. Only price cutting continues to cast a cloud over the future. As one wholesaler said to a Canadian Grocer representative, "The retail trade can watch sugar, canned goods, tea and cereals as the barometer of the grocery market and form a fairly accurate opinion of the condition of markets in general."

Tuesday, October 31, Canada's National Fish Day, An Opportunity for the Grocer

The Idea of the Special Occasion is to Encourage and Help the Sale of Fish as a Food—Presents a Splendid Opportunity for the Grocer to Increase His Sales

By. J. A. Paulhus, Vice-Pres. Canadian Fisheries Association

NEXT Tuesday, October 31st, has been chosen by the powers that be as the day for the celebration of our annual Fish Day.

Speaking as the vice-president of the Canadian Fisheries Association, I expect that every one and all will do his share of the publicity work necessary, not only to carry the day through successfully, but to implant in their midst a real Fishy Atmosphere which will last and help business to thrive along and prosper until at least next National Fish Day.

The idea of the celebration is to encourage and help the sale of fish as a food. It was instituted purposely for the object of popularizing the use of fish as a food commodity. So, it is incumbent upon everyone engaged in the fish business, whether the producing, distributing or retail end of it, to spare no effort nor efficacious work, in order to reach the objective aimed at by the originator of the day. This could be done by doing a little publicity of your own.

Don't be afraid to spend a little time and a few dollars in advertising fish.

It will more than repay you for the investment, 1, by increased sales, 2, it will show consistency in your faith in the business.

Nothing has ever yet been accomplished without education.

Publicity is the channel or the live wire that leads to education. How can you expect your customers to make use of fish if they don't know the first thing about it, if they have not come into contact with the live wire of publicity?

Moreover it is a patriotic duty for you to boost fish.

FISH resource is the best the country possesses.

It is the most dependable.

It is inexhaustible. Think of it!

Most reliable and no end to it.

When every one of our other natural resources will be forgotten in the ages to come, our fish industry will still be young and prosperous.

For all these considerations and many others, do your duty on the Day. Boost, Preach, Advertise Fish.

Tariff Has Little Effect on Exports of Butter and Cheese

Ottawa, Oct. 25.—Canadian exports of cheese and butter to the United States are not being affected to any extent by the new American tariff, according to J. A. Ruddick, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner of the Department of Agriculture. Mr. Ruddick took issue with the statements of Felix Glakamore, who informed the London Traders' Federation at Westminster that 50,000,000 pounds of Quebec and Ontario cheese and 500,000 boxes of butter would be available for shipment from Canada to Great Britain because the United States tariff had shut Canadian producers out of the American markets.

The ten-year average of cheese exported to the United States from Canada was only 1,175,898 pounds, Mr. Ruddick stated and in the year ended March 31, 1922, exports had increased to 2,969,759 pounds, as against 641,950 in the previous year. Butter exports from Canada for the ten-year period averaged 2,845,425 pounds and last year the total was 3,032,939 pounds, against 6,993,786 in the previous twelve months.

The figures given by Mr. Glakamore were absolutely misleading, Mr. Ruddick declared. The average annual export of cheese had been only slightly over a million pounds and of butter, during the 10-year period, under three million pounds, instead of 27,000,000 pounds as alleged.

The quantities that would be diverted to the United Kingdom as a result of the new United States tariff would be so small as to be negligible and less than the variations from season to season.

Hard on His Wife

Mrs. Binks: "This paper tells of a man who lives on onions, alone."

Mrs. Jinks (whose husband eats them): "Well, anyone who lives on onions ought to live alone."

She Stands By Her Butcher

"How is it," inquired a young bride of an older married friend, "that you always manage to have such delicious meat?"

"It is very simple," said the older woman, "I first select a good, honest butcher, and then I stand by him."

"You mean that you give him all your trade?"

"No, I mean that I stand by him while he is cutting the meat."

Mix 'Em Right and You Get Profits

Why a Retail Business Is a Chemical Laboratory That Compounds Profits or

How the Mixture of Retail Methods May Make Profits, Losses or Trouble

THE cartoon pictures for you a wise retailer—a man who understands that the retail business is a chemical laboratory where the merchant is a chemist who must carefully and accurately weigh and measure out the chemicals called Accounting, Advertising, Service, Display and the like to produce the mixture called Profits.

Much depends on the amounts and methods of mixing. For example, a good mixture makes Profits, while a poor one would result in Disaster. The store that used much Advertising and no Fairmarkup would of course be mixing its chemicals to make Disaster. The establishment that would mix Dishonesty with Noservice would be producing Trouble. Whereas the establishment that uses any or all of the following ingredients and mixes them in proper proportions cannot fail to make Profits. Study the list carefully:

Accounting system	Fairmarkup	Concentrated buying
Store meetings	Knowledge of goods	Prompt service
Display	Reading trade papers	Courteous service
Advertising	Knowledge of overhead	Joining trade bodies
Store arrangement	Turnover	Inventory system

To begin with, every establishment should have an accounting system. It is not always necessary to install an elaborate plan. That depends on the size and character of the business, but every retailer must know his daily progress, his receipts, his profits, his turnover, and so forth, and cannot be successful if he does not have a system that gives that information.

And there must be a proper proportion of advertising, a goodly and attractive amount of display, a maximum of efficiency and convenience in store arrangement. These are all among the chemicals that a first-class retailer-chemist will employ.

Fairmarkup is an important—even vital—ingredient. No business can turn out Profits without it. And don't forget that Fairmarkup has a lot of basic properties that must be included, such as rent, light, wages, advertising and other costs, as well as a fair return on the invested money and effort.

The reading of trade papers, membership in trade associations, attendance at conventions, good service and prompt service are all chemicals that will help to produce a bigger, more powerful portion of Profits. In your trade papers, among your associates, and at your conventions you will find ideas that will show you much about your advertising, display, turnover and general store arrangement. And the giving of service—prompt and courteous—is of course such a well-known part of Profits that no space needs to be spent on it here.

Note well the one ingredient—Concentrated buying—that is an important chemical and it must be concentrated. By concentrating your buying you make it more powerful, more influential. You give it strength. You make yourself an important person among your few wholesalers instead of being a minor individual among many concerns.

Study the entire list of ingredients thoroughly. Learn all you can about each. Get down to basic properties and basic principles. Study each, analyze your store and community and decide how much of each should be prescribed for your mixture of Profits.

A Money Competence for Latter Years

"What Are You Working For?" an Oft-Repeated Question is Again Dealt With—"I'll Begin Sometime" is Too Often the Attitude Adopted in Regard to the Matter of Saving

By HENRY JOHNSON, JR.

UNDER my caption of "What Are You Working For?" and many other similar titles, for many years I have tried to send home to you the message that the one greatest end to which we can all devote our efforts is a money-competence on which we can rest secure, in independence, when we have passed the earning period.

But how hard it is to send the message home!

Not long ago I sold the first security I ever bought. It was a certificate of stock in a trust company. The par value was $1,000. It cost me $1,250, being priced when I purchased it at 125% of par. It was dated 1905—only seventeen short years ago. Yet in those years it paid 6% as a starter on my investment; then 7%; and during the past eight or ten years, 8%. I cashed-in on it for $1,750, a profit of $500, or 40% advance. Moreover, I could have got the same price as long ago as 1910.

Meantime, I was in the position of employing a number of the brainiest, most conservative men I knew; men I had known for long years; men to whom I looked up as models. "Employed them?" you ask. Surely! Did they not continue to work in the same careful way, managing the company they had organized years before, and paying dividends to me? They did! While I was engaged in my own business, giving not a thought to the company, they were working for me.

Well do I remember that beginning. The originator of the company was a hard-headed native of Scandinavia whom everybody had learned to recognize as a leading light in our financial community. He was a customer of mine. He was a rather testy, decisive, short-spoken individual. One day he called and in a few words told me that he was about to increase the capital of his company; that he had watched me for years and felt that he'd like to have me take what I wanted to of the stock, at the premium of 25% over the old issue.

Taking the Initial Plunge

"You know our company," he said. "I have watched your progress—how you have saved and set aside a little money all along, and I'd like to have you with us; but you must use your own judgment—I will not come again." Then, with one of his somewhat wry smiles, he left the store. Would I "like" to join in with Halle Steensland—that was his name? Would I "take" some of his stock? Would I? Well, you just watch me!

Only about a year before I had begun to lay aside a little money. It had been deposited each month in his company. At that it amounted to just about $1,000. He had said that very likely the issue would be oversubscribed, so there would have to be a prorata allotment. I felt that this was likely to be so, yet I wanted to subscribe only for what I could expect to pay for in event of getting it—and I determined to strain my resources and credit to carry all I could get.

I took the plunge on $5,000 worth at 125%, that meant that I pledged myself to buy $4,000 at par. Well, the new issue was subscribed four times over, so I got $1,000 par. And that was the beginning of the course in savings and accumulation that eventually enabled me to shed the work of the grocery store.

"I'll Begin Sometime!"

Now, here is a point to the story so far.

When I took that certificate out to sell it, I showed it to a young man at the desk of the bank. I told him the story and asked him if he had any savings. He stuttered and—well, you know! As I emphasized the everlasting truth that everybody everywhere in practically any circumstances can go and do likewise, he defended himself, saying:

"But you had something to begin on, did you not?"

Yes, I had. I had a little grocery store, like thousands of the rest of my readers. If I had reasoned like most of you, I should have said, as you say: "Oh, that's right; no question about it. I'll begin sometime soon," and let it go at that. Then the "sometime" would have been pushed steadily ahead and I would be drudging to-day without hope for the future. All this is inspired at this moment by a wonderful bit of writing by the famous statistician and financial expert, Roger Babson, which I copy almost entire:

"Anyone who will save systematically and invest intelligently can assure himself an adequate income on which to retire from business. The sorry fact is that, out of every hundred persons in active life who read this to-day, if the average experience of business men be taken as a test, only ten will be living without dependence on others at the age of 65.

"Owing partly to the particular phase which the bond market is in, a fixed amount put monthly into selected investment bonds now can be so handled as to produce double that amount in monthly income at the end of twenty years.

"Take, as example, the case of a man of thirty. If he will buy $100 monthly, $1,200 a year, of standard investment bonds and continue to reinvest the income, together with his $100 monthly, in such bonds, he should be able to retire with a fund of about $50,000 in bonds and $200 monthly income when he is fifty. If, at fifty, he continues to work to the extent of only providing his expenses for the next ten years, the fund will grow more than 60% and the income correspondingly increase. The age of sixty, therefore, which is generally considered for retirement, would be reached with a monthly income of better than $300. This is three times the amount saved each month during the twenty years of accumulation. For a saving of $50 monthly, the result would be half this amount. For any multiple of $100 it would be proportionately increased.

"Surprising as such a statement may seem to you, there is nothing mysterious about it. The figures on which it is based show that fractionally less than 5% annual interest return is required. Larger yield can be had now on some of the very highest grade, conservative investment bonds. In addition to this interest return, we can look forward from the present stage of the bond market to an appreciation of the principal invested in bonds, over the next twenty years, at an average rate certainly of 1% a year. It is in this way that the present time encourages the thrifty man to bond investment. Prior to 1920, this had not been the case for a long time.

"Some of you may recall in your youth how many men supported their families comfortably on the income from their investments and were practically retired from business at what would seem to-day the early age of 50 or 55. These were the men who put their relatively small savings into bonds when they were low. It was just the same opportunity as exists for the young man of to-day.

"True investment is just this:—the turning of money into channels that are reproductive. Investment cannot originate except from savings. The question of getting out of the "can't save" class into the "do save" class is but a matter of saving systematically. To do this, you must systematize expenditure. There are available to-day, the $100 and $500 bonds which were not common in the last cycle. Anyone can buy some of the very best bonds of reputable investment dealers in $100 and a few even in $50 denominations. To establish the habit of doing this regularly is all that is necessary for assuring a future of independence. A plan which may be more conveniently followed by some is to open a special savings account for this fund. Deposit monthly the amount you fix upon. Buy your bonds in the larger units, whenever the sum of $500 or $1,000 is in your account. Most banks will arrange for the purchase and delivery of the bond to you."

God's Honest, Gospel Truth of Savings

I do not know how I can begin to cover the commentary that rises to my mind on reading that over. I could write on it all day, for it covers literally everything in investment—the will to save, steady accumulation, sound investment, reinvestment of interest—which results in the certain piling up of that most wonderful thing, a competence.

I must therefore confine myself to a few extra slants for emphasis.

1st. Babson is writing of what can happen with investments which pay less than 5% annual interest on the average. Yet to-day a vast range of splendid securities is obtainable on a 6% basis or even better. And I have hitherto shown that $35.52 invested monthly beginning at 30 years and continued will result in over $16,000 at 50 years; more than $24,000 at 55 and over $35,000 at 60. Beginning at 25, the sum of $25.49 monthly will accomplish the same totals at the same ages.

2nd. Bankers everywhere, men you know, trust and respect, are ready to help you. They stand eagerly inviting you to begin and continue. They offer counsel without cost or obligation.

3rd. All around are men who began with the least—less in most cases than you have—and have grown into financial independence in a comparatively few years.

5th. The time is now. It is always now. Andrew Carnegie saved a dollar a week as a starter—out of wages you would thing inadequate to keep body and soul together. Evidently he knew how to get money and what to do with it. Other personal histories of successful men are the same way all through. Follow successful examples.

6th. Everybody's way is beset with endless reasons why he cannot "do it just now—some other time." That has been the case since the feast when the guests were everywhere "bidden" and "with one consent began to make excuses. The first: 'I have bought a piece of ground, and must needs go and see it.' Another, 'I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them.' Another, 'I have married a wife'."

To-day is the time, regardless of any other thing, that you may pile up security against dependence—and the way is at hand for everybody. I know. I have tried it, use it to-day, and realize that it is done the one way to be at peace when the days of productivity are done.

And again: if specifically in doubt, ask me!

Estimated Volume of Business as Done by Departmental Stores

Figures Here Given Are Made Up for the Most Part From Estimates of Persons Who Are in a Position to Have an Idea of the Amount of Business Being Done by These Stores

A WRITER in Printer's Ink gives the following information on business in departmental stores:—

"I have gathered together what information we have available in our organization on the annual sales of departmental stores.

"As you will probably realize, most stores do not make public their annual sales volume, and so the figures that we are submitting to you are made up for the most part from estimates of persons who are in a position to have an idea of the amount of business being done by these stores.

"I am, therefore, not trying to tell you definitely what business any of these departmental stores do, but submitting to you data from which you or anyone else will be able to make, I believe, at least a rough estimate.

"This is from a news item that appeared in our publications November 30, 1921:

"Boston, Nov. 30.—'The largest retail store in the world is Marshall Field & Co., whose business runs from $65,000,000 to $73,000,000 a year in normal times,' according to the Boston News Bureau.

"This paper gives some interesting figures on the amount of business some of the world's largest stores do during say, 'is roughly estimated at 5 per cent. the year. 'The business of 1920,' they below that of normal, or for 1913.' Following are the figures given:

"Selfridge & Co., London, $30,000,000; Bon Marche, Paris, $40,000,000; Marshall Field & Co., Chicago, $65,000,000; Carson Pirie Scott & Co., Chicago, $50,000,000; R. H. Macy & Co., Inc., New York, $25,000,000; Franklin Simon & Co., New York, $21,000,000; Lord & Taylor, New York, $20,000,000; Gimbel Brothers, New York, $20,000,000; Altman & Co., New York, $18,000,000; John Wanamaker, New York, $28,000,000; John Wanamaker, Philadelphia, $27,000,000; N. Snellenberg & Co., Philadelphia, $10,000,000; Lit Bros., Philadelphia, $33,000,000.

"The above figures are for individual stores, the paper states. 'Of course, there are aggregations of stores or chain stores under a single management that top the above figures, notably Woolworth, with 1,111 stores and $140,000,000 of gross business, United Cigars, 1,400 stores with aggregate business of $75,000,000, and Kresge with 194 stores and a gross business of between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000.'

"The biggest retail business ever reached, according to the Boston News Bureau, was that of 'Sears, Roebuck & Co. which for the first three months of 1920 did a business of over $90,000,000 gross, or over $1,000,000 a day.'

"In commenting on the expense in service of department stores, the paper says:

"'Formerly department stores did business with expense of 10 per cent. and 12 per cent. for rent, salaries, delivery, management and all overhead. Today the public is served by the big department stores at an expense exceeding 30 per cent. of the gross sales.'

Estimates Are Off

"As you will note, some of these estimates are considerably off. The following is a list of stores that have announced their sales volumes for 1921, according to figures gathered in our own Retail Department.

R. H. Macy & Co., N. Y., year ending Jan. 28, 1922.	$46,671,762
Saks & Company, N. Y.. for the year 1921	14,922,000
Gimbel Bros. (three stores) New York, Philadelphia & Milwaukee, for year ended Jan. 31, 1922	66,773,565
(This volume, it has been estimated, might be divided into nine parts as follows): New York store—4 parts Philadelphia—3 parts Milwaukee—2 parts
Wm. Filene's Sons Co., Boston, year ended Sept. 1922	23,300,700
May Stores, (Cleveland, St. Louis, Denver, Akron)	68,254,716
Sanger Bros. (three stores in Texas) year ending 1921	19,000,000

Financial News Bureau Figures

"Some of those whose business has been estimated by a financial news bureau are as follows:

Marshall Field & Co., Chicago	$65,000,000
(Marshall Field's total business for retail and wholesale departments was approximately $185,000,000 in 1921, according to a statement made by one of the officials of the organization earlier in the year)
Carson Pirie Scott, Chicago, year ending 1921	50,000,000
Wanamaker, Philadelphia	30,000,000
Wanamaker, New York, year ending 1921	35,000,000

Canada's Financial Standing

THE ABUNDANT harvest reported from coast to coast this year, is resulting in an enormous distribution of cash or credits throughout the length of Canada. Our grain crops alone will equal, if not surpass, our previous records. The marketing of grain and other agricultural products will set in motion this year a golden stream estimated at, approximately, two billion dollars.

Internationally, Canada's financial standing is an enviable one. Canada, of all the nations of the world, was the first to have her money reach par with the United States. With United States funds at a discount, today, Canadian money commands a premium in all countries of the world. Such a position has its foundation, to a large extent, on high production in our fundamental industries and in our manufactures and the resulting trade and commerce.

The material prosperity and purchasing power of the nation is measured by its production. Production of the proportions indicated by this year's preliminary reports must inevitably result in a marked stimulus in every line of commercial endeavor. Coming after a series of lean years, the present results are more than ordinarily welcome. Better times are undoubtedly in store for every portion of our economic fabric. The betterment is bound to affect in turn the producer, the retailer, wholesaler, manufacturer, and likewise our railroads and national enterprises. This year's abundant agricultural production is a long stride forward towards prosperity.

Essentials of Successful Selling

IT WILL BE readily conceded that retailing is practically the same the world over, although some nations have undoubtedly developed the selling instinct to a greater extent than others; yet the same general plan obtains in every community. It has become a recognized fact during the past few years that the customer, maybe unconsciously, judges the value and importance of a store by the way in which the goods are displayed, and since first impressions are invariably lasting, it is a matter of great importance that nothing be left undone to create the most favourable ones. The art of retail merchandising is insufficiently realized by the majority of retailers and that is why articles which should be shown under special conditions are often displayed in an altogether unintelligent manner. A broad intelligence and keen insight into human nature must be brought to bear, for they are indispensable factors in the art of selling goods over the counter. and it is necessary, if a successful business is to be built up, to not only display goods intelligently , but also that the salesman should handle them in an equally sympathetic and intelligent way.

Confidence and suggestion are factors upon which the whole fabric mainly rests. It is an indispensable condition of successful merchandising that the customer be brought to look upon the proprietor as one who may be trusted to give fair value and a dependable article. Suggestion plays an equally important part, and is responsible for increased sales, in this way—the store, its appearance, class of goods handled, variety of things stocked, must be conveyed in no uncertain manner to every prospective customer. This is accomplished in several ways, but chiefly through the instrumentality of the advertising department, which in capable hands announces in the right quarter at the right time everything of interest in connection with the store, giving it a personality, a distinctiveness, and causing the building, goods and service to be a household name. It also suggests new wants to the likely customer, and as for the old ones, it uses every endeavour to retain confidence, for upon this confidence all concerns, both great and small, owe their very existence. It is as vital to the retailer as the air he breathes that his customers place in him absolute trust. It must, however, be continually borne in mind that though confidence holds a business, it is after all by suggestion that it grows, and by the effectively displayed goods and competent salesmen that increased business is done month after month.

Regarding Extract Sales

REPORTS to the effect that grocers in different parts of the Province of Ontario are being summoned to court for the illegal sale of extracts, should impress the retail grocer with his responsibility in this regard. The Ontario Temperance Act requires the registration of all receipts and sales of extracts of alcoholic content, and this clause is being insisted upon by the department to-day as much as it ever has been, since it came into force. The inspector may not come to your place for weeks or perhaps months, but one day he is going to drop into your store and ask you for your record of sales of extracts. The retailer must register these sales, and his only safe method of escaping the penalty of the law in this regard is to adhere strictly to the regulations governing the sale of extracts.

Thanksgiving Day

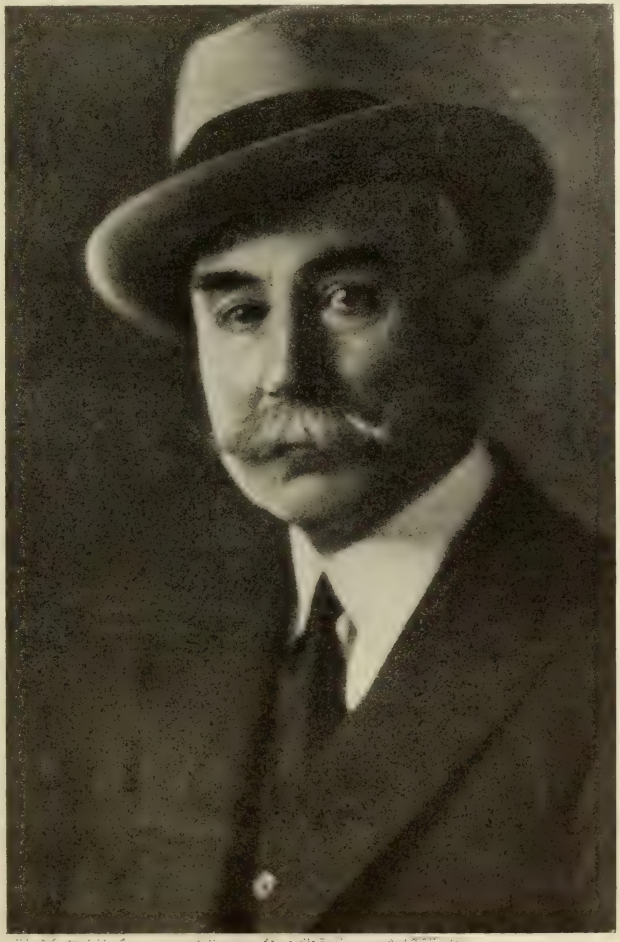
THANKSGIVING Season offers the retail grocer a splendid opportunity to start the buying for the fall and winter season. Many articles have been lying more or less dormant for the past few months but with the commencing of the cooler weather, those lines will again be brought to the attention of customers. Then again as Thanksgiving Day falls on a Monday and as the public are inclined to buy more freely for that day, the merchant has really the chance to double his sales. Displays in the store and windows are factors which cannot be ignored to assist in bringing about these extra sales. Newspaper advertisements featuring good things to eat for Thanksgiving Day are also valuable. In fact suggestion by any means, either window display, advertising or selling talk behind the counter, cannot fail to mean more money in the cash register at the end of the day.

Editorials in Brief

The merchant will get the best results from his advertisements if they are written as he would talk to his customers. An intimate, frank discussion of the goods you have to offer, with the price of the same quoted, constitutes the best copy.

Canadian Grocer Celebrates Birthday

It Was on Oct. 28 of 1887, That First Copy Was Printed—The Aims and Objects of Colonel MacLean, the Founder—Better Interprovincial Relations and Development of Better Merchandising Methods



THIRTY-FIVE years ago to-morrow, October 28, the first copy of Canadian Grocer came off the press and the present MacLean Publishing Co. was started. Lieut. Colonel John Bayne MacLean, the founder, and president of this company to-day, prior to that time had been in journalism for 5 years, and completed on Thursday last his 40th year in the journalistic field.

It was in September, 1887, that Colonel MacLean formed The Grocer Publishing Co. After Canadian Grocer was commenced he found that someone a year previous had been publishing a grocery paper. This he took over shortly afterwards.

Canadian Grocer was published once a month during October, November and December of 1887 after which it became a weekly and has never failed to make its appearance regularly every week in every month, in every year since that time.

Soon after Canadian Grocer was first published Colonel MacLean added other papers to the list including Dry Goods Review, Hardware and Metal, Bookseller and Stationer, etc., and at the present time the MacLean organization includes fifteen different publications altogether. Canadian Grocer therefore had the distinction of being the first business paper of the lengthy list to make its appearance. We look back upon the former years with not a little pride in the service we have given to the grocery trade in general. Retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers of food products in all parts of Canada have every year referred in complimentary remarks to this service.

Colonel MacLean's vision of thirty-five years ago was that a more rapid increase in trade and better methods of conducting business were required to build up the population of the country and speed the development of our great and widespread resources. He saw that if Canada was to prosper as it should our manufacturers must find wider markets for their products, that they must make quality goods and market them as efficiently as possible. Great stress has always been laid in all the business publications of the MacLean organization on the urgent necessity of the retailer getting behind good goods so that not only would the general public be better pleased, but that our manufacturers would more readily extend their influence throughout Canada as well as in countries where Canadian exports are required.

COLONEL JOHN BAYNE MACLEAN
Founder of MacLean Publishing Company, Limited, who has just completed 40 years in journalistic work.

A National Appeal

Colonel MacLean and the men who have been associated with him have, too, always taken an interest in the better relationship between all sections of the country. Canadian Grocer is a national business paper and appeals to the aggressive business men with national aims and aspects, who are big enough to measure their views and accomplishments with the best of their confreres elsewhere.

Maritimes

Four boys ranging in age from 11 to 14 years broke into Allan's grocery store at Cornwallis and Brunswick Streets, Halifax, recently and stole a quantity of groceries. The robbery was particularly daring, occurring as it did on a busy corner at nine o'clock in the evening.

Quebec

A grocer in Quebec City was recently arraigned for selling a bottle of whiskey without a license. He was found guilty and fined $500 and costs.

About one hundred dollars' damage was done to Picard's grocery store in Quebec City the other evening as a result of a fire that originated behind one of the counters.

J. E. Schroeder, managing director of Amoroso & Malagodi Co., Ltd., Montreal, was called to New York on Thursday of last week on account of the sudden death of his father, G. R. Schroeder, who had been for seventeen years the secretary of the Italian Chamber of Commerce in New York.

Ontario

Arnold Bros. are opening another store in the Parkdale district, Toronto.

Robt. Pierson, of St. Catharines, has taken over the business of J. A. Armour in Owen Sound. The business had been conducted by Mr. Armour for over 20 years.

Henry Moffett, for many years the proprietor of a general store in Pendleton, near Ottawa, passed away last week. He was in his eighty-third year. He is survived by three brothers and three sisters.

A resolution was recently passed by the Elgin branch of the Ontario Bookkeepers' Association urging the parent organization to adopt a system of co-operative marketing similar to that of the Niagara Fruit Growers' Association.

A by-law amending the by-law providing for the early closing of certain stores was passed by the Council of Sarnia at a meeting the other evening. Sarnia merchants selling meats, groceries and provisions may now remain open all evening if they so desire. A petition signed by more than one-third aforementioned dealers, was submitted asking for the repeal of the measure some time ago, and this new by-law is pursuant to the request of the petitioners.

Takes Charge for Lipton's as General Manager

Wallace J. Baker has been appointed Canadian general manager for Sir. Thos. Lipton. This appointment was confirmed by Sir Thomas when he was in Toronto a week or two ago and Mr. Baker has already assumed his new duties.

Mr. Baker has had a long career in sales management work in Canada. He was connected at one time with the selling staff of The Blue Ribbon Tea Co., now located in Winnipeg and had the distinction of being the first one to introduce Kellogg's corn flakes on the Canadian market several years ago.

When the Canadian Cereal and Flour Mills Co., was organized—this was an amalgamation of several cereal mills in Ontario—Mr. Baker was chosen as sales manager. During recent years he has had charge of sales in Eastern Canada for Davidson and Smith, flour and feed millers of Fort William, Ont. It is the latter work he has given up to join the Lipton firm.

New Bruns. R.M.A. Holds Its Eighth Annual Convention

St. John, N. B., Oct. 25.—The eighth annual convention of the New Brunswick branch of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada was held here recently. The chair was taken by President DeWolfe, and addresses of welcome were made by the president, Mayor McLellan, W. F. Burditt, R. E. Armstrong and F. A. Dykeman. W. G. DeWolfe in his address as president paid a high tribute to the services of the executive officers and particularly to the work of Miss F. P. Alward, the provincial secretary, who, he said had been untiring in her efforts to further the best interests of the association. He spoke optimistically of business conditions, and referred enthusiastically to the fact that the Canadian dollar was now at a slight premium, which he thought was of considerable significance, as denoting the general uplift of trade conditions.

Miss F. P. Alward, provincial secretary, in presenting the eighth annual report, reviewed the work of the New Brunswick Association during the past year, in detail. The report of the treasurer showed a balance on the right side. At the evening session of the first day, the report of S. L. Emerson, one of the St. John delegates to the Dominion convention was presented.

E. M. Trowern, Dominion secretary was in attendance, and in his address he spoke of the part that the Maritimes had played in the development of the Dominion, and assured his audience, as one who had come in close touch with Parliament, that when the members from the East spoke they were listened to, and when they demanded things they got them.

A complimentary banquet was tendered the delegates by the local branch of the association, at which the Hon. Fred Magee, provincial minister without portfolio, Hon. J. B. M. Baxter, K. C., M. P., Senator J. W. Daniels, E. M. Trowern and others, were the chief speakers.

HALIFAX GROCER CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY IN UNIQUE WAY

Halifax, N. S.—F. Eld, senior member of the firm of Fred Eld & Son, recently celebrated his birthday in an unique way. It was in the form of a huge birthday party to the children of his district. Some 1,200 children responded to the invitation and after participating in the games and good things to eat, each child was presented with a box of candy and fruit.

W. C. MILLER ADDRESSES ST. CLAIR AVE. BUSINESS MEN

Toronto, Oct. 24.—W. C. Miller, secretary of the Ontario Retail Merchants' Association addressed a meeting of the St. Clair avenue Business Men's Association to-day at a luncheon held in Jones' tearooms, St. Clair avenue. Over forty merchants were in attendance. Mr. Miller took as his subject the operation of the sales tax, pointing out its inequalities, and declaring that the proper place to collect the same is at the source.

Ontario

G. S. Robison, eastern Canadian representative of the Genesee Pure Food Co., with headquarters in Toronto, will spend the month of November in the Maritime Provinces.

W. C. Miller, secretary of the Ontario Retail Merchants' Association, addressed a meeting of the Niagara Falls branch of the association on Thursday evening of this week.

Ottawa Grocers Are Starting Bread Making Business

Ottawa, Oct. 25 (Special).—In the very near future the groecrs of Ottawa will be in the bread-making business.

With the one exception of the managing director, the stock will be held exclusively by the grocers of Ottawa and district and the business will be conducted on a profit sharing basis. There are approximately three hundred grocers in Ottawa, of whom it is expected more than half will hold shares in the company. Then also the members of the trade in towns and villages within a radius of fifty miles or so are also being given an opportunity of becoming identified with the enterprise and quite a number have signified their intention of doing so.

E. A. Lallemand of Montreal, has been engaged to control the destinies of the enterprise and has been busy for some time on the preliminary details. The initial outlay is approximately $50,000. The plant is being erected in the western part of the city and is costing between eighteen and twenty thousand dollars. The equipment alone is costing approximately $16,000. It is expected everything will be ready for business shortly after the beginning of the New Year.

The matter was first broached a year ago last March at a meeting of some of the representative grocers, called by T. W. Collins. While the suggestion immediately met with favor, those present very wisely decided that nothing whatever should be done untli all the pros and cons of the case had been laid on the table and carefully considered. In order that some progress might be made in this respect, a committee composed of the following was appointed to gather facts and report to the local branch: T. W. Collins, B. G. Crabtree, Alex. Phillips, A. E. Kelly, T. A. C. Kennedy, A. S. Moreland, Thomas Bowman and Basil Bambrick. Later on a board of directors was chosen and a charter obtained and other necessary details proceeded with. The board of directors is composed of the following: Messrs. Alex. Phillips, president; P. Lamoureux, vice-president; T. A. C. Kennedy, secretary; B. G. Crabtree, treasurer; T. W. Collins, director.

Will Hold Meetings Throughout Eastern Ontario District

Ottawa, Oct. 25 (Special).—J. C. Campbell, secretary of the Eastern Ontario Branch of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, is arranging for a series of meetings to be held in various centers during the fall and winter seasons. These gatherings will be of an instructive as well as social nature. A number of men are being invited to address the meetings on merchandising problems, and full opportunity will be given at each meeting for a thorough discussion of the important trade questions.

The first of these gatherings will be held at Arnprior, Nov. 3rd, and will take the form of the annual meeting of the local branch. Officers will be elected and an address on "Salesmanship" will be delivered by Stewart McClenaghan of Ottawa. Then on the 10th of November, a banquet will be held at Carleton Place.

While no definite arrangements have been made yet, it is intended to hold a big meeting in Belleville towards the end of November or the beginning of December.

Canadians Lead Other Nations in Butter Eating

Washington, Oct. 25.—Canada comes first in a list of 13 nations in the per capita consumption of butter. Each person in Canada is credited with consuming 27 pounds of butter a year, compared with 15 pounds in the United States.

The latter nation comes tenth in the list. Sweden, Denmark, Great Britain, Italy, France, Switzerland and other nations whose production and consumption of butter is high were listed in the deparment's new handbook of dairy statistics.

Sweden leads in the consumption of milk, with 68 gallons given as the annual amount consumed by each person. Great Britain and Italy were lowest in milk consumption, with an anuual per capita use of 22 gallons and four gallons, respectively. Switzerland leads in cheese eating, the average for each person being 26 pounds a year.

One on the Judge

Mr. O'Brien was having heavy going on a slippery pavement in the days before prohibition. He slipped and sat down with force right in front of a judge who happened to know him.

"O'Brien," said the Judge, "sinners stand on slippery ground."

"So I see, Judge," answered O'Brien. "But it's more than I can do."—Chicago Herald and Examiner.

36th ANNUAL FALL AND WINTER NUMBER NEXT WEEK

"WE HAVE cut our operating costs just one-fifth since we installed that system of refrigeration" stated a retail merchant. The balance of this story is indeed interesting. This merchant goes on to tell how not only has he saved considerable money in his ice bills but also saved much waste in fruits and vegetables. You can read it in the next issue of Canadian Grocer which is the Thirty-sixth Annual Fall and Winter Number.

This year's Fall Number will be devoted almost entirely to stories setting forth the experience of merchants showing just what they have accomplished in building a sound permanent business. Sales plans, window displays and advertising ideas will be dealt with in plain everyday language and undoubtedly will prove valuable reading.

The issue will be brim full of illustrations. Christmas, as well as other window displays that have meant many dollars in increased sales to the merchants who dressed them, will be a feature. Illustrations of store interiors will also be shown. Likewise an article on showcards, together with reproductions of cards and sample alphabet, will be in this issue. This article deals with the value of showcards in a retail store and gives some suggestions for Christmas window displays and something about the writing of showcards.

There will also be a list of general grocery commodities with comparative prices from the year 1914 up until 1922.

NO SUNDAY TRADING ALLOWED IN WINNIPEG

Bread, fruit and other such provisions may not be sold on Sunday hereafter in Winnipeg, as the civic authorities have announced a rigid enforcement of the Lord's Day Act, and only storekeepers with victuallers' licenses may keep open on Sunday.

PROPER HEATING OF FOOD PREVENTS BOTULISM

Washington, Oct. 25.—An exhaustive investigation of several years by the medical schools of Harvard, the University of California and Stanford University, in co-operation with the United States Public Health Service, has determined that the food poisoning known as botulism may be avoided by the proper heating of food, it was announced by the National Canners' Association, at the request of which the investigation was undertaken.

A report declared "that all canned foods whether prepared at home or in a large factory, are safe if heated for the time that has been scientifically determined."

Ask That Peddlers be Confined to Same Hours as Merchants

Winnipeg, Oct. 25.—Assurance was given representatives of the retail grocers of the city by the legislative committee of the city council that the objection the delegation raised with regard to peddlers being allowed to sell fruit and vegetables after hours would be remedied if possible. The delegation complained that while grocery stores were forced to close on Wednesday afternoon and at 6 p.m. on other days, men who peddled from door to door could sell fruit and vegetables at any time.

At the present time the city receives a license of $50 each from 63 peddlers. The retailers said there were 160 grocers paying business tax, and that in some cases the business tax from one merchant would equal the total received from the peddlers. The delegation requested that the license be increased and that the peddlers be confined to the same hours as the merchants.

The retail grocers were represented by H. M. Jenkins, J. Shenkmin, F. Langston, W. Batten, L. Irwin and H. J. Fleming.

Members of the committee present were: Chairman A. McTaggart, Geo. Webster, Andy Davidson and Mrs. A. Gale.

Want Transient Traders Licensed in Man. Municipalities

Winnipeg, Oct. 25.—Neglect of municipalities to pass by-laws requiring licensing of transient traders while at the same time the municipalities are asssessing the stocks of local permanent merchants, was strongly protested by the provincial executive of the Retail Merchants' association, which was in session in the city recently, under the chairmanship of T. A. Connell, Winnipeg. It was decided to insist that municipalities require temporary dealers to take out licenses if they wanted to trade in the same area as the established merchants. This, it was claimed, would only be fair to both classes.

It was reported that the taxation recommendations of the association had been submitted to the United Farmers' organization and discussed with the executive of that body with a view to getting its co-operation in having the distribution of taxation in the province placed on an equitable basis.

CANADIAN GROCER CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

service along these lines has, we feel, been recognized. This is evidenced by the fact that a large number who were among the subscribers from the beginning of its publication are still readers to-day. A great many more have been reading the paper for more than thirty years. This, we believe, is the real test of the need and the value of a specialized business paper, and the staff of Canadian Grocer considers itself honored by holding the respect and appreciation of so many merchants and manufacturers for such a period of years.

ESTIMATED VOLUME OF BUSINESS

"Our own retail department has also furnished me with these estimates:

"Weber & Heilbroner's profits for the past year were given in round numbers as $250,000, and their average inventory as $900,000. From this it can be estimated that their annual sales volume is about $5,000,000.

"The Association Dry Goods Corporation have never issued a statement as to their sales, although they do annually state their profits. However, it would be fair to assume that $25,000,000 is the present sales volume of Lord & Taylor. The figure for Altman's would be about similar to that of Lord & Taylor. McCreery & Co.'s sales volume could be placed at about $20,000,000. Franklin Simon's sales volume is at present probably $25,000,000.

"At first sight all of these data may seem confusing, but I believe that they will be of value to anyone wanting to make an estimate from these figures in so far as they can see all of the source of material."

A Little Mistake

"As I was crossing the bridge the other day," said an Irishman, "I met Pat O'Brien. 'O'Brien,' says I, 'how are you?' 'Pretty well, thank you, Brady,' says he. 'Brady,' says I, 'that's not my name.' 'Faith,' says he, 'and mine's not O'Brien.'

"With that we again looked at each other, and' sure enough it was naythe of us."

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THE grocery trade is characterized by an improved buying movement, although wholesalers state that the tendency on the part of the retailer is still to buy in limited quantities, or rather as requirements necessitate. The situation generally in grocery commoditites is one of strength and markets are for the most part very firm. Sugar is unchanged as compared with a week ago, and prices are nominally at last week's advance. It is stated however that sales are being made at the old price. Sugar is on the whole quiet. Dried fruits, particularly in regard to raisins and currants, continue to show strength. The new pack California raisins should be available any time now. Prices of the same are very firm. Currrants while unchanged this week are quoted in a very strong market, and dealers express the opinion that buying at present levels is advisable. New Hallowee dates are offered for sale this week, and at slightly lower prices. The new pack Oregon prunes are due to arrive Nov. 15, and are somewhat lower than ruling quotations. California prunes are rolling and are due to arrive any time now. Smyrna figs are very high in price, advances being noted this week. Canned goods are moving in good volume at steady prices. New gallon apples should be on this market shortly, and prices will undoubtedly be lower than last year's pack.

Both corn starch and laundry starch show advances this week, due in part to the strength of the market for corn. Corn syrups are steady and strong, but the situation is now somewhat firmer in view of the strength of the primary market for corn. Teas continue to advance, and some wholesalers have marked up their bulk teas this week. Further advances are more than probable, they state, the primary markets showing considerable strength. Rices are in fair demand, and the market for spices is active at unchanged levels. The market for flour and millfeeds is steady, with the inquiry for the same good. Oranges are quoted lower this week. Domestic fruits, such as peaches and plums, continue to arrive and are quoted at steady prices. Potatoes are slightly higher this week and are quoted at from 80 cents to $1 per bag.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Oct. 25.—The improvement in the volume of buying and the general condition of the grocery trade is more marked and an optimistic feeling is evident throughout the trade. Confidence is being established in the markets with a more steady basis on most lines. Sugar continues firm with some strength but the wholesale trade seems to feel that there is a reduction due some time in the next two months and some wholesalers venture to assert that the time will be early in November. Buying is therefore limited in this line. Teas are strong and another advance in wholesale prices on the better grades would not be surprising. Coffee is "marking time." There is no change in the spice market. Canned goods are firm with a marked improvement in buying. More prices are quoted on canned fruits. New California prunes are on the market and prices are a little easier on some sizes. Strength is evident in raisins and some small supplies of Smyrna figs are offered by the wholesale trade. Spanish table raisins are quoted for the winter trade. There is much cutting in package prepared breakfast foods. All starches are advanced ¼c a lb. The cereal market is strong and millers state that deliveries of the new crop are slow. There is no change of note in fruit or vegetables. Cotton twine and rope is advanced in price.

CEREAL MARKET FIRM

Montreal.

CEREALS.—There is no change in the cereal market. Prices are firm with a strong note in rolled oats. The railroad situation, so the millers say, is nearly as bad as in war times and deliveries are delayed with the result that the output of the mills is limited. The trade demand is heavy and supplies are limited. The condition of the market is reported as exceedingly strong.

CALIFORNIA PRUNES ARRIVE

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS—Owing to the railroad trouble and the coal strike in the U. S., deliveries of fruit from California have been delayed. Santa Clara prunes shipped on Sept. 21 have just arrived in Montreal. The new prices are slightly easier than those previously quoted but the wholesale trade expect a strong market with some advances as orders are completed. The reductions come principally on the smaller sizes. There will be no pulled figs on the market this year owing to trouble in Smyrna. The Montclaire which has just arrived in Montreal brought 116 cases of figs direct from Smyrna. These complete the shipments expected which were delayed on account of the vessel being called back to pick up refugees.

RICE MARKET STEADY

Montreal.

RICE.—Domestic rice on spot is steady in tone and moderate in demand. There is no pressure to sell the light holdings because of the firmness of Southern rices, receipts of which are coming in slowly. The demand is lacking in foreign rices and the situation has an easier tone than was evident during the threatening trouble in the Near East and in India. English milled Patna rices are quoted locally ½c lower at 8c a lb.

Montreal.

NUTS.—New Tarragona almonds are on the market and are quoted from 12½c to 13c per lb. Soft shell pecans are higher in price and are quoted at 60c per lb. Grenoble walnuts are listed at 28c per lb., a slight reduction in the previous price. Jumbo roasted peanuts are a little higher in price and the extra fancy hand picked nuts are quoted at 14c roasted, while extra Jumbos are listed at 12½c per lb. Sicily filberts are slightly lower in price and are quoted from 10½ to 11c per lb.

VEGETABLE SUPPLIES SMALL

Montreal.

VEGETABLES.—It is mid-season in vegetables and the market is uncertain. The local offerings are limited to roots, cabbages, cauliflower and onions. Prices are easy on these. Potatoes are particularly low in price, being quoted at from 90c to $1 a bag whereas one year ago they were selling at $1.50 a bag. Tomatoes are finished, only small lots of late green tomatoes are on the market.

LITTLE CHANGE IN FRUIT

Montreal

FRUIT.—There is little or no change in the fruit market. The domestic fruit, exeept apples, is about over. The warm weather of last week upset the calculations of some of the fruit dealers and made shipping difficult. Florida grapefruit are beginning to come to the market but the fruit is slightly off color. There are no price changes of note.

EXPECT LOWER SUGAR PRICES

Montreal.

SUGAR.—For the present at least the sugar market is standing firm with evident strength at the basis of $7.50 per cwt. The raw market is steady at 3¾c c. & f. New York, but refiners do not seem particularly keen on the offers as they have ample supplies to arrive and melt to take care of business in refined sugar now on their books. Some of the wholesalers are firm in the opinion that the price is due for a decline during November and others predict that the market will hold firm until January. Buying of refined sugar is limited throughout and wholesalers are only taking care of their immediate wants. The retail trade is fairly well supplied with refined sugar since they bought when the price was at a lower level. The consensus of opinion seems to be that the peak in the price has been reached and that some reductions may be expected.

CUTTING IN PACKAGES

Montreal.

PACKAGE GOODS.—Cutting by the wholesale trade has made a number of temporary changes in package goods prices. The retail trade is taking advantages of the cuts and is stocking up in package cereals. Rolled oats however is not affected. All corn and laundry starches are advanced ¼c a lb. This comes as a result of higher corn market.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Oct. 25.—Changes in the markets for groceries this week are not many, prices for the most part holding at steady figures. Sugar is nominally quoted at the advance reported last week, but it is stated that sales are being made at the old price. The sugar situation is reported quiet. The demand for cereals is on the whole good, and prices steady. Some changes are noted in quotations on starches this week, an advance of a quarter of a cent being noted. Corn syrups are steady but strong. Dried fruits continue strong, particularly for raisins, currants and figs. New Hallowee dates are quoted lower. Oregon prunes are quoted to arrive November 15, and are lower than present spot prices. There is a good brisk demand for honey these days. Teas continue their upward trend, and some wholesalers are quoting spot stocks at higher prices this week.

BEANS INCLINE TO EASIER LEVELS

Toronto.

BEANS.—There appears to be fairly abundant offerings of beans on the market, and while prices are unchanged as compared with a week ago, the tendency is towards easier quotations. The Canadian hand-picked and 1 lb. pickers are quoted at from $3 to $3.25 per bushel.

STARCHES ARE HIGHER

Toronto.

PACKAGE GOODS.—The feature of the market for package goods this week is the advance in corn starch, also laundry starch. All starches are quoted a quarter of a cent higher. Celluloid starch is now $3.90 per box. Potato flour is 12½c. per pkg. Other package lines are unchanged as compared with a week ago, and there is a very good inquiry for the same.

NUTS IN SHELLS ARE LOWER

Toronto.

NUTS.—Tarragona almonds in the shell are quoted at 17½c. per lb., and Manchurian walnuts in the shell are offered at 17½ to 18½c. per lb. Brazil nuts unshelled are quoted at from 13½ to 14½c. per lb. There appears to be a fair amount of buying at these prices, the above quotations showing recessions as compared with values ruling for these lines a week ago. Pecans on the other hand are higher, and are quoted at 32c. per lb. Shelled nuts are in good demand. Bordeaux walnuts are selling freely at from 55 to 58c. per lb., the broken nuts being offered at from 39 to 42c. per lb. Shelled pecans are very strong at from $1 to $1.05 per lb.

CANNED GOODS ARE ACTIVE

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—Volume of trading in canned goods is on a fairly good scale at the present time. Vegetables appear to be moving well, at prices steady with last week's quotations. Tomatoes are quoted at from $1.40 to $1.47½ per doz. for 2½s. Lombard plums 2s are offered at from $1.40 to $1.45 per doz., and the halves are 95c. per doz. Gallon apples, water pack, are offered at $5.60 per doz. for last year's supplies, but offerings of these are very scarce, only one or two wholesalers having any. The new pack should be available shortly, and will show a marked reduction in price at from $4.25 to $4.50 per doz. for gals.

HONEY IN ACTIVE DEMAND

Toronto.

HONEY.—There is a slightly easier tendency in the market for honey this week. Buying is on a very active scale. 5 pound tins are offered at from 13½ to 14c. per lb., and 10-lb. tins are from 13 to 13½c. per lb., and the 60-lb. tins are 12½ and 13c per lb.

NEW HALLOWEE DATES ARRIVE

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—The market in dried fruits is characterized by strength in most lines. Raisins are a very strong market, as are also currants, and the opinion is expressed that buying at present values is good, as the present strong position of the market for these fruits is likely to become enhanced. Advices indicate little that would point to any recessions for some time at least. The new pack of California raisins should be available any day, as shipments are reported as having arrived on this market. Quotations on currants are unchanged as compared with a week ago. New Hallowee dates are offered this week, and prices are lower, wholesalers quoting them at from 9¾c.

to 10c. per lb. Dealers are quoting Oregon prunes to arrive about the fifteenth of November. Boxes of 25s, 30-40s, are quoted at 17½c. per lb., 40-50s, 14½c. per lb., 50-60s, 12½c. per lb. and 60-70s 11¾c. per lb. Figs are quoted at a considerable advance this week, prices ranging from $3 to $3.75 per 10-lb. boxes, for numbers 4, and 5 Crown, and at $4.25 for 6-lb. boxes, layer figs, 6 Crown.

FLOUR HOLDS STEADY

Toronto.

FLOUR.—The market in flour is holding at last week's decline. First patents, in cotton bags, are quoted at $6.60 per bbl., and second patents, in jute bags, are offered at $6 per bbl.

FLOUR—
First Patents, in cotton bags, bbl.	6 60
Second Patents, in jute bags, bbl.	6 00

SUGAR SITUATION QUIET

Toronto.

SUGAR.—The situation in sugar is rather quiet. Prices are holding at last week's advance. However, it is stated that these quotations are only nominal as the majority of sales are being put through at the former price of $7.59 per cwt. Toronto delivery. Supplies of raws in refiners' hands are very limited. The last Central operating in Cuba is reported closed, with an output of 702,181 bags. The Cuban crop for the season 1921-1922 is reported the largest on record, at 3,996,189 tons, an increase over the 1920-1921 period of 61,000 tons. The output for the year just closed is 400,000 tons in excess of the estimated production.

SPICE MARKET STEADY AND STRONG

Toronto.

SPICES.—No change is reported in the market for spices this week. There continues a very active demand, with the situation generally strong. Cloves are quoted in a firm market at 60c. per lb. Peppers are holding at from 18 to 20c. for black, and at from 28 to 30c. for white. Nutmegs, whole, range from 30 to 40c. per lb. and ground nutmegs are 30c. Carraway seed, whole, is offered at from 20 to 25c. per lb.

MILLFEEDS ARE IN DEMAND

Toronto.

MILLFEEDS.—There continues a very good inquiry for millfeeds with prices holding at $20.25 per ton for bran, and at $22.25 per ton for shorts.

MILLFEEDS—
Bran, per ton	20 25
Shorts, per ton	22 25

TEAS ARE ADVANCING

Toronto.

TEAS.—The upward trend in teas continues unabated, and some wholesalers are quoting their bulk teas on spot at higher levels this week. Some dealers state that even stronger quotations will prevail within the near future, for the reason that prices being paid now for future deliveries are higher than present spot values. Recent reports on the Indian tea crop indicate that it is likely to be 20,000,000 lbs. short of last year, which in itself was a small crop. Both Javas and Chinese teas are ruling at very strong prices.

ORANGES ARE QUOTED LOWER

Toronto.

FRUITS.—Lower prices are ruling on oranges this week. Wholesalers are quoting California Valencias at from $4 to $8.50 per case, according to sizes, and Florida oranges are quoted at $7 per box. Lemons are $6.50 per box, and grapefruit is quoted at from $5.50 to $6 per case. There are still some peaches arriving on this market. The large baskets are offered at from 50 to 75c. and the smaller ones at from 30 to 40c. Plums and pears, too, are still being offered.

POTATOES ARE HIGHER

Toronto.

VEGETABLES.—Some dealers are quoting potatoes as high as $1 per bag this week. Prices range from 80c. to $1. Supplies are arriving freely, and there is a very good inquiry for the same. Onions in bags of 100 lbs. are offered at from $1.75 to $1.85, and large cases of Spanish onions are quoted at $5, and the half cases at $2.50. Pickling onions are from 75c. to $1.25 for large baskets. Cauliflower is quoted at from $1.25 to $1.50 per doz. Sweet potatoes are unchanged at from $1.75 to $1.85 per bushel hamper.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, Oct. 25.—Although the wheat crop this year has been one of the heaviest in the history of the West, the trade reports that business is not showing the improvement that was expected. There is very little booking on futures as merchants are confining their sales to immediate requirements. The tone of all grocery commodities shows a stronger trend. Canned goods are moving fairly well and buying appears to be more active. The situation in dried fruits is firm as raisins, currants and prunes are ruling at stronger levels. Cereals continue to sell in small quantities according to immediate requirements and the market is inclined to be easy. Reports from primary centres state that teas are steadily advancing and locally package teas have advanced from 3c to 5c. Starch has also advanced. Apples are arriving in good quantities and prices are reasonable. Spices continue to rule firm. There is no change in vegetables.

COFFEE PRICES IRREGULAR

Winnipeg.

COFFEE.—The primary coffee market is reported irregular, one day showing a tendency to advance and the next day to decline. However, the general impression of the trade is that coffee bought at to-day's quotations is good buying. Spot stocks on hand are sufficient to meet the local requirements.

CANNED GOODS ACTIVE

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—Practically all lines of the new season's pack of vegetables and fruits have arrived on the market, and with the lower prices ruling the volume of sales show a decided increase. There is very little change to the canned fish situation. Pink salmon continues firm and some lines of sockeye have been offered at slightly lower prices. Canned lobsters remain firm and supplies are limited.

EVAPORATED APPLES LOWER

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUITS.—The dried fruit situation shows little change. Raisins are reported firm, seedless have arrived, but seeded, due to poor transportation, will be late in arriving. New crop prunes have arrived but prices are higher. New crop loganberries are now on the market, 8 oz. packages are quoted at 25½c with same in bulk at 46c per lb. Currants are reported scarce. Apricots are ruling firm on the better grades due to the short crop and the entire clean up of last year's yield. Peaches are quiet. Evaporated apples have declined, now quoted at 15¾c for 50s and 16¼c for 25s.

FROM CALGARY, BY WIRE

Calgary, Alta., Oct. 25.—All corn and laundry starches have advanced one quarter cent per pound. Lux declined to $7.30 a reduction of 25c. per case. Both the large and the small size prunes will be scarce and command a premium this season as the crop in both California and Oregon run to the medium sizes. Sair dates are offered at 10½c. per lb. Stocks of the better known brands of imported sardines seem to be fairly well cleaned up in this market. A shortage of imported citron peel is likely and every indication points to a higher market.

Where Perishable Merchandise is Shown to Advantage on Refrigerated Counters

Brown Bros., Owen Sound, Have Splendid Facilities for Displaying Foods—Computing Scales, Meat Slicer and Cash Register Are All a Part of This Well Equipped Store

AS CUSTOMERS enter the store of Brown Bros., Owen Sound, Ont., they are at once struck with the general cleanliness and sanitation prevailing. The walls, ceiling and counters are finished in white enamel, with trimmings in oak.

The white counters with plate glass cases on top, extending along both sides and across the rear, used for display purposes, which enable the firm to show a large variety of perishable merchandise to the best advantage. These glass cases are refrigerated. An even degree of temperature is kept in them by a cooling system which is in operation practically throughout the store, even to the store itself. The windows are also refrigerated, having installed in them a system of coils. This cooling system is operated from a main plant situated in another part of the building. On each side of the store behind the counters and extending the full length of the wall are shelves upon which are displayed package groceries and bottled goods and beneath the counters are bins containing bulk groceries such as sugar, cereals, rices, etc. Computing scales, meat slicer and cash register form part of the equipment of each counter and as each side of the store is fitted with the same fixtures and carries practically the same stock, there is little confusion with clerks going from one side of the store to the other in order to get the requirements of the customer.

Orders for delivery are assembled in a rear room and deliveries made from the rear entrance, thus eliminating much confusion from delivery boys usually the case when loading at the front entrance.

Much of the beef, poultry and eggs handled by Brown Bros., is produced on their own farm, conducting as they do, 850 acres situated 28 miles from Owen Sound.

Canada's Fishing Industries Rank Third Among Leading Nations of the World

Average Value During the Past Ten Years is Placed at $40,000,000—Is Exceeded by Great Britain and the United States, But Double the Value of Norwegian, Danish and Japanese Fisheries

OTTAWA, Oct. 16 (Special).—Compared with the fisheries of leading nations Canada's fishing industries rank third, being exceeded by Britain (value about $94,000,000) and by the United States (value about $76,000,000) but they are double the value of the Norwegian or the Danish, or the Japanese, and five times the value of the Dutch fisheries, and over seven times the annual value of the fisheries of Newfoundland ($4,700,000).

Average Value $40,000,000

During the last decade they have fluctuated especially during the war, as the following totals show:

1912	$33,389,464
1913	33,207,748
1914	31,264,631
1915	35,860,708
1916	39,208 378
1917	52,312,044
1918	60,250,544
1919	56,508,479
1920	49,241.339
1921	34,930,935

Thus the average value during the last ten years has been about $40,000,000, and the total weight of fish taken from the waters of Canada, inland and marine, yearly, amounts at the present time to no less than 340,000 tons. In spite of the fact that capital, vessels, gear, and a large body of Canadian fishermen are employed in the industry on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and on the inland waters, the fisheries are still capable of much greater expansion.

Home Market Inadequately Supplied

Commenting upon the possibilities of the domestic demand, Prof. E. E. Prince, Dominion Commissioner of Fisheries, had the following to say:

"The Canadian home market has been very inadequately supplied and the export market is world-wide. With the ending of the tragic conflict of the Great War, the need of vaster supplies of food products is urgent, and Canada is in a better position to supply the nations with fish than any other country, and on a greatly expanded scale. Our domestic demand for fish could be doubled or trebled if better supplies in a fresh condition, and at reasonable prices, reached our centres of population regularly. No one who has seen the large catches of fine cod and haddock, brought almost daily into our fishing ports along the coast from Gaspe to Grand Manon, can question the possibility of enormous expansion.

"To take one example of the growth of the fish business in one county where enterprise has been general. In Digby county, Nova Scotia, fifty years ago the fish business did not exceed $120,000; now the sale of smoked haddock, kippered herring, shredded and boneless cod, etc., in that county alone, reaches nearly $1,000,000 each season and in some seasons the orders received from various parts of Canada exceed the supply.

Very Few Valueless

"Experts claim that of over six hundred different kinds of fish native to our waters, very few are not of value as food, and yet not more than fifty species have ever been utilized, and only fifteen kinds are in demand in our markets. The Canadian people could readily use one hundred and fifty different kinds of fish. A striking example of the waste of valuable fish is afforded by the sword-fish and tuna, or tunny, both exceptionally fine food on the table. Until ten or twelve years ago these fish were accidentally taken by our fishermen, and as there was no systematic fishery

Some Facts and Observations on Recent Amendments to the Root Vegetables Act

Opinion is Expressed That the Clauses of This Act Are Equally Advantageous From the Standpoint of the Producer, Wholesaler and Retailer

OTTAWA, Oct. 25. (Special).—In view of the situation created by the recent amendments to the Root Vegetables Act, which directly affect retail grocers throughout the country, the following facts and observations prepared for Canadian Grocer by an official of the Fruit Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, are interesting:

"The Dominion Root Vegetables Act is somewhat on the same lines as the Fruit Inspection and Sales Act which has done so much to establish the fruit trade on a sound business basis.

"The provisions of both Acts before being put on the Statutes were submitted to the legislature by the growers with the approval of the traders generally, and the clauses are as advantageous from the consumer's point of view as that of the producer, wholesaler and retailer.

"The Root Vegetables Act differs in one respect from the Fruit Act especially as regards potatoes, as it effectually bars the dumping upon the open market of undersized potatoes and provides for a compulsory and described grading of all potatoes whether sold by grower, wholesaler or retailer, thus encouraging those growers and merchants who work for the best interests of the trade and who will not now be faced with the unfair competition of those who put an inferior and often wrongly-described commodity on the market, which not only causes dissatisfaction to the consumer, but lessens consumption and affects seriously the market prices of the whole.

"The basis of good business policy, particularly in relation to food is to give the consumer that which will meet with his approval and will induce him to buy in increasing quantity. If this is done the question of price, if it is a reasonable one, is to the great majority of consumers only a secondary condition. It has been conclusively proved that it costs little more to grow a ton of good potatoes than a ton of inferior quality and it is an undoubted fact that good quality when put on the market sells itself.

Grading

"There is nothing in the grades mentioned in the Act which is in any way unreasonable. Canada A and Canada B grades are what the consistent grower ordinarily puts on the market with possibly a little more care in selection, while Canada C, although the Act uses the words 'ungraded quality,' (which is obviously not a right definition), must consist of potatoes not less than 1½-in. dia. This is a fair-sized potato for domestic use and the Act further provides in Section 8 that no person shall sell or offer for sale for human consumption any potatoes or onions so diseased or otherwise depreciated as to render them unfit for such purpose, and this, it will be conceded, is a saving clause in respect to Canada C and of very considerable importance to the trade.

"Section 9 deals with fraudulent packing and states that any potatoes or onions packed in any package, in which the faced or shown surface gives a false representation of the contents of such package, and it shall be considered a false representation if more than 10% of such potatoes are substantially smaller in size or inferior in grade to those on the faced or shown surface. This provision will be welcomed by those who realize the importance of fair dealing not only as affecting their reputation but as an inducement for further business.

"In order to allow for variations incident to commercial grading and handling, a fair percentage is allowed by the Act, but it would be poor business policy for the grower or packer to take more advantage of this concession than can possibly be helped.

Must Be Sold By Weight

"Section 13 states that all root vegetables shall be sold by weight. This will be accepted by the trade and consumer as a distinct improvement. All other methods cause uncertainty and discontent, which is also bad for trade.

"It is obviously in the interest of the growers and dealers to obtain a copy of the Act and make themselves familiar with its rulings. The importance of proper selection before packing and personal supervision cannot be too strongly urged upon the grower, as no inspection can be thorough once the goods are packed. The consumer is the ultimate inspector and his appreciation or otherwise is a most important consideration.

In Regard to Seed Potatoes

"It will not be out of place to refer in this article to the question of seed potatoes, which is so clearly dealt with in Bulletin No. 86, Department of Agriculture, Province of British Columbia, as on this point depends the future prosperity of the trade, and as an aid to the Government certified seed plan now in active operation a standard grade for seed potatoes is an absolute necessity, to prevent the sale of ungraded seed which

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Oct. 25.—Lower prices on hogs and on fresh pork have come as a result of the heavy supplies that have been offered on the market in view of a dullness in the export market for bacon. Dressed hogs show a marked reduction and the change is noticeable in all cuts except loins. The beef market stands firm. Butter shows no change in price but cheese is advanced one cent a pound with a good demand all around. New laid eggs are advanced. The production of eggs shows a steady decrease and the export market shows some improvement, strengthening the situation. Lard and shortening are unchanged. Bacon and smoked meats are unchanged but there is weakness in the bacon market on account of a dullness in the English demand for Canadian goods. Fish prices are about steady with a slight advance in the price of haddock and steak cod and a general improvement in the demand. There is an easy tone to the poultry market. The only marked change is a reduction of 5c a lb. in turkeys. The supply is good but the demand is only fair.

BUTTER UNCHANGED

Montreal.

BUTTER.—There has been very little change in the condition of the butter market. Prices rule about steady but the volume of business has been small compared with the previous week, on account of the fact that there has been less demand from English importers. Local buyers are not disposed to operate to any extent which is an indication that they are fairly well supplied for the time being.

CHEESE PRICES ADVANCED

Montreal.

CHEESE.—The export business in cheese during the past week has been rather quiet which was attributed to the fact that foreign buyers did not respond readily to the higher prices that have been asked by exporters. The local market, however, has been strong and an advance of one cent per pound is quoted all around making the price 20c. for new cheese and 24c. for old.

HOG PRICES REDUCED

Montreal.

FRESH MEATS.—Owing to the continued weakness in the English markets for Canadian bacon and the further reduction in prices during the past week, coupled with the liberal supplies of live hogs coming forward, the market has continued weak and prices have scored a further decline. At the lower level of values, however, the demand has been sufficient to absorb all offerings and a fairly active trade is being done. The bulk of the trading in this market was done at $11 to $11.25 per cwt. for select lightweights weighed off cars, a reduction of from 50c. to 75c. per cwt. over the price quoted one week ago. There is a marked reduction in the price of fresh pork. Fresh killed hogs are quoted at $16.50 per cwt. and fresh legs of pork are quoted from 18½ to 19c. Trimmed loins however, remain firm at 27c. The beef market has a steady tone and prices remain unchanged.

BACON MARKET WEAK

Montreal.

SMOKED MEATS.—A fair trade is being done in smoked meats and there is a steady demand from local and country buyers for small lots to meet immediate requirements. The domestic market has been active, but the dullness in the export demand has created a weak feeling for bacon. There is no actual change in the price of bacon.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Oct. 25.—There is a general tendency to easiness in the market for a number of produce lines this week. Provisions and pork products of practically all kinds are ruling at easier prices, in sympathy with the lower quotations on live hogs. The butter market is unchanged, while cheese shows an advance as compared with a week ago. There is a good demand for butter, and the situation is strong. The same can be said of cheese. Arrivals of fresh eggs on this market are in small supply. Prices are quoted higher for fresh supplies. Poultry receipts, too, are more plentiful, and dealers report that the demand for fish in the past week has shown a very marked improvement.

BUTTER IS STEADY

Toronto.

BUTTER.—The market for butter is holding at strong levels. There is some curtailment in the make, but the demand is good, and prices are very firm. Export orders are in fairly large volume.

FISH IN DEMAND

Winnipeg.

FISH.—There is a better demand for fish and with cool weather prevailing an improvement is expected in the demand. Oysters are quoted at $4 25 per gallon. There is a fair demand for Labrador herrings.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, Oct. 25.—There are few changes in the produce market this week. Live hogs are showing an easier tendency. Fresh meats are steady but there is a falling off in the demand. Smoked meats are in good demand and with the live hog market easier, lower prices are expected. The butter market is firm and cheese is showing a firmer tendency. Eggs have advanced and receipts are light. Poultry receipts show an increase but the demand is not showing any improvement.

BUTTER MARKET STEADY

Winnipeg.

BUTTER.—There continues a fair enquiry for butter with the market ruling steady. No. 1 prints are quoted from 38c to 40c and No. 2 from 36c to 38c.

EGGS ADVANCE

Winnipeg.

EGGS.—Very few eggs are arriving from the country and practically all orders are now filled from storage. Wholesalers are quoting fresh eggs in cartons at 40c. per doz., selects at 34c. and No. 1 candled at 30c.

CHEESE IS FIRMER

Winnipeg

CHEESE.—The cheese situation is showing a firmer tone. Dealers are quoting large Ontario at 20c; twins 20½c and triplets 21c. Ontario Stilton, new made, is quoted at 23½c. Indications point to an advance shortly.

SMOKED MEATS EASY

Winnipeg.

PROVISIONS.—There is no change in smoked meats but on account of the market for live hogs being easy, lower prices are expected on all lines of smoked meats. Smoked hams are quoted from 23c. to 32c. per lb. according to quality. Peamealed bacon is quoted at 46c. per lb. and breakfast bacon at 43c. Other lines of bacon run as low as 30c.

SOME FACTS AND OBSERVATIONS

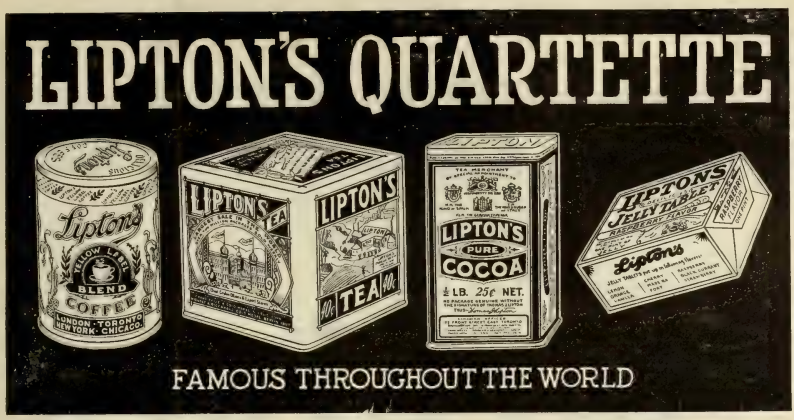
is the cause of the increasing deterioration of the potato crop all over Canada. It is up to the growers themselves to insist upon such a grade as will prevent any seed that is not free from disease, of good size and variety, with certain necessary allowances, being sold or put upon the open market for sale.

"The clauses of the Act governing the grading of onions is on similar lines and the same remarks apply."



CANADA'S FISHING INDUSTRIES

for them, they were cast upon the beach to rot. They were not appreciated, but in recent years as many as five thousand fine sword-fish, each weighing from 200 to 400 pounds, are being brought to market.

"It seems incredible that within the memory of many fishermen still actively at work, lobsters were regarded as a pest, though the fishery now brings from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 per annum The delicious smelt were thrown on the land as fertilizer, though they now yield $700,000 to $900,000 yearly to the smelt fishermen on the Atlantic coast."

PRODUCTION OF CITRUS FRUITS IN FLORIDA

Production of citrus fruits in Florida for the season of 1922-23 is estimated at 15,000,000 boxes. Of this total about 8,400,000 boxes will be oranges and tangerines and about 66,000,000 boxes grapefruit. (An early forecast of the California orange crop, made Aug. 1, is 13,750,000 boxes).

Last season the commercial citrus crop of Florida was approximately 13,300,000 boxes of which 7,300,000 boxes were oranges and 6,000,000 boxes grapefruit. Last year's crop, however, would have been nearer 14,000,000 boxes if the storm of October, 1921, had not destroyed a large percentage of the fruit on the west coast.

Outstanding features of the crop for 1922-23 are the fine quality, the size of fruit from early bloom, and the heavy setting of fruit from late bloom. Bloom last spring was heavy all over the citrus belt of Florida, except in the storm-swept territory on the west coast. However, the dry weather which followed caused considerable shedding of fruit which became serious along the east coast ridge and in parts of the central highland section.

Display Borden's Products for the Hunting Season

Many of your customers will go hunting this Fall, some of them will be old-timers, for some it will be their first experience—all of them will be interested in Borden's Milk Products. A good hunter's window display featuring the convenience and deliciousness of St. Charles Milk—the rich country milk with the cream left in, Eagle Brand condensed Milk, Reindeer Cocoa and Reindeer Coffee will catch the eye of every hunter in your locality, and most grocers know what a highly profitable business it is outfitting a hunter's kit.

Scores and scores of good grocers from coast to coast have found out that it pays to feature a window display of Borden's lines at this time of the year. A Borden hunter's window with them is a permanent fixture.

Put in one this year yourself, Mr. Merchant, we'll gladly send you attractive window displays or show cards free and assist you in making out eye-catching profitable display.

You'll find the results will well repay you for any extra trouble.

Eight years ago we created Nucoa—the original spread for bread made entirely of sweet nut oils and pure pasteurized milk. Now more than 50 million pounds are sold yearly. Nucoa sells readily to all classes of people. While its price is a moderate one, its pure wholesomeness and delicious flavor has earned it a place on the tables of rich and poor alike.

Just try Nucoa on your own table. You will find that it has more quality and nourishment than almost any other product sold as a spread for bread. It is absolutely free from animal fats.

The call for Nucoa is the steady, every-day kind —the sort of demand which grocers like. Nucoa quality brings repeat orders.

There is a splendid margin of profit on Nucoa and it will bring customers to your store from a dozen blocks around.

Recommend Nucoa to the thrifty housewife who wants to keep down her household expenses and still maintain the quality of her table. She will like it. Nucoa is equally well adapted to cooking, too.

Nucoa is always the same. That is why it is a fast and profitable turnover, why over 50 million pounds are used yearly.

If Nucoa is not already in your stock, communicate with your jobber without delay.

Quaker Talks

We Advertise FOR YOU!

The big advertising campaign for Quaker Oats now running in papers from Coast to Coast is YOUR campaign. It is intended to promote better business in YOUR town—for YOU.

We Lower the Price FOR YOU!!

Quaker Oats and Tillson's Oats at prices recently announced are showing you an increased profit per case. The advertising is producing a greater volume of sales. You benefit both ways.

We Make Selling Easy FOR YOU!!!

We provide window sheets, store cards, dummy packages and other advertising matter, so that your store can be made to stand out as a "Quaker" store. Write us for store display material. We pack Quaker Oats in Sealed Cartons Only—making them easier and more profitable for YOU to handle. We maintain the Quaker Standard of Quality in every package—thus assuring repeat orders for YOU.

Is There Any Other Way We Can Help You?

We want YOU and every other dealer in the Dominion to realize that we are more interested in getting Quaker products off your shelves than in getting them on.

We want you to write us freely —make any useful suggestions— but above all, be sure to let us know how we can be helpful.

Sunset Quality

Has Never Been Approached By Any Other Household Dye

Because: when the making of a powdered dye is finished, that is where the real manufacture of SUNSET begins. It is then that we put into each cake the "know how" of the professional dyer that makes such wonderful results, so easy to obtain with SUNSET.

It costs real money to put this quality in, and there is no margin for the bait of "free goods"—but there is the positive assurance to the dealer that he is selling in this trade the finest household dye ever manufactured in any country—bar none. Your customers know this quality and that makes SUNSET a sure repeater.

"Royal Salad Dressing is the best on the market"...

—says this aggressive Kingston, Ont., Grocer

"Royal is the best salad dressing on the market and we always recommend it although we handle other lines"—says Mr. McCrae, proprietor of the McCrae Grocery, Kingston, Ontario. The McCrae Grocery is one of Kingston's leading grocery stores and its large yearly turnover stamps it as a most progressive one.

Many thousands of the best grocers from Vancouver to Halifax share the same view about this delightful, high-grade salad dressing. They have found that it is not only the most profitable to sell but also the most satisfactory to recommend.

"Royal" Mayonnaise

is a milder dressing than Royal Salad Dressing. It is especially prepared for use as a tempting dressing for fruits, salads, etc. The excellent flavor and great economy of these two "palate ticklers" never fails to bring fast, profitable, repeat sales.

Order a good supply of these two "Royals" now and cash in on the big "social season" demand.

BETTER Brooms mean BETTER Profits

..... Our BROOMS are an absolute guarantee of both . . . . .

You can't afford to let your customers go across the road because they can't buy a good broom from you — neither can you afford to miss the extra profits that come from selling Waterloo Broom and Brush Company's "out of the ordinary" brooms. Here are just a few reasons why grocers find them so profitable — a broom expert of 40 years' experience personally superintends their manufacture — only the finest selected, clean broom corn is used throughout — they're well sewn, well shaped, full topped, short, plump and perfectly balanced.

If you could see the care we exercise in their processing you would understand why so many housewives find they outlast two ordinary brooms — why so many grocers find they outsell any others. Our price list will please you.

Skilled operators select the good Walnuts for Diamond Brand

DIAMOND Walnuts are inspected and selected Walnuts. They must measure up to a high standard of quality.

When they come into the big packing houses, they must pass on a long moving belt before the keen eyes of skillful operators who quickly throw out all the nuts that are misshapen or below standard for any reason.

Thousands of pounds of Walnuts are discarded in this one process alone each year by these inspectors.

After this careful hand sorting, the Walnuts are tested in other ways — tested by weight to assure full-meated nuts, graded for size to give you uniformity, and crack-tested to enable us to see the quality of meats that you are getting.

Diamond Walnuts are those which pass all these tests by a fair and generous margin. They are the good Walnuts from 4,000 California Groves.

Such Walnuts give satisfaction. They bring the repeat orders. They are the big profit-makers.

Order your supply of Diamond Walnuts from one of our wholesale representatives. You'll find them in every city. Be sure to stock Diamond Walnuts in hundred-pound sacks, and Diamond Shelled Walnuts in 8-ounce cans and in 3-ounce glass jars.

RETAILERS—If your wholesaler does not have Diamond Walnuts he can get them for you quickly from Sainsbury Bros., Ltd., at any of their four branches.

WHOLESALERS—Sainsbury Bros., Ltd., are the exclusive brokerage representatives in Canada for Diamond Walnuts. They will serve you promptly and efficiently from any of their four branches.

Examine Your Ladder

There are manufacturers to-day who are not getting the profits they expect out of their business. It will be found in many instances this is due to a missing rung in their business ladder. That rung is

Dealer Co-operation

Without the good-will and support of the merchant, the business ladder is imperfect. It cannot be readily scaled to the "Profit" and "Success" rungs at the top, unless the Dealer Co-operation rung is in the proper place.

The following trade newspapers, all leaders in their respective fields, offer manufacturers the most economical and effective method of securing the co-operation and sympathetic support of the dealer:

Regular KLIM customers make good grocery customers

THE more articles of ordinary daily consumption you can get people to buy in your store, the more regular day by day customers you'll have. And of course, the regular customers are the real profit producers.

That's one reason for your making KLIM one of your leaders. The more housewives you can get to use KLIM regularly, the greater your sales —not only of KLIM—but of all other grocery articles. It's worth while to display KLIM and to talk about it to every one of your customers until they become your regular KLIM customers.

At your jobbers in one-half, one, and ten-pound containers.

Testing and Tasting

Heinz Food Products are as good as skill and knowledge can make them.

In the Heinz experimental kitchen a chef dedicates his ability to the task of improving the 57 Varieties. Continuous research and experiment serve ever to advance their quality. Any new product considered for manufacture is thoroughly tried by experiment and by tasting committees. It must pass severe tests before it is considered worthy of being added to the list of Heinz Products, and not until we are sure that it is the best in its line is it put on the market.

This quality will serve you by making the 57 Varieties increasingly popular with your patrons.

INTERLAKE TOILET PAPERS

No Grocer can expect to sell merchandise, no matter how good the quality may be, by keeping it out of the range of the public eye. Not only must he have the goods, but he must show them.

It is good business, with a commodity like Toilet Paper, to sell brands known to the Public, such as "Interlake," "Old Dutch," "Blue Bird" and "White Cross." The public has confidence in Interlake Toilet Papers. Enterprising dealers appreciate this.

O-Cedar is a FURNITURE Polish

Owing to the fact that O-Cedar Polish was first introduced to the public in connection with the O-Cedar Polish Mop, many women still regard this product as exclusively a Floor Polish.

You know it is more than that.

It is first and foremost a Furniture Polish, and should be sold as such.

Our 1922 Advertising in Newspapers tells women to use O-Cedar Polish on their finest furniture—gradually the mistaken notion that O-Cedar is only a Floor Polish is being eradicated. Yet a recent investigation shows that a large proportion of housewives still ignore this important use of our product.

We Need Your Help to Set the Women Right

Bigger business will result for every merchant who will co-operate with us in telling women that O-Cedar is a FURNITURE Polish.

Whenever you sell a bottle or a can just ask the customer:

"Do you use O-Cedar on your furniture?"

If she says "No," then explain that O-Cedar Polish is primarily a Furniture Polish, although of course it is excellent for floors as well.

Retail Prices:

Dear Sirs:
Since installing our first Red Bird slicer about two years ago our bacon and cooked meat sales have steadily increased, due we believe to uniform slicing. We now use three of your machines and find the wide carriage very convenient in slicing breakfast bacon, also the clamp for cutting the ends and small pieces, in fact we have no waste as we now cut everything to the last slice.
Your Red Bird slicers have proven a great asset to our business and we desire to take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation.

Yours very truly,

WHAT HEATHIZED MEANS

TO THE PURE FOOD MERCHANT

The Canadian Public are just waking up to the wonders of Vitamines in their food. No greater source of Vitamines exists than the dairy products of the country.

Dairy products are strong in Vitamines and the HEATHIZED PROCESS PRESERVES VITAMINES. Your customers thus get their necessary Vitamine supply in super-pure, delicious HEATHIZED Ice Cream and Butter. They don't have to acquire a taste for new or strange food; they don't have to consume bottles of patent medicine.

The facts on Vitamines have been put over to the Public in a big way and the advertising opportunity to you, as a pure food merchant handling HEATHIZED Dairy Products which are richest in Vitamines cannot be overlooked.

HEATHIZED manufacturers from coast to coast are planning increased advertising effort to put across to the Public the big idea behind HEATHIZED Butter and Ice Cream.

The HEATHIZED Process used in the manufacture of Butter and Ice Cream is acknowledged to be the greatest improvement in sanitary food preparation of a decade of scientific wonders and the greatest advance since pasteurization was invented.

MALCOLM MILK PRODUCTS

There are no purer, richer or better flavored milk products in the world than Malcolm's—and more grocers each week are learning this fact to their profit. The rich creamy milk used in their preparation is obtained from regularly inspected sleek healthy cows in one of Canada's finest dairying districts. It is then analyzed, tested for butter fat, scientifically sterilized and processed in a modern sanitary factory. All Malcolm milk products have a rich creamy flavor that never fails to win fast, profitable repeat orders. Try a sample order.

G. & McC. Safes

There is a G. & McC. Safe for every size and purpose at a fair price. Each one will bring your records safely through the worst fire.

How many merchants will recover their valuable records, books and papers from that inferno of smoldering, twisted wreckage left in the wake of the northern Ontario fire fiend? Scores and scores will never find a trace of them, others will find their charred remains. Had they been stored in a Goldie & McCulloch Safe, contents would have come through intact and many serious losses prevented.

Only a safe constructed as these sturdy fire-resisting G. and McC. Safes can stand tests such as this. Clever substitutes may mean the loss of all you possess. Don't forget the fire fiend is ever threatening us. What would happen to your papers if he came tonight?

REFRIGERATORS and FREEZER COUNTER CASES

"When I first opened my store," said Mr. E. A. Kellaway, aggressive Belleville, Ont., grocer, "I tried to get along without a good refrigerator but I soon found that I was rapidly losing money through spoilage and the fact that I could not display my perishables in an inviting enough manner to produce maximum sales. I then bought a large Eureka Refrigerator and within six months it paid for itself. My Eureka not only eliminates waste and deterioration but it enables me to display my perishables in a way that invites sales and brings me a better price."

For over thirty-six years Eureka Refrigerators have been increasing sales, preventing waste and saving ice for more grocers, and provision dealers, than any other make of patent refrigerator. Their ideal sturdy construction has earned for them a nation-wide reputation for greatest ice economy and perfect refrigeration. If you have a problem in refrigeration let us know it. We'll gladly help you solve it.

Here's a sign of square dealing

All your customers know that just as they depend on a merchant's judgment for the quality of his goods, so do they trust the unfailing accuracy of Toledo Scales, which guarantee a square deal on both sides of the counter.

This is why merchants everywhere are displaying this sign of Honest Weight to tell their customers of the advantage of trading with these particular stores.

The sign gives these merchants all the benefit of the favourable public opinion which Toledo Scales and their reputation for unfailing accuracy have built up.

Ask us to tell you what this sign has done for others—and what it will do for you.

SAPON
GOLDEN CEREAL SOAP

Sapon Soap has become popular with the trade because—

It is a quick seller and returns a good margin of profit.

The reason for its popularity with the consuming public is because—

It is an absolutely pure soap which costs no more than ordinary soap. As the name implies—it is made of cereals—not a particle of animal fat enters into its manufacture.

Order a small quantity from any wholesaler. Try a cake of Sapon in your own home—you will then realize what a wonderful toilet soap Sapon really is.

Dried Fruits and Raisins

Raisins

The crop in California this year is enormous. Estimated at 250,000 tons. Prices are very much lower than last year and they should go in consumption without doubt, as there is no carry over.

Prunes

Estimate of the crop is about 200,000 tons, and very little carry over. With prices lower again, the demand should be large all over the country.

Car Oregon Prunes on the way from the coast.

MARKET ADVANCING.

Delays

With the railway strike and the coal strike, there will be shortage of cars, and buyers should avail themseves of the opportunity of placing at least a share of their orders for California dried fruits.

We have received into store:

New Santa Clara Prunes, all sizes.
Shippers: Richmond Chase & Co.

New Seedless Raisins.
New Bleached Fancy Sultanas.

Near at hand.

We have also received:

New Sicily Filberts, New Tarragona Almonds, New Shelled Valencia Almonds, New Jordan Almonds.

Alicante Fancy Shelled Almonds, 5 and 6 crowns, Pecan Nuts, Shelled Pecans, Shelled Walnuts, Brazil Nuts, Peanuts.

New Hallowee Dates, New Smyrna Table Figs, New Table Raisins.

Gentlemen,—

We have been handling your lines of fancy cakes and biscuits very extensively for the last ten years. The goods have given complete satisfaction to us and to our customers. Our sales have increased continually and now "Weston's" is the most prominent line in our biscuit case and comprises over sixty per cent. of our entire biscuit business. We think this speaks volumes for the quality of the goods as without quality it would be impossible to have continued success over a term of years, with any line.

Very sincerely yours,

Geo. H. Sherwood & Co.

Prairie Fields Give Forth Their Best

THE three Prairie Provinces of Western Canada have produced wonderful crops this year. While prices are not high enough to make this year's crop a debt-clearing one entirely, it is bound to make material progress in the right direction. It has already lent a buoyancy to trade that is appreciable. Competition is keen, yet everybody must eat so that the trade can look with a greater degree of confidence into the future than for some time past.

The Agricultural Department of the Dominion Government has estimated the yield in the western farming provinces, and this, compared with last year, follows:

MANITOBA

	1922	1921
WHEAT (bushels)	65,590,000	39,054,000
OATS (bushels)	95,498,000	49,442,500
BARLEY (bushels)	32,540,000	19,681,600
RYE (bushels)	5,838,000	3,564,700
FLAX (bushels)	768,000	544,700
Total	200,234,000	112,287,500

SASKATCHEWAN

FLAX (bushels)	194,000	171,000
Total	125,708,000	131,063,000

This gives the total wheat yield this year at 365,045,000 bushels as against 280,098,000 in 1921, and over 350,000,000 in 1915.

The value of the grain crops of the West has been estimated by one western authority at more than $400,000,000.

CANADIAN GROCER

Vol. XXXVI TORONTO, NOVEMBER 3, 1922 No. 44

Autumn 1922

A Foreword

SPREAD ACROSS the front of a store, recently, was a large cotton sign reading "Business as Usual!" There is perhaps nothing unusual or new about such a sign, as it was a phrase used quite freely a couple of years ago, but it seems the proper slogan at the present time when business has just safely emerged from a period of readjustment, a period when merchants were required to take heavy losses through the sudden dropping of markets and the liquidation of stocks.

Someone has said that "no business can stand still. It is either going back or going forward." Undoubtedly there is much truth in that adage and thus it would seem that "Business as Usual" is a wrongly placed term. Business cannot be as usual. The aggressive merchant is constantly striving to improve it, and through being eternally on the job, by salesmanship and by being constantly on the watch for new ideas in store management, selling methods, quality and new goods, usually succeeds in making business better than usual.

"It seems to me that retailers are endeavoring to do business altogether too much on the price basis," said a manufacturer. "The public want quality just as much to-day as ever, and they are quite ready and willing to pay for it." This manufacturer in making this statement, no doubt, could substantiate the remark by specific cases. But the retail merchant would probably argue that he was forced into it by keen competition and the fact that distressed stocks could be purchased at a figure below the market price and consequently gave him a loop hole to talk price, selling on that basis instead of on the merits of the goods.

But the fact of the matter is, the consuming public does not now and never will make price and cheapness the ruling factor. The palate of the factory hand and the day laborer is quite as sensitive to taste as the palate of the most fastidious, and therefore self-gratification, the dominant element in human nature, is always insistent that quality takes preference to price. The retail grocer who ignores it is unwise. Even the poorest consumer seeks pleasure in eating.

The story of the old darky who went into a store and asked the clerk if they had any canned pears is recalled. The clerk replied that they had, and the price was 10, 12 and 17 cents a can. "Wall, give me the best," said the darky. "I'd rather have one can of the best once in a while than have a can of poor pears every day in the week."

For thirty-six years, Canadian Grocer has endeavored to impress that point upon the retail merchant. Stories of merchants have appeared from time to time, telling how they have built up a lasting business with profit to themselves by selling quality merchandise. Long established businesses have always kept in mind that "quality is remembered long after the price is forgotten." Business has grown year after year while many of their competitors who tried to build a business on "price and cheapness" are gone and forgotten.

With much of the uphill work and business difficulties with which the retail merchant has been passing through now fading in the background, and with market conditions working in co-operation with the law of supply and demand and a clearer sky for a prosperous future, let all of us endeavor to make "Business Better than Usual" the slogan for the coming season.

Why Women Leave Their Grocers

By HOLLAND COX, Ottawa, Ont.

"I DON'T know what's the matter with that grocer," Mrs. Anderson said worriedly. "He promised to have that order up sharp at two and it's half past now. If he doesn't get here in time I'll have to serve the ice cream without those nice little cakes—it's awfully annoying."

And she had to serve it without those little cakes later, because that order didn't turn up until nearly five.

She explained all about the grocer's defection and then and there her bridge party held an "experience meeting" and what they said about some of the grocers of their acquaintance was cruel. Sitting in a small den off the big room, unknown to the ladies, it was interesting to hear their views.

Oh, He's Never On Time

"Just like him," a fat woman commented solidly. "Branks, you mean? Oh, he's never on time. Why, for years that man kept promising me orders for certain times, and if he ever failed to be late when it was important that he be early, I don't remember it. I simply had to leave him at last. It was like this: My mother-in-law was coming north on a visit, and she wanted some of that 'wonderful Canadian lamb' she had heard Bill talk so much about. Well, I naturally wanted to please Bill's mother—she's wealthy in her own right and none too strong—so I ordered that lamb and laid special emphasis on the mint and green peas. Branks used to keep a sort of meat-grocery combination, and the lamb came up on the morning delivery. The boy said he'd be back at four with the other things from the grocery side. At five he wasn't there, and at half past five when he didn't come I sent down to find out what was wrong, and would you believe it? That wretch had forgotten all about the second order and was entirely sold out of the things I needed. It spoiled the dinner of course, and I just paid my bill and haven't looked that side of the street since. I'm dealing with a grocer now who is a fiend to forget things, but he's so obliging that I can't be nasty to him. He's always sending a follow-up order of some little thing or other he forgot to include in the original. It's very wearing on the nerves." She nibbled a salted almond pensively, and a little, chubby bride took up the narrative.

Meat of a Sort, With His Cereal

"Well, I began with Jimpson's after we were married, because he deals with my husband and of course we wanted to return the courtesy. But what I've put up with on account of it! You know, Stanley likes his morning cereal and the steam-cooked kind in packages won't do, because he was brought up in the Scotch way; and I never saw a plate of real 'porridge' until I came to live across the line. Well, it was weeks and weeks before I found that the rolled oats and cracked wheat I was cooking for him were full of moths and I'd been feeding the poor dear on meat, of a sort, with his cereal. I saw the queer little fuzzy stuff at the top of the meal tin, but I didn't know what it was until a neighbor told me. I never dared tell Stanley, but I left that Jimpson store right away. His stock is old and shopworn anyhow, and I like fresh goods."

The others laughed at her ignorance.

"That man Branks has more than one fault," said another. "When I pay the price for fresh eggs, for instance, I want fresh eggs, and that means less than a week old. Well, time after time he would send me some that were stale, and when I'd send them back he'd declare that they were fresh, and his manner insinuated that I was a fussy old lady who didn't know a fresh egg if she saw it. So one day I just marched down to his store with a rank egg I had broken into a bowl when I was making a cake, and advised him to have it poached for his breakfast as it was 'strictly fresh' and from his own store. And then he had the nerve to tell me that it had never come out of his establishment. That broke up our friendship right then and there. I left him and went to Jenkins and so far I haven't had much to complain of, really, though he will insist on sending me cheese with skippers in it. He isn't progressive. He keeps his cheese on the counter instead of under glass, and his place is untidy, but he is an obliging man and isn't trying to make a fortune in a couple of years."

"I just marched down to his store with a rank egg I had broken into a bowl and advised him to poach it for breakfast."

Try Snow For Awhile—He's a Robber

"You should deal with Snow for a while, then—he's a robber. Why, my dear, I stood that man for one month and then found my pocketbook was so flat I couldn't find a dime to put in the collection plate next Sunday," another woman, richly dressed, took up the tale.

"I didn't know he was so expensive," the lady with the determined chin exclaimed.

"My dear—he's a pirate, that what he is. I don't know whether he thinks I'm an easy mark or not, but someone told me to try dealing with him when I first arrived in this town and, of course, his place is clean and the stock is nice, and all that. But I found that I was paying from two to three cents more a package for goods in cartons, and from five to ten cents a pound more for butter and lots of other things than I could have got the very same things for elsewhere. It is true he has a nice establishment, but I don't feel like paying more for cleanliness and courtesy there than elsewhere—and so I just left him and went over to Smith-Harrison, and I must say I've had nothing much to complain of there. Of course, they are usually too busy to attend to me when I go in, but I just wait my turn and it comes in time."

Politeness vs. Honesty and Cleanliness

"Well, you won't catch me putting a foot inside that firm's doors," a nervous little matron exclaimed. "Smith-Harrison! Why, they're the rudest people in town. I nearly always have to do my ordering by phone because of my baby, and it's hard to get down to the shops early. But Smith-Harrison are dreadfully rude. I used to telephone and wait, and wait, and by and by, after central has rung the bell nearly off some clerk would lift the receiver and snap out—'Well! what is it?' So uncouth! I didn't like being spoken to that way, so I just left them and am dealing with Jimpson. Politeness is just as necessary as honesty and cleanliness, I think."

Adulterates the Maple Syrup

"Well, I left Jimpson's," another woman pursued the theme, "because he adulterated some maple syrup—I know he did. I was brought up where it is made and I know good syrup if anyone does. And he swore that he had some of the very best on the market, and even named the people who made it. So I knew it ought to be all right, because I know the people who put it up, and when the can came to me it was adulterated, miserable stuff. I hadn't the nerve to tell him I knew what he had done, because it's a hard thing to prove, but I left him and went to Brank's."

"Oh, they're all robbers," the lady with the chin remarked indifferently. "If it isn't in one line, it is in another." She finished her ice cream and reached for the candy.

"Yes, indeed," the fat lady remarked heartily, "And the way they pack all the big apples on top of their baskets and hide the little ones underneath—scandalous! And the same with eggs—I always do seem to get the undersized ones, somehow. I suppose if I were to go and pick them out for myself I'd sometimes get fair treatment, but I'm always so busy."

"Yes, bridging and such," whispered the bride in a sly aside to the matron.

Here the hostess' aunt, a dear little old lady with silvery hair and a motherly face, had her say.

"My dears, do you know, while I sympathize with you all in your troubles and have experienced a good many of the same kind myself, I have come to the conclusion that it is a case of fifty-fifty, as the boys say, between you and the merchants—of all sorts, not grocers only. Let me see: You have scored them for dirt, forgetfulness, dishonesty, rudeness, lateness, substitution, adulteration, overcharging, careless handling, being kept waiting—and dear knows what else. In the first place, how many of you who have had faults to find with your treatment have gone personally to the men at the head of things and made your complaint direct? Most of you, by your own admission, have just 'left him and gone elsewhere.' If an employee is rude, ten chances to one the owner hasn't an inkling of the fact, and would be extremely obliged to you for the truth. And so many of us leave our orders until late afternoon and then suddenly phone down and ask for delivery of some little thing—why sending it alone more than takes the profit off. We don't go about this business right.

"I used to telephone and wait and wait and then some clerk would snap out, 'Well, what is it.' "

"Grocers are like other members of society—a hard-working class of men who are in their business for profit as well as health, and they need co-operation on the part of their customers. Do they get it? Not much they don't. Nothing but slams and knocks as a rule. We order things sent which we could just as well carry. We run bills when it would be quite as easy to pay cash. We leave our orders until late instead of going early and making personal choice of things. It is human nature for grocers to pawn off stale vegetables and such on people who don't show a greater care of their own families and purses than to send blind orders and expect the merchant to do better for them than they do for themselves. My dears, don't expect perfection in the groceryman until you find it in yourselves. The ideal customer will produce the ideal tradesman. I have finished."

And so had the others. They rose thoughtfully and wended their several ways homeward.

A Selling Window With a Purpose

THE accompanying picture shows a fruit window recently dressed by F. J. Payette's staff at 385 Bleury St., Montreal. The window was not dressed as a mere attraction, but as a selling force that would turn over the big supply of fruit that was coming to the market during that particular week. Yet the window, while attaining its purpose, is attractive from the standpoint of arrangement and colors. Price tickets on every line link up the attraction with the sale and so the effort to get an artistic arrangement of the fruit is repaid in increased sales.

An attractive display of fruits recently shown in the window of F. J. Payette, grocer on Bleury Street, Montreal.

This window was dressed particularly to attract the passing trade since the store is located at the transfer point of two of the busiest street car lines in the city and in that this grocer saw possibilities. He figured that this trade was not the one that bought large baskets of fruit for preserving, but one that demanded or at least was a prospect for small quantities for table use or for a mid-day treat in the office or on the street. Consequently all the fruit displayed was put up in small baskets that would attract such a trade. The fact of the matter was that this grocer was seeking to compete with the foreign fruit merchant right across the street who generally caters to just such a demand.

So it is that a window, to be a real monetary success, must have a definite purpose. It must be planned carefully before it is laid out and it must be dressed to appeal to the very class to which the merchant wishes to sell.

This photograph also illustrates how some grocers are using their windows as sign boards without shutting off any of the light from their stores. In this city the practice is a common one and the printing is showing a marked improvement through practice. Water paints are used for this purpose, which are easily erased. Many colors are popular but chiefly red, blue, yellow and white, which are used in combinations.

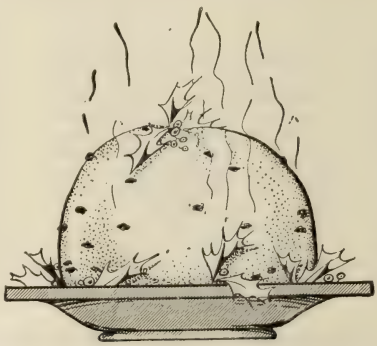
No Time Like Christmas For Increased Sales

Festive Season Now Approaching Presents Unrivalled Opportunity—John M. Boyle, St. Catharines, Ont., Starts Early to Boost Sale of Christmas Lines

"IT IS surprising how goods shown on the counter sell," John M. Boyle, grocer on St. Paul Street, St. Catharines, Ont., told a representative of Canadian Grocer the other day. Mr. Boyle has had the most convincing evidence of the value of display as a means of stimulating sales. Whether it be through the windows or on the counters, the results, he states, have always been very gratifying. Because he has such confidence in the selling value of counter displays, this merchant is shortly having placed on a part of his counter sectional glass-enclosed display cases for showing bulk lines. This new arrangement will be ready for use in a week or so, and Mr. Boyle contemplates displaying his Christmas lines in this way. He is convinced that such facilities for showing the Christmas lines like raisins, currants and the ingredients for the early Christmas baking, will do a great deal to increase turnover in these commodities.

What the Windows Do

"Of course we will use our windows for this purpose too, and will begin shortly to have a window of Christmas goods," he stated. "Window displays are a great help, and I believe that if a grocer changes his windows frequently he will find that he will maintain interest in his store that will be well worth while. But it is always essential to have price tickets in a window, I think, if the best results are to be obtained.



"We have had good results from our window displays. Recently we sold six dozen brooms in four days, by putting them in the window with a price on them. Another time we received a shipment of ten cases of a certain kind of canned fish, and in less than a month it was all gone. During the entire period we kept a pile of these tins on the counter, replenishing it as it was necessary, until the entire consignment was disposed of. Just the other day we received an order of thirty-five cases of jam. We had not previously stocked this particular kind, but I was convinced that it was hard to surpass it from the standpoint of quality. I arranged it near the front of the store on the shelves. It made a very attractive showing and excited comment. Sales already have been such that I feel it is going to sell well, and I intend to push it this fall and winter."

Displaying Fruits and Vegetables

While on the subject of display, another feature in the Boyle store in this connection should not be overlooked. On entering the store, immediately on one's left, there are two rows of fruit and vegetable bins that Mr. Boyle declares are worth a great deal on account of the business they create. Mr. Boyle had them specially built in this location, and from the time of their first use sales of these lines have shown steady increase. We always have oranges displayed in them in the winter months, and we sell a lot of them. "Right through the winter months we sell green stuff, that is, fresh lettuce, hot-house tomatoes, and such other vegetables and fruits as are available. At the week-ends our turnover in these things is on a substantial scale representing, as they do, a quick sale and a very good profit."

Discussing the selling of Christmas specialties with Mr. Boyle, he told the representative of Canadian Grocer that he started early in November to boost the sale of those groceries that constitute the necessities for the early Christmas cooking. In the two weeks preceding this festival, however, there are a number of high-class delicacies that have a special appeal at this season. "We intend to push the sale of that chocolate," Mr. Boyle remarked as he pointed to a certain make of high-grade chocolate that was displayed in a silent salesman near the door. "It is only recently that we have been able to get a supply of it. We did not have a stock of it last Christmas, but we are anticipating a big turnover this year. We think it is one of the finest chocolates on the market, and we intend to put every effort behind it in order to increase the sale of it.

"In the weeks preceding Christmas last year we sold ten dozen Christmas stockings and between four and five dozen Christmas crackers. These are good sellers for the holiday trade, and we think we should sell even greater amounts this year."

Quality First—Price Second

Mr. Boyle believes that if a grocer is going to make a success of his business he must pay strict attention to the maintenance of a high standard of quality in the goods that he is handling. Much depends on this fact. "The average person wants the best," he stated, "and I believe people are willing to pay for quality every time. I don't care whether the other fellow is selling for less than I am or not, but I do insist on buying the best, and expecting in return a fair, legitimate profit on the same. Quality must be first and price second."

This merchant aims to turn his stock once in every six weeks. Lines that are not selling quickly he aims to clean out through special selling effort being put behind them. No goods must be permitted to lie on the shelves for any length of time. This store is

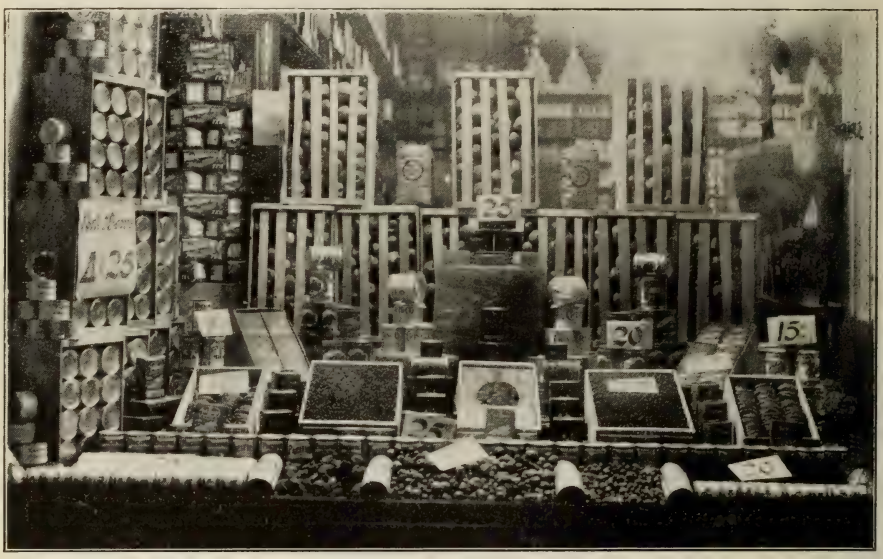
Christmas Displays That Sell Goods

Here Are Two Windows That Increased Turnover in Holiday Lines in a Gratifying Way—Artistically Arranged and Possessing a Strong Selling Argument

THE top illustration is a reproduction of the window display put in by Harold Crone for McBride's Pure Food Store, Moose Jaw, Sask., during last Christmas season. This window is simply but tastefully arranged. The goods on display are seasonable ones which with the decorations, give the window a Christmas atmosphere. The show cards are well executed and add much to the value of the display. The firm stated that the window made hundreds of extra sales and well repaid them for the time taken to put it in.



The lower picture is a cut of a Christmas window display trimmed by W. J. McCully, Stratford, Ont. Here again is a good type of a selling display. In the center of the display can be seen candies and nuts. On one end are shown raisins, currants, peels and other things that go into the making of the Christmas cake and pudding, while the other end of the window is devoted to fancy lines such as oranges, nuts, table raisins, etc.

Here and there throughout the display are ferns and baskets of fresh fruit. The background is a trellis arrangement upon which are hung Santa Claus stockings.

"Good Things to Eat and Lots of 'Em"

"That Grocer Will Get More Business Who Displays His Wares Best, Who Keeps His Store Neatest and Cleanest, and Who Studies the Needs of His Customers and Supplies Them"

A good type of window display showing general groceries dressed by John Paterson, Vancouver, B. C. This window is a forerunner to the Christmas season. In the foreground are shown raisins, currants, peels and nuts, thus advising customers that the season is not yet too early to commence making mince meat, Christmas cake and pudding.

SPEAKING of the subject of window dressing, John Paterson, 3150 Main Street, Vancouver, said: "Price-cutters may come, and price-cutters may go. Times may be easy or hard. The experienced grocer has seen business go through all the phases of these cycles, and finds that whatever the condition of the times, he will be well repaid for his constant attention to the principle of good merchandising year in and year out.

"Whether the public is eagerly spending or purchasing sparingly, that grocer will get more business who displays his wares best, who keeps his store neatest and cleanest, and who studies the needs of his customers and supplies them."

Judging from Mr. Paterson's windows, week after week, one of the primary requisites of a good grocery window is that it shall look like a grocery window. Mr. Paterson's windows are distinctively food windows.

The windows are almost always dressed with "things to eat." Apples in boxes, dried fruits, peel, cereals, canned goods, etc. The windows always suggest abundance. The displays are well planned and executed, but they do not go in for anything in the way of freak effects. The story the windows seem to tell week after week is "Good things to eat, and LOTS OF 'EM."

Unique Display of Yuletide Specials

All the Goods Shown in This Window Have a Particular Appeal During the Christmas Buying Period—Was Dressed by Thos. M. Bone, for the Hudson Bay Co., Vernon, B.C.

THE above illustration is a splendid example of what can be done in the way of a window display during the Yuletide Season. All the goods shown are what might be classed as Christmas lines, which especially appeal to customers during that season. This window, although having the appearance of being full, is not crowded by any means. Every article stands out distinctly. A neat price ticket is attached to each article, thus enabling passersby to know the price without the bother of asking.

The decorations are simple and do not detract the eye from the goods on display. But, nevertheless, there is sufficient to give the window a Christmas appearance.

The window was dressed by Thomas M. Bone for the Hudson Bay Co., Vernon, B.C., and from a sales point of view proved to be one of the best this firm ever put in.

Keeps a Stock Diary and Finds it Pays

Story of a Jeweler Who Enters the Grocery Trade, Whose Inexperience Makes Him More Careful and Diligent to Know His Goods—A Grocer Should be Thoroughly Conversant With Lines He Handles

By Special Correspondent Canadian Grocer

VANCOUVER.—It is entirely natural that we become careless after we consider ourselves to have become proficient. The auto driver is most careful when he feels his inexperience most.

This was borne out in a recent conversation with a jeweller in Vancouver who has recently bought a grocery business.

It is an old story that almost every tradesman and farm hand imagines he can successfully conduct a grocery business. In this case, however, the writer encountered a gentleman who claimed that to successfully conduct a grocery business required more ability, and more careful attention than any business of which he had any knowledge.

For that reason—knowing his unfamiliarity with the food trade—this jeweller was taking more pains, and giving more study to the various articles that go to make a grocery stock than many who have been in the grocery game many years. With each purchase of goods from the wholesaler's traveller he was extracting from that salesman all the information he could about the lines. He could tell a vast amount of information about the lines he was selling. It had all been new to him. It has become commonplace and even forgotten by many grocers of longer standing.

Keeping "Tab" on His Stock

This jeweller knew which of his package cereals was cooked or processed in some way, and which was raw. Which had been sterilized and which would likely harbor insect life after a certain time—and he had paid special attention to the length of time. He has tabulated his purchases of perishable package goods, and automatically, as the leaves in his diary are turned each day, a note will draw to his attention the fact that a certain purchase of this line or that, if not entirely disposed of, will bear attention—probably should be moved at once.

One other grocer in speaking on the subject of trade knowledge once known and since forgotten said, "I find that to discourse on the facts of interest and importance on various lines to the newer employees, freshens up my own information on those subjects and keeps me 'brushed up' in my own chosen business."

In speaking on the subject of knowledge some time ago for Canadian Grocer, R. H. Meek, chief food inspector for the City of Vancouver, said:

"In my estimation a grocer should know considerable about the lines he is handling. He should know how long any line of foodstuffs he carries will keep in perfectly wholesome condition. Those grocers with small stocks and slow turnovers who figure so prominently at all times in the Bankruptcy Court are almost always responsible for launching onto the market, stocks of stale and deteriorated foods. This ignorance of their lines is probably a contributing factor in their failure and it certainly works a hardship on the consuming public whose representative I am. A higher grade of retailers, and a higher standard of retailing efficiency would obviate much of this."

This jeweller on Main Street, Vancouver, bids fair to be a good grocer.

"Those are trees," was the answer.

"Where are they going?" she asked.

A Display That is Appropriate At This Season and is Valuable from a Selling Standpoint

Linking Advertising With Good Displays Gets Best Results

A. A. Black, Grocer in Fort William, Ont., Has Excellent Facilities for Showing Goods, But Makes a Point of Featuring Goods on Display in Talks in Advertising Space in Daily Papers—Does Not Pay to Keep One Line in the Windows Too Long

"WINDOW displays, if they are always looked after properly, are great assets," A. A. Black, grocer in Fort William, Ont., recently told a representative of Canadian Grocer. "It is wonderful the goods that we sell as a result of our windows. We use them all the time to show goods and in an effort to increase the turnover, the lines shown, I usually advertise them, and talk them up to customers either at the counter or on the telephone. Our situation, on Main Street, is ideal, to get best results from showing goods in the windows. I have a very wide frontage and three large windows. One is used exclusively for showing fruits and vegetables, from early spring until late in the fall, and it is practically one man's work all season to see to it that we always have attractive fruit displays, both in the fruit window as well as inside. The second window I keep for showing fancy goods in glass and packages. It is always changed at least once a week and sometimes oftener. I find it does not pay to have a line of goods in the window more than a week, as goods on display for a longer period lose their selling value. The third one is utilized for showing breakfast foods, chiefly, and at regular intervals it is dressed with the various products of this kind.

Several silent salesmen for the display of goods, are a feature of the equipment of the store of A. A. Black, grocer in Fort William, Ont. Splendid results are obtained from displays by this merchant.

A Good Display Invaluable

"The value of window displays to a grocer cannot be overestimated, and the merchant who is not paying a good deal of attention to this feature is losing a really worth while opportunity to boost his turnover. People will always stop and look at a good display whether it be groceries or other merchandise. The thing is to arrest their attention and having done this through the medium of a beautiful and striking display, their interest is soon aroused, and they go into the store with a view to buying something that particularly appealed to them in the display. Cultivating customers of this kind is good business, and the attention and service extended on the occasion of the first visit brings them back again, often resulting in them becoming permanent customers."

Advertising a Real Investment

Linking advertising in the daily papers with good window displays is a plan that is followed with success in Mr. Black's store. He uses regular space in the Fort William papers, and looks upon such as a real investment. "If advertising is maintained with some system of regularity, the returns are good, but if it is done only spasmodically, and without any aim to present a real selling talk, it is practically useless," Mr. Black declares. "If you are using the same space and position consistently, and talk to your public in a way that is going to interest them, I believe the results that will come to you in the way of new and increased business will more than repay you for the financial outlay that the advertising space represents. I find that the money I spend in advertising is spent to advantage, and together with window displays increases my turnover."

The Christmas Opportunity

In the way of selling high-class specialties and new goods that come on the market, this merchant has found that in these commodities there are profits that should not be passed up. The approaching Christmas season offers a splendid opportunity to cultivate this business. "I start to advertise goods for the Christmas baking very early, and it is surprising the quantity of goods that I sell," Mr. Black stated. "Every year I follow this plan of an early start at the Christmas baking. It gets the people interested, and extends the buying period for these lines. Such goods as glace cherries, pineapple rings, crystallized and preserved ginger, etc., are big selling specialties in this store, and representing as they do, a good profit, they are well worth handling."

Mr. Black conducts business almost altogether on a credit basis and considers it the better method. "Of course I sell a lot of goods for cash too, and we have customers who pay cash all the time, but who come because they like the service my store gives," Mr. Black remarked in discussing this subject. "I believe in treating all customers as friends, and in taking a thorough interest in them, and advising and aiding them in their purchases, I find they appreciate it. A great many orders are given over the telephone, and for this purpose two telephones are busy all the time.

The Motor Delivery Service

"I have a motor delivery, and service of delivery is planned for certain hours. Customers are acquainted with this fact and plan their orders accordingly. Seventy-five per cent. of our trade is credit, but I must say that I have had very little loss as a result. I never take on a new account, without knowing them personally, or without them coming recommended to me. Our terms are two weeks and I consider this good for business.

"I sell only the best goods that can be bought. We have aimed to create a reputation for quality, and believe that such a reputation has been one of the chief factors in bringing our business up to its present satisfactory volume."

Nothing Long Drawn-out.

"Did you interview the eminent statesman?"

"Yes."

"What did he have to say?"

"Nothing."

"I know that. But how many columns of it?"

"Responsibility for Profits Rests Upon Grocery Clerks"

Jos. Savard, Quebec City, Says That a High Standard of Efficiency Must be Demanded From Grocery Salesmen—Success of Business Requires Co-Operation of Proprietor and Staff

"THE grocery trade requires more and better salesmen, men who go into the business with the idea of making it a study and not merely a job," said Joseph Savard, a Quebec grocer who is president of the Retail Merchants' Association in that city to a Canadian Grocer representative. "We need men who intend to fit themselves to own their own grocery business some day and who will take a real interest in the work.

Grocery Business Requires Study

"The grocery business is not easy. It requires energy, forethought, initiative and business ability. The time has come when the grocer must go after his trade, and the secret of success is turnover. To get this, the grocer must be versed in modern business methods. His stock is so varied and of such a nature that it requires careful buying and rapid sales. Besides this he should have a keen insight into the condition of his own business. No retail trade requires more of a man than does the grocery business and so, if a man does not learn it from the ground up, he is likely to find his lesson very costly later on. Therefore I say we need more clerks in our grocery stores who are there to make the business a study.

"The grocery trade is to-day confronted with a real problem. We are in need of men who co-operate with the grocers and go behind the counters to take a keen interest in the business. The grocery clerks should realize that they are a real part of the business and that without their aid the firm cannot be a success. On them rests as full a share of the responsibility of showing a profit as on the proprietor who does the buying. What advantage is it to a grocer to take great care and trouble in his buying if when the goods are put on sale, through carelessness, the margin is lost. For example if a merchant should buy one hundred pounds of tea and by good buying get it two cents below the market price, if the clerks in parceling it up only lose one ounce per pound either in the weighing or in the handling all the margin the proprietor gained and more is lost.

Small Items Mount Up

"It seems a trivial matter but it mounts up quickly. There are more small items that will easily show a leakage in profits than could be mentioned in a whole page of writing. Yet in a day they total to an appreciable amount. All these things the grocery clerks should learn to watch if some day they hope to own their own stores. The margins are now so small that the most insignificant leakage makes the difference between profit and loss. I say that more co-operation between the proprietor of the business and his clerks is necessary. The clerk will take an interest in the small items when he is shown his responsibility.

Confer With Clerks

"This co-operation may be obtained by taking the clerks into confidence in the operating of the store. If the grocer will discuss the buying with the clerks and let them know just what the goods cost and what the margin of profit is the salesmen will take more interest in economy and system. As it is all too many clerks are behind the counters merely to wait on customers and there their interest ceases. In wholesale houses the salesmen are called into conference with the manager once a week and business problems are discussed. Such a plan can well be adopted in the retail business where detail is of the utmost importance.

Paving the Way For the Future

"The story of my own experience may illustrate a point here. At the age of twelve I started in the grocery business with A. Grenier in Quebec. I had from first a desire to go into business for myself but I had not the money and as far as I could see there was little hope of getting it. My parents were poor and I was getting only a small salary. Yet the business attracted me. I kept a record of the different prices so that I knew fairly well how the trend ran through the year. For twelve years I worked as a clerk and then one day I told a grocery traveller that I wanted to start a store of my own but that I had no money. He told me that he thought he could get credit for me, as he was willing to vouch for the account himself. At first it seemed impossible but later I got a letter from another wholesale house telling me that they heard that I was thinking of going into business for myself and that they were willing to give me credit. The way now seemed easier and I took the jump. I have now been in my own business for twenty-eight years and I thoroughly enjoy it, although it has been hard from the start to

"Improvement in Grocery Trade Demands More Business-Like Methods"

"THE RETAIL trade in Quebec, as well as the retail trade in general shows improvement," said J. Savard, president of the Retail Merchants' Association of Quebec City to a Canadian representative. "We feel that the worst is over. The trade has just passed through two of the most trying years in its history. None of the merchants of long experience have ever known such depressing conditions and so many varied problems both in buying and in selling. The sudden change in market conditions has necessitated the retail merchant to take a loss besides finding a general reduction in sales on account of labor conditions. It has necessitated careful buying on a small scale and aggressive selling methods.

"It has had a good feature however. It has brought together the retail merchants with a better understanding of each other's problems and more co-operation. They have benefited by the exchange of ideas and the discussion of matters common to the retail trade. It is to be hoped that what has been learned during the past two years will not be quickly forgotten.

"While conditions have been bad, expenses have remained heavy. Salaries are high and must, it seems, remain so. To reduce a clerk's salary at this time would be to destroy his interest in the business and make him dissatisfied. The remedy is to get more out of the clerks than in the past. Organization and co-operation will offset the high salaries and make the whole staff more efficient. With the signs of improvement come new opportunities for the retail grocer and more aggressive business methods must be adopted to get the most out of what the future holds."

finish. My ability to get credit lay in the fact that in the years I served behind the counter I took an interest in the business and showed the travellers that I understood the operation of a grocery store. I had made it a study.

The Need of To-Day

"That is what we need to-day. Clerks who will make the business a study and lend their hearty co-operation to their employers. We also need grocers who will make the effort to give their clerks an insight into their business and solicit their interest."

A Silent Salesman That Sells

This merchant has a silent salesman on his staff that sells day in and day out without salary and little or no cost. This silent salesman stands on the steps of the store and offers for sale, poultry, butter, cheese, eggs, vegetables and fruits. Sometimes specialty lines and candies are a feature.

This salesman is a showcase with two glass sides and two glass shelves. Each morning it is dressed with those lines which Mr. Savard wishes to feature for the day. The lines depend largely upon the weather. However he is never perplexed as to what to feature. There are always a number of lines that lend themselves to such a display.

Mr. Savard told a Canadian Grocer representative that this showcase showed definite results. For some reason it stands out far more strikingly than the window. Perhaps because it is unusual. On one end of the case is a mirror that completely covers the side and so makes the case look larger and improves the appearance of the display. The case is no novelty for Savard's Grocery. It has been there for a number of years and the staff take just as much pains in dressing it now as they did at first because they can daily see real results for their work. It is a real attraction and a real salesman.

A silent salesman that really sells goods—Various lines of grocery commodities are shown in this outside display case in the store of J. Savard in Quebec City.

This Store Staff Has Daily Conferences With The Manager

Daily conferences between the store manager or proprietor and the clerks have been inaugurated in a Western Ontario grocery for the purpose of securing facts on any complaints or suggestions before they grow "cold" and are overlooked or forgotten.

These conferences are held each evening just before closing time; salespeople and other members of the store's personnel attend the conference.

This policy has resulted in the correction of many minor matters, which individually, perhaps, were of little importance, but as a whole tended to make the service defective to a certain degree, or which might have brought about a certain feeling of ill-will on the part of some of the employees if allowed to continue.

Matters relating in any way to the store's treatment of customers or employees, suggestions tending to improve the work or increase sales, are welcomed at the meeting. Provision has been made by the management to reward those offering major suggestions, and evidence of foresight, ability and ingenuity on the part of the employees, brought out at these conferences indirectly, is applied when promotions are in order.

NO TIME LIKE CHRISTMAS

a service store, but Mr. Boyle has not found the competition of cash and carry organizations particularly baffling. He believes that to get business the merchant must go after it, and adopt such legitimate selling methods as are going to develop it. The service of both credit and delivery is given, and nearby suburbs are canvassed each week for business. Losses as a result of giving credit are not large, according to Mr. Boyle, and he has found that while during the period of depression a number of people hard pressed and out of work overrun their accounts, by the adoption of patient reasonable co-operation he believes that he will be successful in collecting all outstanding accounts.

Equipment of a type that facilitates service is not lacking in the Boyle store. He has an electric coffee mill, located on the end of the counter, and Mr. Boyle finds that his coffee turnover is increasing rapidly. He declares that he is building a reputation for coffee that is going to mean much for the future success of his store. A meat slicer, computing scales, conveniently situated, silent salesmen, are part of the equipment that make for an excellent service to the patrons of this store.

At a certain coal mine down in New Mexico the superintendent was greatly annoyed from time to time by employees moving into and out of the company's houses without due notification of their frequent changes of domicile. It became quite impossible to keep the rent accounts straight on the office books, and finally the superintendent, in his exasperation, resolved upon stringent measures. He therefore posted the following notice:

"Costs More to Wrap the Cash Order"

This Grocer Finds That the Elimination of Delivery Only Means Heavier and More Costly Wrapping—Merchant Who Has Tried Both Plans Makes Some Interesting Comparisons

By British Columbia Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

NANAIMO, B. C.—In contrast to many merchants who claim that the cash business permits of lower prices to the public by reason of less expensive method of distributing, Mr. Malpas, of Malpas and Wilson, Nanaimo, Vancouver Island, B. C., does not altogether agree. At one time Mr. Malpas was operating four stores in Nanaimo, two on a credit basis and two on a cash system. At present three are being conducted on the credit basis. One of the stores that was being conducted on the cash plan was the Malpas and Wilson Groceteria, which has since been converted to the regular service grocery type. "In our groceteria experience I made a careful study of every factor and my findings were such as to decide us to change to the service plan," stated Mr. Malpas.

Average Sale in Self Serve 60c

"For instance I found that the average size of each sale in the self-serve, non-delivery, cash-over-the-counter store was 60c. In order to insure that a customer got her purchases home intact without tloss, it was necessary to provide an extra heavy paper bag. At that time, 18 months ago, those bags cost just around 1½ cents apiece. Figuring that at least one went out with the average sized order, and it probably ran along higher than that, it cost just 2½% to wrap the average order amounting to 60c, probably more to wrap the order that amounted to less, and perhaps slightly less to wrap the larger order, but the cost per average order was 2½%.

Delivery Costs 2¼ Per Cent.

"Now I have found by keeping accurate records at all our stores that delivery costs from 2 to 2¼%. In other words, in the self serve department, the fact that the customer has to carry her own parcel home necessitates an extra expense that would have been sufficient to deliver it for her. In regard to delivery, I have found that horses are economical for deliveries within a five-mile radius. I mean, of course, route deliveries in which the driver may make 30 to 40 deliveries on the one trip. In such trips the distance or the speed is not the factor, it is the actual time taken carrying orders into the residences and walking back to the truck that consumes the time. On a delivery in which there was a long, non-stop run, the motor truck would save time, and time is money. We use three trucks, for the more remote deliveries.

"I have also found," said this merchant, "that the sales per clerk are so much decreased in the cash business that the cost of selling is increased." In the Malpas and Wilson stores it was found that the sales per clerk were only 75 per cent. of the volume of sales per clerk in the service stores. The cost of selling was found to be 5% less in the service stores. Yet the losses through bad debts in the credit stores were one seventh of 1%. Mr. Malpas is convinced that if all stores adopted the cash basis, the cost of living would go up 5%, instead of down as many claim.

The whole town of Nanaimo is canvassed twice a week by personal solicitation at the door. For this work Mr. Malpas says it is necessary to pick the best material in your staff. Six are employed in this work in connection with the three stores. They are the contact men. They are the store as far as many customers are concerned and on their knowledge, tact and courtesy depends in no small measure the profitable volume of business done by the stores. The orders taken by these solicitors on Monday morning are delivered in the Monday afternoon delivery. Those orders taken on the Monday afternoon are sent out Tuesday morning, etc.

"This solicitation method of collecting orders permits of more economical delivery. The salesman knows that it is necessary to get the orders in by 11.45 to get the first afternoon delivery. He so arranges. If left to the householder, she would likely phone in at 1 o'clock and stress the importance of getting her orders SURE on the first afternoon delivery.

"This would not be economical but we would see that she was not disappointed. A solicitor however, gets all this business. We get orders on time by this arrangement, and the consequence is that all our waggons always go out loaded. This is a most important point in keeping down delivery costs."

During the last few months, while prices have been declining it has been the store policy to buy new goods regularly to lower the average cost of high priced goods in stock, and in this way sales have been maintained at prices that have shown some small profit on the "bunched costs" of those items showing the most marked reductions in price. This merchant stresses the advantage of keeping detailed records of every point in connection with the operation of the store of which figures may be had. With figures available, comparison and analysis are possible—and usually very helpful.

Eliminating the Ice Bill in the Winter Months

W. G. Meekison, grocer, Strathroy, Ont., has hit upon a novel way to eliminate his ice bill in the winter time. The glass front refrigerator is now set at the front of the store that the passer-by can see, at the same time as looking in the window, what is in the refrigerator. This is, of course, through the glass front on the latter. After setting this up in this way, Mr. Meekison had a hole bored in the floor of the refrigerator and to this connected a pipe which was run under the floor of the window to a second hole which had been made in the front of the store immediately below the window sill. This hole on the outside allowed the cold air to circulate through the pipe into the refrigerator and constantly keeps the goods inside in proper condition. This worked so well that on one or two occasions the interior of the refrigerator has become so cold that it has been necessary to shut off the circulation of the cold air to prevent the freezing of the meats, etc. This latter is, of course, only likely to happen on a very cold day.

In the opinion of this grocer, it is necessary for the grocer to always keep on the look-out for any new improvements he can make in the store that will be of help in any way.

Anything that will bring or increase business will meet with immediate interest from this man. A short while ago an electric coffee mill was installed and since then the sales have at least doubled and are steadily increasing. All these things soon pay for themselves

In the store of McKenzie & Osborne in Halifax, N. S., the interior of which is illustrated here, equipment to facilitate service and that makes for speedy and convenient serving of customers is a feature.

These Delivery Boys Now Own Their Store

Story of How Hard Work and Close Attention to a Study of the Grocery Trade While Employees, Leads to Realization of Ambition of McKenzie & Osborne, Grocers in Halifax, N.S., is Interesting

STARTING as delivery boys in a large grocery house in the City of Halifax, two young men in that eastern city are today proprietors of their own store. The firm of McKenzie and Osborne is the one referred to, and their store at Morris and Barrington Streets is the result of ten years' hard work and diligent effort in the grocery trade. Ten years ago they were delivery boys, but always determined to have their own store some day, they are today conducting it, and their efforts are being crowned with a good deal of success. Paying strict attention to their work as employees, they never lost an opportunity to study the grocery trade from every angle.

A Small Store at First

With this practical experience gained through hard work, and with plenty of ambition, these two young men opened their first store. It was only a small place on Barrington Street, and it was not long before it was evident that it was not large enough for the business that they were already doing. Consequently it had to be enlarged, and today it is five times the size of the first one, and ranks as one of the best stores in Halifax.

Situated in the residential section of the city, their clientele constitutes a fine class of trade. Located on a corner, they have window space on two streets, and these windows are always dressed in an attractive manner. Much importance is attached to these displays, as both members of the firm realize their value as a means of increasing turnover. "We change our windows frequently," Mr. Osborne told Canadian Grocer. "We always get good results from our displays, and take advantage of every opportunity to boost certain lines through showing them in the windows. We think appearance counts for a great deal in the success of a grocery store, and it has always been our aim to make our windows and store interior attractive."

A Well Equipped Store

Equipment of a kind to facilitate service, and to show goods in the best possible way has been installed. Silent salesmen for displaying confectionery, patented bins for storing bulk goods, meat slicer, and other modern fixtures, are all a part of this store.

"We have also built a reputation for carrying only the best goods, during the time that we have been in business for ourselves. Good goods and service has been our slogan, and we believe that attention to both these things has done a great deal towards bringing our business to what it is to-day. We give credit, and our losses as a result are hardly worth speaking about.

Like Goods Delivered

"Cash and carry stores are located down the street, but as far as our business is concerned, the competition has not been serious. Our customers like to have their goods delivered, and like to pay their accounts either fortnightly or monthly. By catering to their wants in giving them the best merchandise on the market, backed up with service, we have found that cash and carry stores have not affected our business at all. Our turnover is showing a steady increase from month to month. We aim to sell goods at a fair, reasonable profit, but make no attempt to compete with the fellow who is not giving service. We pay strict attention to our own business, and are not worrying about the fellow down the street, nor what he is getting for his groceries.

Baskets of Fruit For the Tourist

Specially Packed Fruit Baskets Have a Particular Appeal for People Wishing to Remember Friends Leaving Vancouver, and J. McTaggart & Son, Ltd., Grocers in That City, Are Building Up a Big Business in Supplying Them

By Special Correspondent Canadian Grocer

VANCOUVER.—Taking advantage of the opportunity presented by the fact that this city is the Mecca of thousands of tourists every year, J. McTaggart & Son, Ltd., grocers, have built up a big turnover in specially-packed fruit baskets for this class of trade. Reference has been made before in these columns to this feature of the McTaggart store, but the growth and increasing popularity of the novel ideas are such as to warrant further comment.

Develops Business

"We have a feature in this sale of fruit baskets that has brought business to our store," Mr. McTaggart told a representative of Canadian Grocer recently, "and the permanency of the idea and the fact that people look to us to supply these baskets has created a reputation for our store that cannot be underestimated. We believe we have in Vancouver a great tourist city, and it is becoming more and more so all the time. So many folks leaving on the steamer or on the train like to have a small lot of choice fruit, just to eat at their leisure or when they feel so inclined.

For the Traveller on Land and Sea

"People having friends leaving on a voyage often want to remember them in some way, and the suggestion of a prettily arranged basket of fruit appeals to them at once. We have people from all over the city phoning us to pack a basket for such and such a person leaving on a certain steamer. Of course we have had to build this business ourselves. It has not just come to us, but once having it under way, the idea has developed very rapidly. One friend telling another, recommending our baskets as suitable gifts on occasions of seeing friends away, has been one of the big factors in building this trade. In first going after this trade we sought out hostesses who were entertaining friends from a distance. Finding out when they were likely to leave the city, the suggestion was made to the hostess of a basket of fruit as a parting gift. Of course the baskets are artistically arranged and present a very tempting appearance, making an ideal gift and one that is more than likely to be thoroughly appreciated.

Working With the Florist

"We have found it worth while in the development of this trade to get in touch with local florists. They have carried the idea a good deal further in their line than we have, and very frequently when florists have a request for flowers to be sent to a departing friend, an order for fruit is also given and this is passed on to us."

Increasing Sales of Biscuits

A good deal of attention is given to window displays in the McTaggart store. In fact the windows are always arranged with a view to increasing the sales of some particular lines. As indicated by the accompanying photograph a display of biscuits was recently a feature. On this occasion sales were very considerably increased. The display in the window attracted more than ordinary attention, which, together with sales efforts on the part of the staff, resulted in a turnover above the average.

Coffee Sales In This Store Increased 100 lbs. Per Month

An electric coffee mill in the store of John McNight, Fredericton, N. B., has proved to be a splendid investment. Sales increased nearly one hundred pounds a month and show every indication for a further increase. Showcases placed near the front entrance have also proved a good idea. In these cases are displayed chocolates and cigars and cigarettes. Pivoted bins in the wall cases and under the counters have proved a valuable investment in this store, assisting in sales and keeping the goods in a clean and sanitary condition.

This firm has a large turnover in flour and feed, and for this purpose have fitted up a large room in the rear of the store with a storage capacity of three car loads. This room is lined with sheet steel and painted white, which prevents loss from rats and mice.

Saves Time and Makes Fewer Mistakes

Cudmore Bros., Charlottetown, P.E.I., Find Account Register a Valuable Aid to Bookkeeping—Well Arranged Displays Both in Store and Windows Make for Bigger Business—Fruit Windows a Feature

By Special Correspondent Canadian Grocer

IT DOESN'T do for a grocer to have to tell people they haven't certain lines when they are requested, according to Cudmore Bros., Charlottetown, P.E.I. "It is something we have always tried to eliminate," Mr. Cudmore added, "and with that end in view we keep a 'want' book. Of course, it is not always possible to have the particular things people ask for, and if we feel we have something just as good, and can safely recommend it as a substitute, we do not hesitate to do so. I think it is a good policy to let the customer feel that you are anxious to give her exactly what she wants, or something just as good and which will fill her need to her entire satisfaction."

Well Arranged Displays

Cudmore Bros. believe in keeping their store always attractive and declare that attention to well arranged displays and cleanliness constitutes a good part of the secret of success in this business. The store is finished in white, and the shelves and interior arrangement present an appearance that is altogether pleasing. While this store has only gotten under way in the past year, both members of the firm have had long experience in the grocery trade. Although capital has been limited to some extent, and caution has been exercised at the outset, this firm realizes that modern equipment is an asset that helps sales. "The public, I think, like to see nice fixtures in the store," Mr. Cudmore added.

"That register has been invaluable to us since we started," he continued, referring to a system for keeping accounts. "I don't think we could get along without it. It simplifies our bookkeeping and makes for fewer mistakes. Our business is conducted both along cash and credit lines, and we cater to all classes. We watch our accounts very closely and only give credit to those who we know are perfectly reliable."

Windows are used all the time in this store to boost turnover. A good part of the time they are used for showing fruits, and the arrangement of the same, are always attractive. The aim is made to keep them fresh and as original in design as it is possible to make them. The window as shown here resulted in a large volume of grapes being moved. During a two day display over two lugs of grapes were sold.

While window displays are a valuable aid to selling, if the grocer does not put special effort into his salesmanship, he will sell only the particular things asked for, this merchant contends. Suggesting goods to the customer as she places her order is in most instances worth while, and as Mr. Cudmore states is generally appreciated by the customer.

Increases Meat Turnover

Discussing the value of their slicer in the smoked and cooked meat department, Mr. Cudmore expressed the opinion that they sold more bacon and ham in a week since they had installed the slicing machine than they otherwise would have done in a month. A very nice display of bacon is made in this store, in a small case which is situated at the front of the store. This has been found a good means of stimulating sales.

Sales of Coffee Average More Than Seven Hundred Pounds Monthly

The Secret of a Successful Coffee Trade is Maintaining a Standard of Quality, According to George H. Sherwood & Co., Ltd., St. Catharines—Buys Only Two Blends and Has Had no Other During a Long Period of Catering to Particular Coffee Tastes

MAINTAINING the blend of coffee at a uniform standard of quality is the secret of success in developing a coffee trade, according to George H. Sherwood, president of George H. Sherwood & Co., grocers in St. Catharines, Ont. This firm, it might be truly said, has had a fair measure of success in selling coffee, when it is considered that sales in the main store on Queen Street average between seven and eight hundred pounds a month. Coffee to the amount of 794 pounds was sold in the month of August last. In February last more than 800 pounds were disposed of. These constitute two of the outstanding months in the current year, but reference to figures for all months for a year past indicate sales well over the seven hundred mark.

"Our coffee has really advertised itself," Mr. Sherwood told Canadian Grocer the other day. "We have never put any advertising on it. When we started in business nineteen years ago we bought two blends and these we have never changed. The quality has been maintained right along, and that, we believe, is the reason our coffee business is what it is to-day. We have often been asked to buy other blends, but we have never done so. Day after day, month after month, year in and year out, our coffee is always the same, and because people have come to realize this fact they continue to buy their supplies here.

"We always, of course, freshly grind the coffee as it is ordered by the customer. It is then put up in parchment lined bags, one grade in a bag of a particular color and the other grade being packed in a different colored bag."

Discussing the advantages of building a business in coffee such as this, apart from the fact that it is well worth while from the standpoint of profit, Mr. Sherwood stated that it is always a distinct advantage to build up a trade in a line that the other fellow has not. A great many merchants do not particularly stress the sale of coffee, he said, and concentrate their efforts in building a reputation for the same. They sell it, but just as it is asked for, with no special endeavor to increase sales of it. "A reputation for good coffee brings people into the store who otherwise might never enter," Mr. Sherwood added. "They have heard from their friends, persons who are customers of the store, that Sherwood's is the place to buy the best coffee, and forthwith they are ready to give it a trial. They come purposely to buy coffee, but the opportunity is presented to sell them other things, and this thing is impressed on our staff. More often than not orders are extended beyond the mere request for a pound of coffee, and here is a very direct advantage of having given some attention to the sale of coffee. Permanent customers have been gained for the store in this way. Interior displays, too, catch the eye of the occasional customer, and here, too, is where sales can be stimulated. Attracted by a showing on the counter or on the tables in the store of some particular merchandise that makes a ready appeal to a customer of this kind, a sale is invariably made.

"Specializing in the sale of coffee is good also from the financial viewpoint representing, as it does, a very fair margin, and if properly handled there is absolutely no waste."

An electric coffee mill is used by this firm for grinding the coffee. It is situated at one end of a counter, occupying a prominent place in the store. Like so many other merchants who have made a real success of coffee selling, Mr. Sherwood finds this a particular advantage and one that certainly means something in the development of the trade. "We could not get along without our electric mill. It is indispensable with a turnover in coffee such as ours," Mr. Sherwood added.

It is a case of quality first and price second in the business of George H. Sherwood & Co. "We can sell more high-class goods than we can sell the cheaper grades," he stated. "Jams last winter were selling at all kinds of bargain prices but we found that the highest-priced jams were the best sellers in our store. The average housewife wants anything in the line of food of the very best and usually does not dispute the price if she knows that she is getting top quality.

"We are selling more than three hundred pounds of biscuits here every week. We do not confine our sales to only one make, but we stock several. However, there is one that we sell more than any other. We think they are of an excellent quality and have no hesitation in selling many of the varieties of this manufacturer before all others. In the fall and winter months we aim to increase turnover by giving some attention to the sale of high-class specialties particularly suitable for special occasions like afternoon teas, dances and similar social gatherings. Inquiring of our customers, ladies who are contemplating entertaining, as to prospective 'parties,' we are then ready with suggestions of some delicacy or dainty that

Sells 500 lbs. of High-Class Chocolates in the Fortnight Preceding Christmas

"WE START early in November to boost the sale of Christmas lines such as the ingredients for the Christmas cake, plum pudding, and such like," George H. Sherwood, of George H. Sherwood & Co., Ltd., St. Catharines, told a representative of Canadian Grocer. "In the fortnight preceding the holiday, however, is the real time to sell the high-grade specialties that have a special appeal for the Christmas dinner or party. Lines that sell well in this period include such commodities as fancy boxes of figs, crystallized fruits, almond paste, nuts both shelled and unshelled, and of course a high-grade chocolate. Christmas stockings, and Christmas crackers too, constitute good sellers at this season, and last year our turnover in the same was very large. We pay a good deal of attention to the sale of chocolates in the two weeks before Christmas. While chocolates are a good sale with us the year round, we have considerably increased sales in the days just before Christmas. Our sales a year ago represented a turnover of 500 lbs. of chocolates in two weeks before the holiday. We have one high-grade chocolate that we have found is very popular with our trade. We always have them fresh, and many of our customers will have no other."

is likely to add interest or individuality to the luncheon or supper of the hostess. It is for occasions of this kind that a grocer can sell high-priced edibles that at other times have no appeal. Potted meats, fruits, high-grade biscuits, chocolates, hot-house tomatoes and lettuce are all good sellers for occasions of this kind."

Too much cannot be said about the value of window displays, according to Mr. Sherwood. In his present location there is a constant flow of people past his store, and the advantage of showing goods in the windows is readily apparent. "We are always well repaid for any time we spend on window displays. Increased sales can frequently be attributed to our windows. Very often we are able to buy a line of goods at a special price. We fill the window with the same and offer these goods at an attractive figure. We change our windows every week. We keep our showcases at the front of the store frequently renewed with fresh stock." One showcase, in which is shown a high-grade chocolate, is a productive source of trade, and Mr. Sherwood told the Canadian Grocer representative that sales of chocolates weekly to their regular customers were in good volume. "We also keep a large table in the centre of the store for purposes of demonstration and display."

Handles Goods Easily

The facilities for handling goods in the Sherwood store are worthy of note. Storage space is amply provided for, not only in the basement, but in the rear of both the first and second floors. An elevator carries stock to the second floor. Here all sugar is weighed out and parcelled, and consequently is never handled over the counter. What this means in the actual saving of time on a busy day and in the elimination of waste is of inestimable value. Likewise a number of other bulk lines are prepared beforehand for distribution. In the store itself orders are put up by the clerks in wire baskets before they are gathered for delivery. This avoids mixing of orders, and renders the checking of the same much easier.

HOW THIS MERCHANT JOGGED THIS CLERK'S MEMORY

Some stores have a tickler or follow-up file in which is placed all the correspondence and notes that have been set ahead for future reference. But, unless these files are consulted regularly the first thing every single day, they are likely to be worth little or nothing. One store manager had a clerk of the type that had to be reminded to look in the follow-up file. He used an interesting little device to remind her of the file the first thing every morning.

On the post immediately below the hook on which the clerk hung her hat every morning, he had tacked a small typewritten card to remind her that her first duty was to look in the follow-up file. By placing the card immediately below the hat hook, the hat or coat hanging on the hook covered up the card during the day. It performed its service the first thing in the morning and then retired from view.

Window Displays That Think

By a Housewife

THE WINDOW displays of grocery stores wield a bigger influence on the welfare and health of the homes of Canada than do goods put before the public from any other shops. Good food makes good health and health is one of life's gifts, the big asset in the race for success.

Outstanding in window displays of grocers, are those of T. A. Rowat & Co., London, Ont., for displays that really think. In these hurried days of hasty shopping, the mind of the housewife is very apt to get into a rut in her choice and preparation of food, but be she ever so aggressive on her own behalf and that of her family, the brightest of home-maker's minds is refreshed and delighted and open, oh, very much indeed, to the new suggestion. It is the latter's quick response to the thought in the window that is the chief encouragement of the merchant.

Demonstrations are very interesting but the watching of them takes time. A process can be visualised from displayed goods, and windows that think, give forth their suggestions quickly and concisely. The briefest glance can carry away very much that is helpful and business-getting in the window that concentrates.

Recently Mr. Rowat displayed a certain cake flour in an artistic arrangement of packages. But these alone might not have captured a passing thought from a preoccupied mind had it not been for the bowl of eggs, the dates, the cocoanut, the baking powder, the egg-beater even, flavorings and all things delectable, that go to the art of cake-making. Everything necessary and new and delicious was displayed on a little raised space, the arrangement of which was a marvel in economy of purpose and amount of material visible. Women paused, gazing intently, and with the October tang in the air to add zest to the suggestion, mentally made cakes for supper that very day. Inspired faces sought the interior of the store to search out the needs for those suggested cakes.

When merchants work hand in hand with the welfare of the home it is safe to foresee their success in the winning of the confidence of their patronage. The time will come when windows will concentrate on entire menus for unoriginal housewives, by displays of prepared food for entire meals, with the necessaries close in touch, in the window, to prepare just such many-times duplicated meals, as the one suggested. While the average woman of the home knows the clever methods of a routine of menus, she lacks often incentive or inspiration to vary her scheme of cooking and dishes. Shops and windows have long been meeting this need, and the future will bring about many revelations in this art of window-thought. Not only to help someone be happier, and make others happier, but to educate and inspire and make for the welfare of Canadian Homes.

The proverbial supper of cold ham and fried potatoes, while good and substantial and not to be "sneezed at" calls for the assembling of two articles of food. The windows that suggest dishes requiring a list of needs are those that make for business. Such windows have a very interesting method in their thinking.

The above illustration is made up of several advertisements, all except three being clipped from one newspaper of the same date of issue. These ads leave no impression on the mind of the reader except one of price and cheapness,, a factor which the consuming public rarely takes into consideration in preference to quality. This is especially true during the Christmas season.

Makes the Christmas Advertisement Appeal

The Success of the Advertisement From the Standpoint of Sales Getting Effectiveness, it Will be Found, Lies in the Stress Put Upon the Quality Rather Than the Price of the Goods

PICK UP almost any daily newspaper, be it the weekly paper of the small country town or the big daily of the larger city. Glance over the advertisements of the retail grocers and the similarity and apparently mad rush to offer goods at bargain or special prices can hardly escape the observation of the reader.

A couple of years ago when the bottom fell out of the markets and during the period of readjustment, there might have been some reason for this form of advertising copy. But even in those days the only real excuse was to post the public on the fact that prices had reached a lower level, thus assisting to bring business back again to a normal basis.

More Attention to Quality

Those days, however, are now in the past. The majority of people have got over the habit of looking for bargains. They no longer buy goods at a price but rather pay more attention to quality and price is a second consideration.

The foundation upon which business is built is goodwill, which by the way, is just another way of saying service and selling quality goods at a fair price. But judging by many of the advertisements appearing in the daily press, many merchants are forgetting that fact today. Building a business with goodwill may be a little slower process, but it is certainly more lasting.

Offering goods at a price or at a special bargain may be justified when the merchant is over stocked with a certain article or when an article is "dead" and it is the desire to close it out. But it does seem the utmost folly to persistently advertise goods at a price and to carry this frenzy of price cutting right into the Christmas season, when the majority of people are quite ready and willing to pay a fair price and even a little higher price if the quality is there.

Housewives as a rule, pay little attention to advertisements of Christmas fruits at "bargain prices." They want the best it is possible to get and even though the goods advertised at a special price may be first-class, the mention of Christmas fruits at special prices tends to make the buyer think of gritty currants, hard peels and dried up raisins.

A perusal of the advertisements announcing specials, which are reproduced on this page do not give the reader any idea of what value the buyer can expect for his money. These advertisements with the exception of two, were all clipped from the same paper. Three of them were taken from the same page and are fair examples of the average grocery advertisement appearing in the daily press to-day. They tell no story, nothing of real interest to the reader which would convey something to the mind to possess some of the goods. The only impression they leave with the reader is one of cheapness, something which the average housewife is not looking for at the Christmas season.

Undoubtedly the public has played a certain part in creating this price featuring form of advertising, such as a year or two ago when the prices of food commodities were on everybody's tongue and so much newspaper talk of the public "clamoring for lower prices." Then again, perhaps the competition of chain stores has something to do with it. But to-day there is little talk of that nature and the public, generally, are quite ready and willing to buy quality advertised goods and to pay a fair price for them.

But getting right down to brass tacks, the business which builds its foundation upon price, as a rule, rarely lasts long. It is the business built upon quality goods and service which lasts.

In writing an advertisement on Christmas lines, it is well to keep mind the fact that people want the best obtainable and like to know something about the goods themselves. If it is fruits for the mince meat, plum pudding and cake, say something about the currants being free from dirt and grit, that the peels are this year's make, soft and flavory, that the raisins are plump and juicy. That the spices are pure and just right to give the cake and pudding a delicate flavor and aroma. In fact point out that the niceness of the cake depends largely upon the quality and richness of the fruit, and give reasons why yours can always be depended upon.

An advertisement carrying such a message does not depend upon a "price" to make a sale, but rather it is the human interest touch, and the quality of the goods themselves which put over the sale.

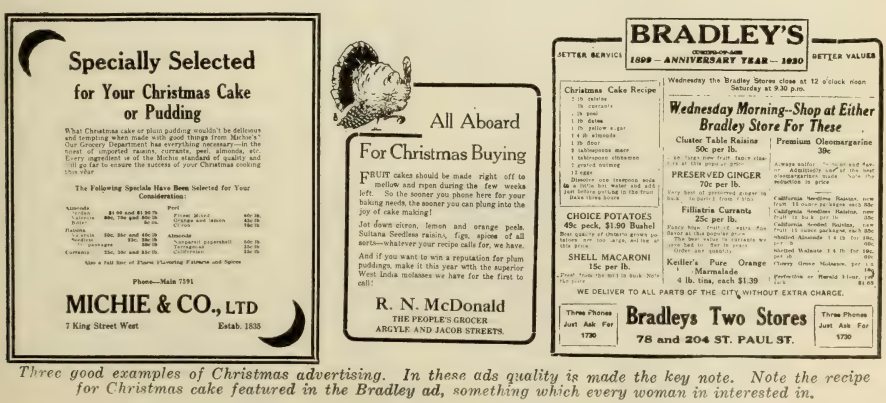
"It may seem a strange thing, but we have people coming here year after year with their Christmas order for currants, raisins, peels, nuts and other things," said one merchant. "We rarely ever see these people through the year, but every Christmas they are right on hand. It is pretty hard to account for this, except perhaps they are not quite so particular with their general groceries, but they are certainly very careful about the kind of ingredients they buy for the Christmas cake. Other stores, no doubt, carry just as good a quality as we do, but many do not advertise it. Quality is the first thing we talk about, both in the advertising and over the counter, and price is never used as a feature. Of course we do mention a price, but that is done incidentally."

"Writing grocery advertisements is the simplest thing in the world," said another merchant. "There are so many articles to advertise adapted to every season of the year that the merchant need never be at his wits' end to know just what to advertise. Another thing is that it is the woman of the house who reads the grocery ads and there are several things which she looks for in the ads, as for instance, cleanliness, service, pure foods. Variety is another important item she looks for, because she is always eager to add new things to the worrying daily menu. The price too is portant, but I might say that it is the least one. We have found that advertisements featuring goods to be sold at a price, do not build for the future and we have found that customers obtained through our service and quality goods, generally stick to us. I would say that the most important thing to think about in writing advertisements is to say something interesting about the article, ever keeping in mind the season of the year, and the articles most suitable for that season. Such advertisements never fail to attract attention."

Doing as Much Business for Cash as When on Credit



St. John, N. B., Nov. 1.—One of the many St. John grocers who has adopted a cash and carry system of doing business is Samuel Irons, of the Western section of this city. Many merchants are afraid that when methods of doing business are changed, a loss of customers is likely to be the result, especially during the process of turning a credit business into a cash business. Mr. Iron, during an interview with the Canadian Grocer, stated that over a year ago he decided to trade on a cash basis only, but did not largely advertise the fact. In fact he did not advertise it at all, but notified each customer that came in the store personally, stating his reasons for changing over to cash a carry business, and at the same time pointing out that he would be able to give better service and also be able to sell at a smaller margin of profit than is possible when long standing accounts have to be carried from month to month.

The first week, Mr. Irons stated, business was very quiet, but the second week showed a good improvement, and within a very short time he was doing the same volume of business on a cash basis as was being transacted formerly on credit. At the present time a much larger volume of business is done than before the change was made. Mr. Irons accounts for the increase in business by the fact that in doing away with his credit system and delivery and thus reducing his cost of doing business, and passing along this reduction of operating expenses to the consumer, his customers realize that it is to their own interests to pay cash. The increase of Mr. Irons' business has given him a quick turnover, enabling him to have good fresh stock on the shelves all the time. Another matter is carefully watched, that of prices. Mr. Irons stated that he watched prices very closely, and as soon as there was a drop in any commodity, he immediately adjusted his prices accordingly, and did not wait until he was re-ordering, as is the ease, he states, with many grocers who do not keep an eye on markets. The customers are very quick to appreciate this method of keeping prices up-to-date, and it gives them considerable confidence in their grocer. "Nothing exasperates a customer more than to find that she has just paid five cents more for an article than the other grocer down the street is selling it for," stated Mr. Irons, "owing to the fact that he just bought his stock at a new price, but her grocer has had it in for a little while." Mr. Irons states that he has not lost one of his old credit customers, and that they are all paying cash now without a murmur, some of them stayed away for a week or two after being notified that only a cash trade was being handled, but one by one they all came back. Another special feature with this store is the pricing of the goods, every article bears a price ticket, this system of marking everything has been found to be a great time saver, both for the customer and the store help, no customer finds it necessary to ask for a string of prices. "How much is this" and "How much, is that," etc., the customers just look around, state what they want and get their money ready, and if they have the right change can give the correct amount without any delay whatever.

According to Mr. Irons his system of "Cash and Carry" has proven to be so successful that he would never for a moment think of going back to the old credit system.

The Phone Humorist.

As I was in the grocery store the phone rang and the clerk answered. The party asked if he had any dry onions, and the clerk responded "yes," then the other party asked him if he would please give them a drink. The clerk hung up the receiver and told the customer of the request.

Grocers Should be Ready to Aid Customers in Arranging Menus for Afternoon Teas, Dances and Supper Parties During the Social Season—J. Grenier, Retail Grocer in Quebec City, Has Built Up a Big Business by a Study of This Trade—His Methods

MONTREAL.—The grocer who enjoys the confidence of his customers has a wonderful opportunity to build up sales in specialty lines an opportunity that must be jealously guarded and not carelessly exploited. Such confidence is only won through personal contact with the customers and the good service of years. When this has been gained the grocer is often called upon for advice when a social function or a dinner is to be held in the home. According to grocers who have made this a feature of their business, service is the secret of success in this connection.

Ready With Suggestions

"I am often asked for some suggestions for novelties in the food line," said J. Grenier, a retail grocer on St. John St., Quebec City, to a Canadian Grocer representative. "My customers come to me and tell me that they are giving a dance, an afternoon tea or a dinner and ask me to suggest some new delicacies or some novelties that they may use on the table. Sometimes they want a dainty desert or some appetizing hors d'oeuvres. In the first place a grocer must be well posted to make the suggestions, and in the second place he must know well his customers' likes and dislikes. There is not the steady demand for these lines that would warrant the grocer stocking these novelties in any quantity. The fact that they are wanted is because they are not common. At such functions a woman likes to serve something new and to her grocer she goes to get some suggestions.

Quality Above All

"At such a time the grocer is put to a test. Price then is a secondary consideration. Quality is everything. The merchant must know what he is recommending. Therefore he must have sampled the goods himself. If he does not carry a stock of the novelties he must know where he can get them at short notice. He must then be positive of their quality. It is a good plan for a grocer to make a list of such lines, so that when he is called upon for suggestions he can produce the list and go over the items with the customer. During the holiday seasons particularly such a list is of great value. It gives the store a reputation for service in the store to supply suggestions. Caterers make this a specialty but few homes can afford to call in a caterer whenever there is a special function and the grocer is naturally the one to whom the woman goes."

Mr. Grenier then explained how he keeps posted. He reads magazines that have up-to-date dinner and luncheon menus. From these he gets tips and then he finds out where these dainties may be had. Before he needs them he asks the different travellers if they can supply the line. From different advertisements he gets names of firms who handle such specialty lines and by making a note of the item he knows just where they can be had at short notice. Then too, travellers supply a fund of information along this line and although at the time it may not be of interest, it is well to bear the line in mind or keep a record of it. Such information on hand builds a service that in turn makes a reputation.

Where Service Counts

Just a week ago a man went to a Montreal grocer and asked him to pack two fancy baskets of fruit and dainties and send them to a certain hospital with his card. These were all the instructions the grocer had. This man had seen a similar basket in the window as a display feature. The man asked for the price and the grocer said "Three dollars each." The man was pleased and left the entire responsibility with the grocer. It required an artistic taste to arrange such a basket and it also required a supply of high quality specialty lines but the job was executed. Two days later the man telephoned to express his appreciation of the service and, as the grocer later told Canadian Grocer, he then decided to make this work a feature of the business. There is another grocer in Montreal who makes a feature of this service as well as featuring specialty lines for the table. As one grocer said, "When a service in specialty lines is featured along with a reputation for quality the grocer avoids the evils of price cutting. The service eclipses the thought of price and puts the business on a different basis altogether."

Calls Customers On The 'Phone And Finds It Pays

According to the McBeath Grocery, Moncton, N. B., calling customers on the phone each morning is good business. Not only are the regular customers called up on the phone, but others who occasionally buy at the store are spoken to in this way. This is particularly so when the firm has received some new goods and at special seasons of the year. Newspaper advertising is done consistently and has been a valuable aid to selling.

In the store and placed near the front where customers can readily see them, is a fine display of biscuits. Biscuit sales in this store are very large and Mr. McBeath claims that a great deal of this is due to the location of the biscuit case. Window displays of biscuits are sometimes put in and sales at that time always show a marked increase. Since installing a meat slicer, sales have increased fifty per cent., Mr. McBeath states. Customers buy bacon more freely when it is cut in thin even slices. He also finds there is no waste as each side of bacon can be sliced to the very end.

A SERVICE THAT CITY CUSTOMERS APPRECIATE

In the waiting room of a large city department store hangs a large street map of the city. Strangers find it a great convenience in locating any particular street or district. And even residents find it a convenience at times in looking up unfamiliar sections of the city. In this simple way customers are saved the time and embarrassment of making inquiries, which often employees cannot answer, and the store employees are saved the time and trouble of directing these people.

An Interior Display of Real Value

An Attractive Arrangement of Fruit Within the Store Means Constantly Increasing Sales—This Merchant Devotes One Side of the Store to Showing Fruits

Showing the interior display of fruit in the store of Bumaylis Bros., Montreal. It is a display such as this that keeps the cash register ringing merrily.

"WE CAN sell every kind of fruit we put on display and the larger variety the bigger our sales," stated Mr. Bumaylis, Montreal, to a representative of Canadian Grocer. "If at any time we allow our display to get disarranged, I have noticed that sales will decrease. The more time we spend on the appearance of our displays the better the sales. Many people come into the store for only one article, yet before they go out they have bought several. This is due entirely to the fact that the display has created the desire."

Although the Bumaylis store makes splendid window displays of fruit, it is on the interior where the most striking display is made. Practically all one side of the store is devoted to fruits and has a very attractive appearance. This display measures thirty feet in length and sixteen feet in width. Almost every variety of fruit is carried, both in season and out. Scattered throughout the display there are also nuts in the shell, displayed in bags. Shelled nuts are also shown in baskets.

This store, although not situated in the higher class district, nevertheless disposes of a large quantity of fruit. The fruit is chosen for the quality and price is never considered first. Quality is the first consideration. For instance, Mr. Bumaylis pointed out to Canadian Grocer representative a couple of crates of grapes which were marked up at $1.50 a pound and said that they sold quite a lot of them.

Showcards Play An Important Part

Window Displays Are Made More Effective If Backed Up With Snappy Showcards—Judicious Use of Showcards About the Store and in the Windows Invariably Gets Results

SOMEONE has said that the public requires prodding, not only to create new wants, but actually to induce people to buy the goods which it frankly needs. This is certainly a true statement and the live merchant is continually on the alert with suggestions and ideas to induce the public to procure not only their every day requirements but "extras" as well. By store and window display and newspaper advertisements he is persistently introducing and suggesting new lines to assist the housewife in that ever worrying question "what shall we have for dinner to-day?"

The merchant gathers together in his stock, everyday essentials besides other articles which might be termed luxuries. As the windows and store interior are the logical mediums by which distribution can be obtained the quickest, the merchant proceeds to display his merchandise in the window and the store because they reach the buying public at the psychological moment when it is easy to purchase the article.

Displays Not Alone Effective

But mere displaying of merchandise in the store and windows no matter how attractive they may be, will not always put over the desired sale. Undoubtedly a certain number of sales will be made, but to impress the public to the point where your store is made the shopping center in your neighborhood, requires something more than display. And that is where the showcard and price tickets enter into the prodding process.

The judicious use of showcards and price tickets about the store and windows adds life and attractiveness which otherwise they would not have. For instance if a window is trimmed with material for the making in the home of Christmas cakes and plum puddings and a card placed in the center reading something like this "FOR THOSE MOUTH WATERING MINCE PIES, WE HAVE THE INGREDIENTS IN THE FINEST QUALITY" or "FOR THE CHRISTMAS CAKE AND PLUM PUDDING, YOU WANT THE FINEST MATERIAL—NOTE THE QUALITY

MAKING IT EASY FOR THE CUSTOMER TO BUY

Display by its very nature makes it easy for the customer to buy. It helps to overcome previous buying habits, and one must not overlook the fact that the average human being, making an average purchase, follows the line of least resistance and either buys what he has purchased before or buys according to the last suggestion or impression made on the mind.

AND RICHNESS OF THE FRUIT ON DISPLAY IN THIS WINDOW." Smaller cards, say about two by three inches in size, naming the kind of fruit and the price could then be placed on each individual article. Such a display could not fail to be attractive and create much comment and eventually result in sales.

An Interesting Display

Another window display, which by the way is by no means new, but nevertheless has always proved interesting, is to procure a large map of the world, and hang it at the back of the window, thus forming a background. The floor and balance of the window is made of raisins, currants, figs, peels, preserved ginger, flour, extracts, nuts, molasses, sugar and other things which form the ingredients for the Christmas baking. Strips of narrow red ribbon are then arranged leading from the article and attached to the country, represented on the map, from which that article is derived. For instance, shelled almonds from Spain and California, peels from Canada and England, molasses from the West Indies, spices from India, preserved ginger from China, currants from Greece, Valencia raisins from California, flour from Canada, etc. To make this display more effective, a showcard say about eleven by fourteen inches or even twice that size should be placed in a prominent place, where it would not be in the way of the goods on display, but at the same time be conspicuous. This card could read something like this, "THE MATERIALS WE HAVE GATHERED TOGETHER FOR YOUR CHRISTMAS CAKE AND PUDDING COME FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD—THE FINEST THE WORLD PRODUCES."

Importance of Showcards

Thus it is seen by these two suggestions for window displays, the importance of the showcard in assisting in the prodding process. These displays without the showcard to complete the story would indeed be very tame and ordinary windows.

The writer does not claim that showcards and price tickets should be used promiscuously, or that every article should bear a price ticket. That remains for the merchant himself to decide. Some merchants have found that a good plan, while others have not found it so. But it is the opinion of merchants who use showcards and price tickets, that the careful use of them cannot fail to bring results.

Not a Difficult Proposition

The writing of showcards may appear to be a very difficult proposition, but in reality, with a little practice, anyone can make a good card. As the work goes on, it is surprising how interesting it becomes. Plain letters which can be made with a single stroke of the brush are the best to use. Public taste, today, does not favor the card ornamented with scrolls and elaborated shadings. The card to be most effective should be simple but so attractive that it catches the eye at a glance and as one person said "can be read on the run."

The illustrations with this article will give the reader some idea of how attractive and readable a simple card can be made. These cards were all written with a number nine brush, the large letters being formed by using the brush from one eighth to half of its length. The smaller letters with the point or flat end. The pictures are simply cut outs or clippings from advertisements appearing in magazines and pasted on the cards.

Over 60,000 Loaves Of Bread Sold In This Store Yearly

"People to-day are buying bakers' bread who a few years ago never thought of it," stated Mr. Turner, of Turner Bros., Sackville N. B., to a representative of Canadian Grocer. "A few years ago there were not twenty-five loaves of bakers' bread sold in a day in Sackville, while to-day over a thousand loaves are sold each day. Although the law says it is necessary to have all bread wrapped at the bakeshop, we always put another wrapper around it before sending it out. This prevents the bread from coming in contact with any dirt in case the sealing on the baker's wrapper should break, as it does sometimes. People want foodstuffs properly wrapped and protected from dirt and I think it is up to the grocer to see that foods going out of the store are protected."

Sales of bread in the Turner Bros.' store average sixty thousand loaves a year. Chocolates and biscuits are other lines which have a ready sale. In the matter of chocolates, this firm used to handle several makes, but recently they have been only selling one and found that their chocolate sales have increased by concentrating selling efforts on the one make.

Believes a Well Equipped Store Attracts Business in a Way That Soon Returns the Investment

Cahill & Co., Grocers in Halifax, N.S., Find That Goods Properly Arranged and Shown to Advantage Very Frequently Sell Themselves—Coffee Sales Increase With the Installation of an Electric Coffee Mill

By Special Correspondent Canadian Grocer

THAT equipment that makes for an improved and efficient service is essential to the success of the grocery business, there does not seem to be any doubt, according to the opinion of Cahill & Co., grocers in Halifax, N. S. This store represents one of the finest equipped in the province. W. M. Dalton, manager of this concern believes that equipment such as he has, is a good investment, and because his store is attractive in this respect, he finds it is a big factor in increasing turnover.

On entering this store one is at once impressed by the surroundings, the cleanliness and general attractiveness of the place. Everything is arranged to bring about the best results in the way of sales, and in this regard it is evident that the value of good displays is not overlooked. Goods are arranged in such a way as to catch the eye of the customer, and with a view to creating interest in the same. Showcases for the display of special lines are utilized to great advantage. Bulk goods are kept in patented bins, that are not only convenient, but guarantee absolute cleanliness in bulk lines all the time. Rapid computing scales are so situated on the counters, that waiting on the part of the staff in order to get a chance to weigh goods, is never necessary, and results in a saving of time that is very valuable. A new cash register has recently been installed. Receipts are given to all customers at every purchase. Business is done on both the cash and the credit plan, and in this connection it might be stated that all charge slips are also entered in the cash register, so that at the end of the day, it is possible to learn the volume of business for the day. This firm finds that most customers appreciate slips with all their purchases, and it is no trouble to render them under this system.

Coffee Grinder Increases Sales

Coffee sales run into big figures in this store, and the management declares that the installation of an electric coffee mill has been the means of stimulating the turnover in the coffee department, in a very gratifying way. "We grind the coffee as it is required," Mr. Dalton told Canadian Grocer. "There is no doubt but people appreciate this fact, and will buy their coffee supplies where they know that they can have it freshly ground for them. As we grind the coffee, it is packed in dust-proof, air tight packages, and each package bears a guarantee of purity and excellence. We have the greatest satisfaction from this grinder, and the convenience and service is provides has certainly meant a considerable increase in the volume of our coffee sales. There is always an aroma of freshly ground coffee in the store, and this fact I believe goes a long way towards inviting inquiry about our coffee, that invariably results in sales. This grinder can be adjusted to grind coffee into eighteen different sizes, so that every customer can practically have it ground as she desires."

Meat Slicer Gives Real Service

As will be noticed in the photographic reproduction of the interior of this store, a meat slicer is prominently located. It is always kept polished and shining. A great deal of bacon and ham is cut by it every day, and the sales in this department have shown an increase since the installation of the slicer. It makes for speed, Mr. Dalton states, and permits of customers having their bacon cut to their own particular liking. Situated as it is in this store, it frequently suggests bacon or ham to the customer when perhaps they might not otherwise have thought of purchasing it, the manager added.

This firm is long since convinced of the value of advertising in the city papers, and persistently and regularly advertise. In fact a certain space is contracted for and used every day. Mr. Dalton prepares all advertising copy himself, and he declares that no attempt is made at sensationalism. "We never advertise," he stated, "with the idea of cutting prices. Our business is not a 'cut price' store. We aim to give value for money received, and sell at a reasonable, fair profit. We give service of delivery and credit, and our idea in advertising is not to sell lower than our competitor, but rather to stress the high standard of quality that is represented in our merchandise, together with the service we render. Of course we do mention prices in our advertisements, as we realize this is an important factor in any successful advertisement, but no attempt is made to 'cut' below what we think is a fair legitimate profit."

Opens Branch Store

Three months ago Cahill & Co., opened a branch store in the West End of Halifax. It is conducted entirely separate from the main store, with the exception of delivery and advertising which is done on a joint basis, thereby reducing the overhead on both. The new store is managed by J. E. Cahill, while Mr. Dalton is in charge of the main one.

Saves Time and Does Away With Double Entry System of Bookkeeping

HALIFAX.—The value of a cash register in a grocery store cannot be overestimated, according to the opinion of the management of the Terminal Grocery Co. in this city. Since the installation of one, a great deal of time has not only been saved, but the firm has done away with the old double entry system, and saves the expense of a bookkeeper. "It was not long before the machine paid for itself," Walter Share, manager of this store, told a representative of Canadian Grocer. "It is a piece of equipment that I think is essential in the conduct of a grocery store."

The Terminal Grocery is a combined grocery and meat business, and Mr. Share declares that without a doubt the combination is a very satisfactory one. The meat department stimulates the sale of groceries, customers realizing that it is an advantage to buy meat and groceries at the same store. Instead of taking time to call the butcher and the grocer individually, busy housewives appreciate this saving of time, by giving the double order at the one time.

The meat department is situated at the back of the store, where a large modern refrigerator stands, in which the meat is kept free from contamination, and effort is made always to have it fresh and in the best possible condition.

"A Credit Business Must be Run on a Rigid Policy"

Vigilance and Carefulness in the Matter of Collections Must be Observed at All Times—Montreal Grocer Declares Credit is a Handicap Under Which Many Merchants Are Forced to Operate

By Staff Correspondent Canadian Grocer

MONTREAL.—The deplorable condition of some credit grocery businesses and the handicap under which some grocers are working is illustrated by the story told to a Canadian Grocer representative by a local grocer who conducts a credit business. As he said he has paid dearly for the trade he is carrying and he has now gone so far that he cannot afford to change his policy. He is holding his customers mainly by their indebtedness to him. The story is typical of many grocery businesses and as a wholesale grocer said, "A good number of stores have reached the point where they are insolvent if their 'paper' were discounted."

Carrying Heavy Accounts

"Look at this amount," said this grocer, producing a grocery bill for one family that amounted to $286.75, accumulated during the past two years. The strange thing about the account was that during the past four months it had grown only by about $11.00 a month whereas in previous months it had amounted to $60.00 and $70.00 a month. It was evident that this debtor was buying elsewhere although the account was still open with the first grocer and little or no attempt has been made to pay it off. The largest amount that the grocer had collected on the bill during the year was $33 and the total was larger than it had been at any time during the period.

Strangely, while the grocer was examining this account with a Canadian Grocer representative the telephone rang and the customer who owed the amount asked that ten pounds of sugar be sent over to her home as soon as possible. "Is there anything else?" asked the grocer. "No thank you," was the reply and the conversation ended. "There is an illustration of the position I am in," said the grocer. "I know very well that that woman is buying from so-and-so down town, yet when she runs out of something she calls me for it, knowing that I can let her have it in a hurry. Yet she makes no attempt to pay my bill. She is influential in this district and according to all appearances she can very easily pay up my account but when I ask her to settle it, she always has a pitiful excuse. If I humiliate her she will use her influence with her neighbors to hurt my business for they have no idea that she is so heavily in debt.

There is No Way Out

"I cannot see the way out. I have often made up my mind that I will refuse to sell her any more goods until the old account is settled but each time she calls, I take the order and forget my resolution. In the past I have turned over accounts to collectors but I only get 50 per cent. of what they collect. I have tried dogging the account every month, have written letters, and have spoken personally to customers who have allowed their accounts to pile up but the only result seems to be that these people go elsewhere for their groceries. I do not know whether or not they get credit where they go, but if they pay cash for their groceries, it is so much more unjust to the grocer who has given them so much credit."

Still Prefers Credit

"Would you now change over to a cash trade if you could?" this grocer was asked. "No" was the reply. "I would be 'stepping out of the frying pan into the fire.' The competition is too keen in that class of trade. One must sell his goods for little or nothing. In that business everything depends upon the amount of turnover and the people who pay cash go here and everywhere for thier groceries, picking up a bargain here, a bargain there and dealing in no particular store. In the credit business the grocer practically buys the account and often pays dearly for it too. I have found that those who pay cash here are the ones who buy the smallest quantities. They are the people who live carefully and the ones who after all would make the best credit customers. From the customer's standpoint cash buying is the best way, yet there must be credit groceries and where there is credit there is also loss. The thing is to avoid as much loss as possible. That can only be done by demanding monthly payments and adhering to that policy. A credit business must be run on a rigid policy."

Sell Better if Sold in Assorted Sizes

This Merchant Sells Bananas by the Pound But Assorts Them According to Size First—Has Special Biscuit Counter That Pays Good Returns—Broom Rack Increases Broom Sales 50 Per Cent.

By British Columbia Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

DUNCAN, B. C., May 8.—"How can I prevent these stocks of bananas getting unsightly and less saleable?" This is the question C. E. Stoney, manager of the grocery section, Cowichan Merchants Ltd., Duncan, Vancouver Island, asks.

He tried an experiment.

He hung half of the stocks in the usual way, with the fruit hanging down, and the balance in the way it grows on the tree, with the fruit pointing up. The stocks hung in nature's way were used neatly from the bottom up. The others hung in the usual way were soon picked over, cut out in spots and the stocks soon unsightly with the smaller bananas only left.

"Of course we sell them by weight but even so," said Mr. Stoney, "they sell better if sold in assorted sizes. When only the small green ones are left on a denuded stock, the offerings do not look so attractive." In this store every fixture is designed to give the maximum display. The counters have plate glass tops, under which various bulk specialties are displayed. The delicatessen counter has a sort of 'second deck' which is enclosed with glass and screens giving fullest display but evident security against dust and flies. In speaking of this display feature Mr. Stoney mentioned that he found a couple of weeks earlier that his stock of dessicated cocoanut was excessive. In the shallow drawers built beneath the plate glass tops of the serving counter he arranged displays of fine, medium and coarse cocoanut—with the present price plainly displayed—and when interviewed had entirely cleaned up the stock.

His Special Biscuit Counter

All surplus tub candies are put into good tin biscuit boxes when stored in the store room, this method having been found to properly protect from dust, vermin, and in a measure, to reduce the amount eaten by the staff "in passing." A special biscuit counter is always dressed and repays splendidly the attention and space devoted to it.

The style of counter used is the conventional bulk candy counter, with the same nickled trays used to display toffees, caramels, etc. In this case a display of each fancy biscuit is made, using these nickeled trays, and the sales are much greater than before, when the large boxes were racked. Orders for fancy biscuits are filled right from the trays, in the same way one is served in a bakery, the trays being replenished from the tin boxes as required.

A surplus biscuit rack of the usual style, with lifting glass covers is utilized in a novel and effective way, the boxes under the glass are filled with evaporated peaches, prunes, apricots, pears, raisins, etc., where they are in excellent display and a neat price card is attached to the glass over each offering.

Since constructing a special broom rack which, being on castors, can be readily moved out in front of the entrance, the sale of brooms has increased fifty per cent. In an article like brooms one might think that the additional sales made from such a display would be negligible, but Mr. Stoney has proved by actual trial that there is hardly an article in the grocer's line that will not respond with added sales to added display.

It is the experience of this merchant that wooden egg carriers are too expensive, by reason of their frequent loss, and he is using pressed board one-trip cartons, with, what he claims, a saving.

Recalls the Days When Chickens Sold at 25 Cents Per Pair

"YES indeed, I can remember the time when we sold chickens at twenty-five cents a pair and were glad to get that for them."

Such was the statement made to the Ottawa representative of Canadian Grocer by Charles McArthur of Russell, Ont., during a recent converation when Mr. McArthur seemed to find pleasure in reviewing experiences of forty years back when he commenced business in a very small way in a sparsely settled community.

"Those were the days when we had to work," went on Mr. McArthur. "In order to secure even twenty-five cents a pair for our chickens it was often necessary for us to drive thirty odd miles through a blinding snow storm to find a market for our goods in Ottawa."

Mr. McArthur humorously remarked that during his forty years of country store merchandising he had sold marriage licenses, done a little undertaking, and had sold "silk and codfish."

An Interchange Would Be Good

"I sometimes think," he said, "that it would be a mighty fine thing if city grocers would spend a few days in country stores, and vice versa. I am sure we country fellows would learn a whole lot by watching the city dealer's methods of merchandising, and I don't believe it would do the city fellow any harm to get an idea of how we do business in the country and villages."

Mr. McArthur thought the opinion might prevail that the country dealer was lax in his methods. But such was not the case in the majority of instances. "Our clerks are taught to be right on their toes all the time, just the same as they would be required to be in the city stores," he said. "We endeavour to impress upon them at all times the importance of neatness, promptness and above all, courtesy.

Encourages Initiative

"In my stores, I have always made it a point of encouraging initiative by offering bonuses for increased turnover. Where we come across a machine-like clerk—the fellow who does his work faithfully and honestly, but who makes no effort to spread himself—we endeavour to instill a little pep into him. I have had men who have sold a customer so many yards of cloth or so many pounds of sugar and let it go at that, but I make it a point of bringing home to these fellows the importance of throwing out suggestions and endeavouring to effect larger sales. I tell them that by proper sales methods, they can, in a great many cases induce a customer to buy merchandise they never intended to buy. A hint here and a suggestion there will often go a long way.

"There is a big opportunity for this kind of salesmanship in a country store, owing to there being such a variety of merchandise. I have very often sold a man a bag of sugar, and then, by patient but telling sales methods sent him home with a couple of shirts or a suit of clothes which he had not intended to buy just then."

Fractions in Religion

A colored revival was in full blast, and one old fellow was extorting the people to give liberally, to contribute generously.

"Look what de Lawd's done fo' you-all, brethren!" he shouted. "Give Him a portion of all you has. Give Him a tenth. A tenth belongs to de Lawd!"

"Amen!" yelled a perspiring member of the congregation, overcome by emotion. "Glory to de Lawd! Give Him mo.' Give him a twentieth!"

Hive of Bees in Window Attracts Crowds

Merchant in Montreal Increases Sales of Honey by Unique Display—Hive of Leather Colored Italian Bees Swarm in and Out of the Combs

The above fine window display of fruits and vegetables was put in by the Cash & Carry Grocery, St. Catherine St., Montreal, the feature of which is tthe hive of live becs placed in the center. The hive had a glass front so that peaestrians could readily see the busy little bees at work. Needless to say, this idea created a great deal of interest and many sales of honey and fruit was the result.

MONTREAL.—A window dressed by the Cash & Carry Grocery, St. Catharine Street, Montreal, attracted much attention on account of a hive of "leather-colored Italian bees" that was placed in the centre of the window. As the front of the hive was of glass the work of the bees could be seen by those passing the window. The window attracted much attention during the week that this was featured. Honey in combs and jars was built up around the hive.

Frank Lamere, the manager of the store, told Canadian Grocer that the presence of the bees in the window had increased sales of honey to a surprising extent. At almost every hour of the day a crowd surrounded the window watching with intent curiosity the swarming mass of bees as they worked in and out of the fine combs of the hive. Not only did the display increase the sales of honey but a general increase in sales was noted in all lines since the spacious window was well filled with fruits and vegetables.

Aims to Turn Stock Every Six Weeks

Campbell and Gibbon, Grocers at Port Arthur, Ont., Doing a Business of One Hundred Thousand Dollars Annually, Are Not Finding Competition of Chains or Mail Order Houses Serious —Where Good Equipment is Valuable

ESTABLISHED in the grocery business in the City of Port Arthur, Campbell and Gibbon have built up a trade that represents a turnover of more than one hundred thousand dollars annually. Just at the present time Port Arthur is enjoying a return of better business, the bountiful wheat crop of the West stimulating trade in a most gratifying manner. Discussing conditions with Canadian Grocer recently, George Gibbon stated that the grocery trade is good and considerable improvement is already apparent.

Notorious Competition

"We conduct our business largely on a credit basis," Mr. Gibbon stated. "The competition of the chains and cash and carry stores has not been a serious factor, and our losses as a result of giving credit have been less than one per cent. Even the large department stores through their mail order system, have not been successfully competing with our prices, and we believe that we are able to sell at just as low, if not lower, in addition to giving service. We aim to turn our stock at least every six weeks. Many lines of course are turned oftener, but all should be disposed of at least in a period of six weeks. To do this means every effort directed towards selling goods. With a staff of seven clerks, each one is looked to for certain results, and all are expected to sell more than merely the goods asked for. In stimulating sales of slow moving lines, the combined selling ability of the staff is utilized, and results in this direction are always very gratifying. In this way, it is our aim to keep nothing that does not sell readily, and no goods are allowed to stay on the shelves beyond a certain length of time.

Suggesting Articles

"In the same way we use window displays all the time to increase sales, which combined with the selling effort of our clerks are very effective. Interior and counter displays too are always a means of interesting customers in new goods or in some lines that they are not particularly looking for. Suggesting articles that perhaps go well with the certain items of the order is a splendid plan to follow, and more often than otherwise results in sales being made."

Good Equipment Essential

The store of Campbell and Gibbon is well equipped. With such a large turnover as is characteristic of this concern, Mr. Gibbon states, equipment of a kind to improve the service is absolutely essential. "We could not get along without the assistance that these conveniences afford," he added. The store is fitted with patented bins, and Mr. Gibbon claims that from the standpoint of cleanliness and sanitation they keep bulk goods in first-class condition all the time. An electric coffee mill is an asset in any grocery according to this firm, and it has been their experience that it has increased sales as well as rendering excellent service. It is prominently situated in the store, and the aroma of freshly ground coffee invites interest and eventually secures sales.

"We could not give the service in our provision department without a meat slicer," Mr. Gibbon remarked. "We have a large turnover in bacon and cooked meats, and our slicer is certainly a piece of equipment that is most necessary."

In conjunction with the grocery business of Campbell and Gibbon, a bakery is also conducted, and works well with the general grocery trade. A full line of bread and pastry is carried, and this department serves as a drawing card to many people who perhaps otherwise would not be attracted to the stores. Sales of groceries are frequently made to people who come in for bread or pastry, and here is where displays are particularly advantageous in increasing sales.

CUTTING DOWN ON MISTAKES IN THE BOOKKEEPING DEPT.

Too many mistakes were occurring in the bookkeeping department and, what's more, the employees realized it too. But no one was able to place the responsibility; they were always passing the buck.

To stop this the bookkeepers agreed among themselves, at the request of the manager, to cut these errors by paying for every mistake. Now when any one bookkeeper gets something on another, the "victim" must pay 25 cents to the man who finds the mistake. A list is kept showing "who caught whom" and the fellow caught each time is the "goat" for the day. It's cutting down on mistakes in this office.

Three Sticks of Candy for a Muskrat Pelt!

"WHEN I first worked for the Hudson's Bay Company, thirty years ago," said W. Bunting, General Merchant in Fort Fraser, B.C., "we used to give three sticks of candy for a muskrat skin. The highest I ever gave while with the old company was 35 cents in trade." (Two years ago some were bought in McBride for $5 per pelt.)

For many years Mr. Bunting was a clerk at the old Fort Fraser trading post. Then in 1908 he went to Fort St. James, at Stewart Lake. This was another of the Posts founded by Simon Fraser when he found and named the Fraser River, and then went on to the Pacific Ocean. This was in 1806. At Fort St. James Mr. Bunting soon got into his stride, for in 1915 he was in charge of the Fort.

The old trading post experience would do many a modern grocery clerk a lot of good. The traders knew their commodities. They knew their customers, and they knew the conditions under which they had to work.

While the representative of Canadian Grocer stood in Mr. Bunting's store, a few orders were being packed for waiting ranchers and trappers. When I say packed, I don't mean merely grouped together. The sugar, tea, beans and such commodities were wrapped in double and sometimes triple wrappings and ample strong. The whole was so carefully re-checked, and prepared for carrying that one rancher was forced to voice his admiration for the care and skill with which his order had been prepared for him. "That will be alright when you get home, Fred," said Mr. Bunting. "I've always been in the habit of considering how my customer gets his goods home," Mr. Bunting remarked. "There are certain packages suitable for canoe travel. Others are best for conveyance on pack horses or dogs; different styles again for carriage by pack strap and boxes are best where a waggon will be used. In any case, the way the goods leave the store is immaterial—the way they arrive at the journey's end is all important."

While Mr. Bunting hustles around the log store and chats about beaver-pelts and 100 mile "mushes" and the logs crackle in the big sheet iron heater, it is a jolt to be brought back to the present by the strident ring of the government telephone.

This Advertising Plan Is a Success

A Grocer and a Butcher in Lynn Valley, a Suburb of Vancouver, B.C., Join Forces in Advertising Their Stores to the Community —Claim That Good Returns Have Been the Result

By Special Correspondent Canadian Grocer

LYNN VALLEY, B. C.—R. Thompson, proprietor of the Lynn Valley Store, Lynn Valley, B. C., and president of the North Vancouver Branch, Retail Merchant's Association, has had in operation for several months an advertising policy which he claims has brought him good returns.

Lynn Valley is really a residential suburb of Vancouver, situated on the north side of the harbor.

Circularizing the Community

"The store adjoining mine is a butcher shop and C. V. Kay and myself decided to use circulars," explained Mr. Thompson, "and to share the space and expense. This we have done with very definite success. I find that 500 copies of our circular which we have printed each week, will adequately cover our immediate territory. He gives them out to his customers, many of whom probably have not previously come in my store, and I do the same here, likely reaching customers that have not as yet given him their patronage.

"Besides the copies that we hand out, we have copies sent out to the homes in this way. Each of the two Vancouver evening papers has carriers who deliver to the householders in Lynn Valley. They each have about five boys and each of the boys carry out about thirty papers. We have arranged with the boys, once a week, to put our folder inside of the papers before they deliver them. In this way the circular gets to the householder in clean condition, and in a definite system."

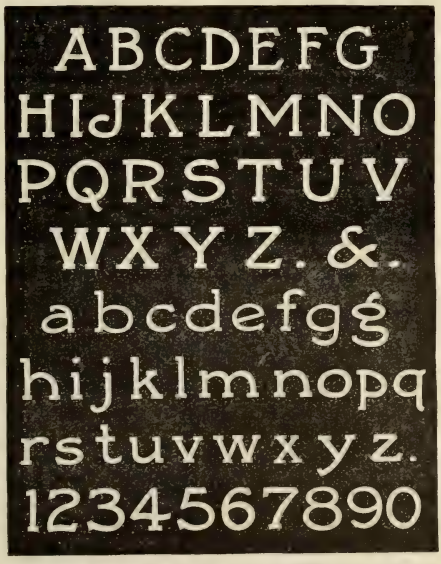
A Straightforward Statement

As a preamble to a recent list of specials, Mr. Thompson had the following concise piece of educational matter.

"LADIES—Every article we have in the store is priced as low as possible consistent with safety. We compared a Vancouver departmental store catalogue some time ago, and on 75 grocery lines we were selling at lower prices. We pride ourselves on the service we render you. You can buy all you need in your own stores and get delivery in a very short time. We do not sell below cost. We stay in business because we sell goods at a profit. 95 per cent. of grocery stores fail or go out of business because they think they sell at a profit. If you appreciate a good store in the Valley, we hope you will give us a chance to serve you. We are here for that purpose, and would count it a pleasure to number you among our customers."

In commenting on the foregoing, Mr. Thompson said:

"It is futile to everlastingly state to the public that you are selling at cost or below it. Any thinking person knows that you are either lying, or if you are telling the truth you are going broke."



Treat Customers As Friends

Mr. Thompson discussed the attitude of the leading manufacturers to-day who assume some responsibility for their goods until they are in the consumers' hands and until they have given satisfaction to the ultimate user. "The retailer must, in some measure, take the same attitude," said Mr. Thompson. "Everything we retailers sell is sold to our friends. Our enemies don't deal with us. If we want to keep our friends, our interest must not wane until the goods have given satisfaction. I feel that a grocer doing a family trade should feel that he can 'take tea' with any of his customers and feel that he has given them 100 cents worth of value for every dollar he has collected from them. The family trade is what counts. The trade you can figure on, the trade on which good will is built."

North Vancouver has a retail merchants' association branch of thirty members, a fairly high percentage of the "possible."

R. M. A. ELECT OFFICERS

At a recent meeting of the Quebec City branch of the Retail Merchants' Association the following officers were elected:—president, Francois Bouret, vice-president, Ernest Lapointe, 2nd vice-president L. E. Martel, 3rd vice-president, Napoleon Moisan, treasurer A. A. Lacasse, and secretary Charles Martel.

Should Know Average Gross Profit

Results of a Year's Test in 58 Retail Grocery Stores—Fifty Dollars of Every Hundred Invested in Grocery Stock Goes to Buy Sugar, Milk, Butter, Eggs and Bread—A Comparison of Food Costs of 1918 and 1922—Grocers' Biggest Volume of Business is in Dairy Produce

By Staff Correspondent Canadian Grocer

MONTREAL, Nov. 1.—The New York Federal Food Board in 1918 made a study of the retail grocery trade with a view to examining some of the problems of the retail grocer and their reaction on the cost of food products. This report was not published until this year when it was prepared particularly for the benefit of the grocer so that he might take it as a guide in studying his own business and perhaps find one or two new angles from which to approach his own problems. Although the figure given in the report pertain to the grocery trade in the state of New York the conditions and the quantity of food products are typical of the general trade, particularly in the cities.

Analyzing Buying

This study was made by analyzing the purchase bills of 58 retail stores for the period of one year. Purchase bills were analyzed in preference to sales slips in order to save the immense amount of work that such a procedure would involve. Had the sales slips been analyzed, the only differences that should occur between purchases and sales would have been ascribable to products deteriorated to such an extent as to be unfit for human consumption, and to variations in profits. Intelligent buying and handling make these differences for staple products a comparatively negligible factor.

Dairy Produce Takes Most Capital

From a careful analysis of the books of these 58 stores it was found that for every $100 worth of merchandise bought $35.50 went to purchase dairy produce, that is butter, cheese, eggs, milk and butter substitutes. Of the total $13.13 went to buy butter alone. The next large item was bread and flour for which $16.33 was spent. Canned goods were the third largest item and sugar fourth, even at the then high price of sugar. Approximately $50 out of every hundred dollars of money invested by the grocer is spent upon butter, eggs, milk, bread and sugar. Naturally in the country districts the grocers do not sell as many or as much dairy products.

Comparison of Volume and Profit

It is interesting to note how percentage of gross profit based on selling price compares with the percentage of total trading. Butter which has the largest trading volume of any single product yields the smallest percentage of gross profit.

One of the largest gross profits shown in the analysis was on potatoes which gave a gross profit of 23.53 per cent. Canned tomatoes ran high at 20.31 per cent. It can therefore be seen that the percentage of profit varied almost inversely to the volume of trading. When a product is turned over rapidly, it costs the merchant less to handle and he can afford to take a smaller percentage of profit and still show over a given period a larger gross profit.

Big Reduction in Outlay

During the past four years there has been a big reduction in the cost of food products, and therefore in the outlay necessary to keep up the retail stocks. The accompanying chart shows a comparison of 1918 and 1922 prices for the month of October. This reduction is so general as shown here that the percentages should although slightly changed during the past four years, due to the decreased cost of the products, still be typical of the grocery business in the larger cities.

A COMPARISON OF FOOD COSTS

	Oct. 1918	Oct 1922
Butter prints per lb. . .	.50	.37
Cheese	.25	.23
Lard prints per lb. . . .	.33	.20
Eggs, new laid, per doz	.60	.48
Canned Tomatoes, standard, 2½'s	2.30	1.42
Canned corn, standard 2's	2.35	1.20
Canned peas, standard	1.45	1.45
Sugar, granulated	9.50	7.50
Coffee, Maracaibo	.31	.47
Teas, good black	.57	.60
Rolled oats, per 90 lbs.	5.50	3.10
Apples wealthy's per barrel	7.00	5.50

Analyses of Percentage Differences

In comparing the volume of trade and the percentage of profit of one product with another, it will be observed that while the 35.5 per cent .of the total volume of trade is in dairy products and 13.80 per cent. is in butter only, 1.20 per cent. of the total volume is trade in cheese, yet cheese shows on the gross profit 15.05 per cent. and butter only 7.84 per cent. So butter makes about one half the percentage of gross profit that is made on cheese and involves the expenditure of a little less than twice the capital per pound. On the other hand it must be considered that butter is used as a leader in the trade, a product on which a price is well established and a necessity of life. The investigation showed moreover that the average cost of merchandising in the grocery business, taken from stores of all types was 14.1 per cent. of the gross sales. It was also shown that the largest percentage of profit on any dairy produce was on milk which yielded 12.44 on selling price. It would therefore seem that in the final analysis that dairy products are sold at a net loss by the retail grocer. In many instances however these products might be listed as advertising products for many grocers use them as a feature.

Keeping in mind that in this investigation it was found that the average cost of selling was 14.1 per cent. of gross sales, it is interesting to see what the percentage of gross profit based on the selling price of certain staple commodities was found to be. Butter yields 7.84; bread 12.99; sugar 9.66; canned fish 19.78; canned tomatoes 20.31; raisins 16.16; canned corn 18.42 and cornmeal 24.16. This can be checked up by the retail grocer by figuring the percentage of profit on some of the lines in his own stock. The present cost of canned tomatoes is approximately $1.45 a doz. for standard. These being sold at 15c a tin would yield the grocer today 19.44 on the selling price, which is not far off the estimate made in 1918.

How to Apply Findings

In the case of sugar only about half the percentage of profit is obtained that is derived from canned goods. Moreover, each pound of sugar has to be weighed wrapped and tied and the chances of loss through handling and wastage is great. On the other hand less capital is involved or is necssarily involved than in the sale of canned goods and from seven to ten times the quantity is sold. Knowing this and by keeping an accurate account of purchases and sales in this item, a grocer can make a special effort to cut down the overhead cost on this particular item and eliminate some of the shrinkage at least. His monthly figures will measure his success and the report will not only encourage extra care and economy but it will give the grocer some satisfaction. A definite example of how this works out is that it can be plainly seen by the figures that it costs less to sell fairly large quantities of sugar at one time than to make a number of sales of smaller quantities Every sale no matter how carefully it is executed represents a shrinkage in the percentage of profits.

A Worth While Task

It will prove worth while for the retail grocer to compute his volume of trading for each commodity handled, but it should not stop there. He should know also his average gross profit based on selling prices, and the comparative labor required in handling a given product. Above all he should know his service costs. He would then be in a position to make comparisons between stocks that pay and those that do not. He could also determine which were worth while featuring as leaders to attract trade and which could be discarded as a source of profit leakage.

"Who Was Your Last Grocer?" Should Be First Question Before Extending New Credits

Victoria, B.C. Merchant Says That When Any New Customer Asks Him for Credit That There Are Always a Few Questions He Likes to Have Answered—It is the Grocer's Safeguard

VICTORIA, B. C.—"No customer whose record is clean with all grocers will take offence at being asked fair questions by a grocer to whom she is applying for a credit account," states F. L. Honor, of the McKenzie Street Grovery, Victoria, B. C.

"When any new customer applies to me for goods to be paid for other than at the time, I have a few questions that I ask—and have answered. The first is 'Who was your last grocer?' This is the most important question that you could have answered. If you know him or not, it is easy to find out from him whether he has any bills still standing against this customer. Your fellow grocer will be glad to answer any such question.

Should be Fullest Co-Operation

"Ordinarily there should be the fullest co-operation between all retailers on such matters. It is an advantage to the trade as a whole that the 'dead beat' cannot go on swindling one grocer after another. We have a credit bureau in Victoria that gives good service. Frequently I have been approached by new customers asking for credit, and then found, before I had sent the first order that unpaid balances were standing at other grocers. It has frequently happened that customers from other points came here and left accumulated accounts at home. While the men were coming in from all parts to work in the shipyards the credit bureau was of the greatest advantage. Without some service it is impossible to judge correctly every time. I almost got 'stung' on one of the members of the legislature here who 'breezed in' one morning, recited the list of groceries needed and gave his name and the address to which the order was to be delivered. Although his account might have been considered gilt edge, I applied to the bureau for information and found that a complete record of this individual was on file and the number and amounts of his indebtedness to various retailers was ample warning to me. I phoned up and advised that the order would go forward C. O. D. pending credit being finally arranged. The driver got the money in full but I never got another order. I presume that some merchant who does not use a credit bureau service is at the present time under the delusion that that prominent public man's account is as good as gold.

"The most dangerous man that the grocer has to contend with is his fellow grocer who is not a member of any association and does not subscribe to any credit bureau. The fact that he may contract bad debts is his own loss, but the fact that he will contract bad debts and not tip off the other grocers to the dead beats is a distinct menace to the whole trade."

The Ideal Arrangement

Mr. Honor says that the ideal business is 66 per cent. cash and 33 per cent. credit. During the present time the ratio has slipped to a fifty-fifty basis, but with careful attention to the credit risks Mr. Honor considers that business in this proportion may be safely and profitably conducted.

"Who was your last grocer?" That is the first and most vital question to ask the customer who applies for credit and the customer with a clean record will not 'hum and haw' about giving the information.

And Still They Come

Lady (in grocery store)—I'd like a pound of alphabet crackers, please. My children make sentences out of them, so will you please put in a few oyster crackers for periods.

Learning Something From the Chains

How Can You Plan to Increase Your Average Sale Unless You Know What It Is Now?—Chain Organizations Follow a Plan of Knowing the Exact Number of Items in Their Stock

By HENRY JOHNSON, JR.

WHEN you ring your cash register, what is your average sale? Not one chance in several hundred that you know. Yet you should know—you can very easily know. The chains know.

How can you plan to increase your average sale unless you know what it is now? Live merchants are working along these lines constantly. The chain organization enjoys no monopoly of brains or industry. Any grocer can do most of the things done by chains to increase their efficiency if he will. It's up to him.

How many items are there in your stock? Again, you don't know. But the chains know—you should know. It is really very important that you should know.

Chains do not start large. They grow. How and why they grow is important for us to know—not that they are large now.

The Story of a Successful Chain Store Man

He had a trifle of capital. With that he bought out a single store. It was a small but prosperous store with well established trade. Nothing remarkable about that, is there?

No; but he worked. So did his wife. The business grew. To-day he has around 110 stores. He is opening new ones so rapidly that I can not keep track. He will have 200 by December 31 and probably 350 by the end of next year.

How does he do it?

Knows Precisely Where He is Going

Well, for one thing, he knows. He does not guess. Nor is he satisfied to know anything in the ordinary, orthodox way. When he learns all about any angle of his business in the customary way, he goes at it another way. He turns it upside down, wrong side to, inside out in his further investigations. Then he watches for more things to study and investigate from new angles.

For instance: How much more do you get in every day, on the average, than you pay out? "For what?" you ask. Never mind that now; the question is, how much more do you get in? Try it from that angle. Put down everything you have paid out—never mind for what—during the past four weeks, and see how much more money you have got in.

Remember, that in the last analysis, items are secondary. If you know nothing about items but always manage to get in more than you pay otu, you will make money. If you fail to do that, no matter what else you may do, the sheriff eventually will tack a sign on your door. And he won't bother you about items, either. He'll just want so much money to make up your deficit—and he'll proceed to get it!

Well, to get back to this merchant. He has one cardinal rule. He will carry 2,000 items in stock, or less—never more. If you convince him that a thing you offer him is desirable, he may stock it. If he does, he will make room for it by discounting something he already carries. That is one of his rules.

And, by the way, a peculiarity of chain store rules is that they are regarded seriously and lived up to rigidly—by the whole push of the organization, beginning with the man who made them! That's not a bad point to bear in mind.

Not All Rules the Same in All Chains

There is another chain. It is much bigger than this one I have referred to. It formerly carried 1,450 items. Now it carries 450. It made the reduction in about sixty days. There is a big difference, and there are important reasons behind such rules and limitations.

For example, this chain formerly carried 22 kinds of soap. Now it limits varieties to six. How many do you carry? I have met up with little grocers everywhere with their shelves so loaded with all the brands of canned coffee imaginable that they had little room for other things. How many have you?

It is a wonderful thing to have a stock limit. It will safeguard you from a thousand fool buys of stock that never will bring your money back, to say nothing of profit. Where is the average grocer who does not every little while part with anywhere from $25 to $75 on a gamble, for stuff he has no real reason to think he will sell?

The Tragedy of Unredeemed Coupons

Commenting on the woeful carelessness of the average grocer, a chain manager recently told me that only 45% of manufacturers' coupons are cashed by grocers. He said:

"Think of that; less than half of the coupons which grocers take in exchange for merchandise for which they have paid are ever presented for redemption!"

How about you? When Mrs. Smithson's little girl presents a coupon which calls for a full sized bar of Dumdum soap, what do you do with it? The records show that you lose, or mislay, or burn up, or sweep out more than half such things. There is no doubt about it. Those manufacturers give them out. They know. There are the figures. And the chains are amazed at such wasteful, careless methods.

You will have to hustle a long time about your store to make a nickel in actual profit. Why not have some system to insure the saving of nickels you hand out to miscellaneous customers?

A chain store man showed me a time ago that his average net profit on prunes was .256%. That means something over 2½%. And he knew he got that. What do you make on prunes? Do you know anything about it?

Another chain merchant has run a series of ads, to educate customers to the truth that it is greater economy to buy and eat medium and small sized prunes than large ones. Any grocer anywhere can cash in on that kind of advertising. Probably those "independents" who saw those ads growled out: "tain't true. He's just stuck on some little prunes and wants to unload before he loses too much on them." But it is true. Be not deceived; the chain man is not losing many buys. Nor is he fool enough to attempt to build trade on deception. He builds on the solid

A Display of Fruit That Attracted Much Comment Because of Its Distinctively Artistic Arrangement

J. E. Ker & Co., St. James Street, Montreal, have developed the sale of fruit to the point where the sales mount as high as eleven thousand dollars per month. Displays such as the above constitute a strong factor in the success of this business. Tempting arrangements, as this one is, act like a magnet in getting people into the store.

Illustrating the interior of the store of Nation and Shewan, at Brandon, Man. The store has been decorated for the Christmas season, and presents a very attractive appearance. Display front counters, it will be noticed, are a feature of the equipment that makes for good service.

Paying the Staff on a Bonus System

Plan Works Out With Great Satisfaction, According To The General Manager in Montreal of A. Martin & Co.—Gives the Clerks a Real Incentive to Build Up Sales

By Staff Correspondent Canadian Grocer

MONTREAL.—Paying the staff on a bonus system which is dependent upon the percentage of increase or decrease in department sales is the plan that has been adopted by A. Martin & Co., Ltd., who operate 28 retail provision stores in the City of Montreal. According to the general manager of these stores, this plan has worked out splendidly so far, and it has been in operation for some time. The idea is to give the clerks a real interest in building up sales and to make them see the business from an angle apart from that of being to work on time in the morning and being at their posts throughout the day. In speaking to a Canadian Grocer representative about this plan, the manager said: "We realized, in operating so many retail stores, that there is a great need of stimulating the clerks' interest in salesmanship. When they have a real interest in seeing the sales built up they have an incentive to work towards that end."

Details of Plan

The plan adopted by this firm is that a fair average of daily sales in each department is taken, and the clerks are paid at a flat rate on that basis. A bonus rate is determined which is dependent upon the percentage of increase in sales. In other words if for every thousand dollars per week business done by a certain department, the clerks are paid $25 per week and for every hundred dollars increase over the thousand, the clerks get a bonus of $2.50, then when the sales have been built up to one thousand five hundred dollars per week the salesmen in that department would get $37.50 for that week. The manager of each department is paid on the same basis but with a little higher bonus percentage. The figures here are only taken as an example so that the case may be illustrated with ease.

Clerks Pleased

According to the management of this firm the sales staff throughout is well pleased with the system and it has been found that the employees find the work more interesting and less monotonous when they have this very real interest in working for a weekly increase in business.

For some time this firm has also had a system whereby the salesmen are checked up in their efficiency in handling the goods. In the beef department in particular there is need for great care in cutting, dressing and weighing the meat. Each counter is charged up with the weight of meat requisitioned by it during the week. When a sale of meat is made the clerk marks down on the card for the purpose the weight of the piece, the cost per pound and the total amount paid by the customer. At the end of the week this is added up and gives the total sales of meat during the week which once subtracted from the total weight of meat supplied the department is the exact amount of wastage. From these figures the management can determine the degree of efficiency on the part of each clerk with which the meat is prepared for sale and sold.

Looking For New System

Although this firm have many satisfactory systems now working, they are still looking for others with which to keep check on their business, on the work of the staff and on the points where leakage and profits may occur. In their largest store they have a staff of forty men behind the counters and eighteen girls, either behind the counters or in the cash offices. Large as this staff is, it is not sufficient to handle the trade during certain hours on certain days as well as the management would like to see it. This is one of the big problems with which this firm has to contend. It would not pay to increase the staff more than it is at present since during the greater part of the time it is quite ample to meet the demand of the business. However, there are hours on certain days of the week when they cannot handle the demand of the buying public as rapidly as might be expected. This is a problem that is confronting nearly every retail grocer to-day. The only solution seems to be to have the sales staff so trained that they can attend to the customers' wants during these busy hours in such a manner as to show the people that the store is giving the best service possible under the circumstances without any undue rush. Each customer likes to get particular attention to her order and yet they hate to stand around waiting for their turn. The solution, therefore, is to train the selling staff in handling the trade during the rush hours in a diplomatic and good-humored way.

LEARNING SOMETHING FROM THE CHAINS

basis of real value for money—and he enjoys no monopoly on that head! This way lies before any grocer if he will but follow it.

But it's quite a good deal like work to know all these things. One has to think and plan before one can execute; and there must be execution of plans evolved by thought or they will get nobody nowhere.

Many Grocers Are Getting Rich Right Now

Now, don't run off with the idea that I am boosting the chains and turning over to favor them as against "regular" grocers. I am doing nothing of that kind, even if I do not always pat you on the back. Note that I have had nothing whatever to do with evolving any of those markedly successful institutions. I have not made any of these conditions—I simply report them to you.

But I report them straight so that you may profit by what I learn in my wide travels.

Maybe I have been prompted to write all this by the following correspondence. Read it and see:

Dear Sir:—Please send one retail selling chart. Also, I would like same explained if this is figured on the sales end or on cost.

The chart was sent and I wrote him:

If you have followed my articles, I cannot understand how you have any doubt in your mind as to how my tables are figured. Of course, if you have just taken the tables and not read the articles, there is room for doubt. You must pardon me for saying that I can hardly expect to be of much service to merchants who will not read what I write because that is the only way I have of reaching them.

What do you think of all this, Mr. Grocer?

Silverwood's Ltd., London, has purchased the poultry and produce business of Fred Muller, Springfield. Solon Walker is appointed buyer.

One view of the interior of the store of W. C. Bullock, Queen Street West, Toronto—A glass enclosed, sectional counter makes possible a good showing of bulk lines, that has resulted in a very considerable increase of business.

Increases His Sales Fifty per Cent

Displaying Goods in Sectional Display Cases on the Counter Boosts Turnover for These Merchants—Declare That They Are Now Able to Show More Goods and Consequently Get Bigger Turnover

ONE RESULT of the keener competition for business among grocery stores, particularly in the larger centres, is a greater endeavor on the part of the service merchant to display more goods. Canadian Grocer recently made an investigation in connection with this point and found many displays of more goods and in places where they would be easily seen by their customers.

One grocer, W. C. Bullock, Queen St., West, Toronto, has, for instance, installed a fixture on top of his counter made of glass in sections. In each section one particular product is shown such as beans, rice, peas, biscuits, tapioca and other goods that he sells in bulk. Mr. Bullock states that this has increased the sale of these goods considerably. He claims that it is because he is showing more goods than before and that the more goods that are shown the more customers will ask for. The various lines are kept under glass and in a sanitary condition so that power of suggestion, he points out, is very prominent and results in increased business.

James McKinlay, Avenue Road, Toronto, is another merchant who believes in displaying as many goods as possible in order to increase sales. He has a similar glass show case on top of his counter and states that, while he does not know exactly the extent of the increase in sales of goods shown in this case, he is certain that it has been of great assistance on account of it placing the goods in front of his customers.

Sales Up 50 Per Cent. On Goods Displayed

W. P. McCoy, Royce Avenue, Toronto, has also realized that in order to sell more goods more must be shown. He endeavors to keep as many different lines in front of customers as possible, and in a sectional display case on the counter has several lines including tapioca, rice, beans, peas, etc. He believes that this case has easily increased the sale of the goods shown 50 per cent. He states, for instance, that whereas he used to sell about 15 lbs. of a certain-priced tapioca a month he now sells approximately 50 lbs. in the same length of time. In addition to this being a silent saleman this case, Mr. McCoy claims, protects the goods from dust and vermin.

The results he had from showing bulk goods on the counter in this way have given him the idea to display his package goods in a more prominent place so that customers cannot overlook them.

CRANBERRY IS FIRST STARTED ON CAPE COD

The first intensive cultivation of the cranberry was started many years ago on Cape Cod. The average annual production in the United States is about 2,000,000 bushels or less than a quart a year per head population.

There are four main varieties—the cherry, olive, bugle and bell, and these names are descriptive, in a measure, of the varying shapes. As everyone knows, there are light and dark cranberries—some are almost white—but even the lighter shades cook up to the rich cranberry red.

The soil best suited to their production is low ground or peat soil that can be drained a foot below the surface and is at the same time capable of being flooded in winter to protect the roots from freezing. They constitute one of the riskiest of crops, since an early frost often injures or kills the berries.

No More Fruits Are Likely To Be Shipped From Smyrna

British Soldiers Save Some Packing Plants From Destruction—Damage Not as Serious as First Reported—Some Dealers Now Working From Patras

MONTREAL, Oct. 30 (Special)—Fruit dealers in Smyrna report that two or three shipments of raisins were made from that port prior to the recent collapse of the city. No figs or currants have been shipped, however. Fire has destroyed most of the fruit packing establishments and all draft animals have been commandeered by the army, thus preventing the movement of the usual fruit supply to Smyrna from the surrounding country. The destruction of the bridges, railroads and tunnels and cars and the flight of the workmen who handled the export freight will result in a loss of approximately 70 per cent. of the fig crop and in injury to the remainder. The tobacco crop has suffered even more than the raisin crop and the price of tobacco will be much higher than formerly in Europe.

Supplementing this information is a report published in "Commerce Reports" which was received from the United States' Trade representative at Constantinople, who has visited Smyrna since the disaster. He reports that the fruit packing establishments have not been destroyed and that the damage to the railroads is much less than formerly reported. He also reports that about one-half of the large fruit crop will probably be saved.

No Exportation

John T. McBride, president of John T. McBride & Co., Ltd., Montreal, recently received a cable from their agent in Patras, Greece, who moved there from Smyrna during the first half of October. He reports that the British soldiers occupied the offices and packing plant of their firm and that the buildings were all saved, although the stores were seized. He also stated that the retreating soldiers destroyed a good portion of the crops so that they would not fall into Turkish hands and what fruit was taken by the Turks was used as food as they do not know the art of curing the fruit. In his cable he asserted that there will be no exports of figs, currants or raisins from Smyrna this year. Most of the fruit packers and fruit dealers from Smyrna have gone to Patras and are carrying on a business in currants from Greece.

Estimate of Santos Coffee Crop for 1922-23 is Below World's Consumption

Review of the Coffee Situation Indicates Stocks in Europe of All Kinds on October First of 2,294,745 Bags

By L. C. CHRISTENSON, representing Hard & Rand, New York

COFFEE buyers will be interested in a review of the situation at the present time.

Brazilian exchange on London at this date is six and three thirty-seconds pence (6 3/32d) the lowest for many years and for many good reasons, due to the financial condition of the exchanges of the world, showing marked improvement since the war. I refer more particularly to Sterling on which the Brazilian exchange has great bearing. With the advance of this exchange in the conversion by purchases, prices must advance accordingly.

Stocks in Europe of all kinds on October 1st, were 2,294,745 bags. This time last year there were 1,723,681 bags. Coffee afloat for United States 320,600 bags; this time last year 497,200 bags; coffee afloat for Europe and Africa 660,000 bags, against 804,000 bags last year.

The above will give evidence of increased purchases and holdings, more especially to Europe, which has had a great bearing on present crops.

The average estimate of the Santos crop of 1922 and 1923, (beginning with July 1st, 1922) is 7,000,000 Santos, 3,500,000 Rio Victorias, with 5,500,000 of Milds which collectively is below the world's consumption by about 3,000,000 bags.

It is too early to form any conclusion as to what the 1923 and 1924 crop will yield, but the tendency is, from advices from Brazil, that the crops will be increased to some degree and will most likely be needed for consumption.

There is no question but that the consumption of Rio Victoria and Bahia, in Canada as well as the United States, has been much reduced. Thus consumption has fallen largely upon Santos and mild sorts, and the tendency is that there will be a wider difference of values between Rio Victoria and Santos of which as you know, 65 per cent. is contained in blends and sold straight.

To-day's advices from Brazil:—"Markets very firm as well as options on the New York Coffee Exchange."

Returns Wealth of Chocolate Manuf'r to the People

London, Oct. 30.—Glowing memorials to the life and work of George Cadbury, the famous Quaker philanthropist and chocolate manufacturer who died last week, have been published in London newspapers, but little space is given to the unusual action of his daughter, formerly Beatrice Cadbury, but now married to a Hollander named Boeke.

In a letter to the management of the Bourneville chocolate works, Mrs. Boeke gives away outright all her holdings and her husband's in the British Cocoa and Chocolate Company, amounting to 9,000 preferred and 27,000 common shares. The whole amount is presented to a trust committee composed of men's and women's councils in the Bourneville works to promote home and foreign activities. Mrs. Boeke says that the world war, with its appalling consequences, led her to believe that private holding of great capital lies at the root of nearly all social and economic trouble.

"We therefore feel it our duty," she says, "to surrender the privilege we have so long enjoyed, hoping that if such action is generally adopted it will be in the interests of humanity."

FOODSTUFFS DECLINE 1.51 PER CENT. IN OCTOBER

THE AVERAGE wholesale prices of 32 leading staple food commodities during October shows a reduction as compared with the general average during September, of 1.51 per cent. The greatest decline in any one commodity from the high point in September, was in flour which shows a total reduction for the two months of $1.30 per barrel. Canned goods were lower, tomatoes declining 17 cents and corn 25 cents per dozen. Shelled almonds dropped two cents per pound while walnuts were reduced seven cents per pound. During the month of September, potatoes dropped ten cents per bag, but during October the decline was recovered and the month closed at the same figure as at the beginning of the previous month. Cereals held fairly steady, rolled oats showing a slight reduction but cornmeal advanced a shade.. Sugar advanced 50c per hundred and lard, eggs and cheese were higher while butter remained at stationary prices during both September and October.

More Farmers' Stores Closing

IT IS not surprising to find that H. B. Clemes, general manager of the United Farmers Co-operative Company, is closing up a number of the farmers' retail stores in Ontario. The announcement is made this week that the one at 130 King St. E., closed on Saturday night as well as the stores in Harrowsmith, St. Thomas, Dorchester and Plattsville.

It will be remembered that at the last annual meeting of the company, Mr. Clemes intimated that the farmers should stick to their own business and that the work of operating retail stores was out of their province. They had made a success of their own marketing problems, but had lost money on the co-operative stores.

Chain Competition Helps Business

A RETAIL grocer who conducts quite an extensive business recently told Canadian Grocer that a certain store of the chain groceteria type was instrumental in bringing more business to his vicinity. This merchant claims that not only his own business has increased but his neighbors in other lines have also shown a larger turnover since this particular chain "invaded his neighborhood." He said that this chain store attracted customers from city points and also from many smaller places. These people usually drove into the city in their cars and bought their groceries from the groceteria, but as the chain store did not stock many lines such as vegetables, fruits, cooked meats and bacon and others, they must necessarily go to other stores for such goods. He says that when these new buyers in his neighborhood come into his store for some article which they could not purchase in the chain store, that it is only a short step to sell them other articles and after awhile they become regular customers.

This is just another phase to the chain store subject which appears to be a live issue in the retail trade. The above goes to show that although the price competition of the chain stores is probably felt to be serious, that after all it is an ill wind which does not blow someone some good. Merchants who consider the competition of the chain stores on a price basis, would undoubtedly do well to follow in the footsteps of the merchant mentioned above, and pay more attention to quality and goods which the chains do not carry. At any rate it would tend to hold customers who have become restless over the chain prices and keep them interested in your own store.

Poor Jam—A Customer Lost

THE TEMPTATION for the retailer to sacrifice quality for price in buying and selling goods is one that the service merchant must withstand. This temptation seems to be greater in the larger centres where there is considerable chain store competition. Some retailers think that because the chain stores, which do not make delivery, or give other services, are selling goods lower than they, that they are going to lose all their business unless they can meet prices.

Our attention was directed recently to a case where a merchant lost the jam trade of a good family because he was not supplying a good quality jam. The husband in this case absolutely refused to eat the jam that had been purchased from the grocer and insisted on his wife making her own another year. A friend happened a short time later to show him a real good jam, one made by a firm that sticks to quality and not price. He tried it and was immediately converted. His family is now buying that brand of jam continually and has no complaint whatever. Nevertheless their original grocer lost a good account because he tried to sell an inferior product.

Merchants should realize to-day that most people are willing to pay for a quality article, even if the price is a little higher. One sure thing, the sale of a good product does not lower the good will of the merchant in his community. It should be the aim of the aggressive dealer to understand jams so that he will buy intelligently. As a selector of goods for his customers, he cannot afford to jeopardize their confidence by offering something that will not satisfy.

Tact in Handling Customers

IT IS a well-recognized commercial truth that nothing is more vital to the success of any business, wholesale or retail, than the possession of an intelligent sales force. Capable salesmen and saleswomen are even more necessary for the success of a retail store than for a wholesale establishment, and many incidents are told of how clever selling, tact, etc., have obtained sales that otherwise might easily have been lost. Not all of these incidents concern salespersons employed by the larger stores.

There is the "I-will-look-around-some-more-before-I-decide" type of customer who always supplies a problem. Yet, if this kind of customer is properly handled, the final making of the sale is not so difficult. It has been found, by some salesmen, that to force goods on that kind of a prospect is sure to drive him or her to some other store. This type of salesman advises the cautious customer to shop around as much as possible, for he knows that if such a customer returns to the store he does so for the sole purpose of buying. In cases where the customer is not so decisive in his assertions about looking around more first, the salesman in question has two methods of working.

One of these is to ignore the customer's assertion and to present special features of the merchandise that will appeal more strongly to him than the thought of making a round of the stores. The other is to lay aside the article under consideration and to take up something which the salesman knows cannot be beaten by any other store in town.

While the second article is not often sold, unless the customer really wants it, the fact that it beats anything for the price that any competing store can offer frequently causes the customer to regard the disputed article in a more reasonable light and clinches the sale.

Maritimes

James Collins, for many years a grocer on Union Street, St. John, is now a member of the board of assessors for the city of St. John, having retired from the grocery business.

The Water Street Grocery has been opened in a St. John district hitherto avoided by retail grocers and known as the territory of the wholesale grocery only. The new store is located at the corner of Water Street and South Wharf.

J. McGrath and Son, of St. John, who have been conducting a meat and provision business on Prince Edward Street, St. John, have removed to a store recently vacated by J. Isaacs, retail clothier, on Prince Edward Street, opposite the Clarence Street intersection. J. McGrath and Son have installed a line of groceries and will devote half of the large store to the sale of groceries.

F. T. Barbour, of G. E. Barbour and Company, wholesale grocers, has been elected president of the St. John Y.M.C.A. Mr. Barbour succeeds his brother G. E. Barbour of G. E. Barbour and Company. This is the first time in the history of the Y.M.C.A. in the Maritime Provinces and so far as known, in the Dominion, where two brothers have acted as head of one branch of the Y. M. C. A. Both of the Barbour brothers have manifested a deep interest in the St. John Y.M.C.A.

Quebec

E. G. Strenz, sales manager of the Kraft-Maclaren Cheese Co., Montreal was in Toronto this week on a business trip.

R. Carman of the Oxo Limited, London, England, was in Montreal this week on a business trip after making a trip through Canada.

W. S. Ware, general manager of the Kellogg Toasted Corn Flake Co., of Toronto, was in Montreal last week making a business visit to their Quebec representatives, J. L. Freeman Co.

J. H. Williams, a retail grocer, 44 Westminster Ave., Montreal West, is moving this week into his new store which he has just completed, a few doors from his old premises. The new store is much larger than the old one and has accommodation for a fresh meat and fish department with a large display refrigerator. The new store was designed by Mr. Williams and has the advantage of three large display windows.

Charles Chaput

Charles Chaput Celebrates His 83rd Birthday

Montreal, Oct. 30.—Another year has sped around and with it comes another anniversary for Charles Chaput, president of the wholesale grocery firm of L. Chaput Fils & Cie., Montreal. On the 14th of this month Mr. Chaput, one of the pioneers in the grocery business in Canada, celebrates his 83rd birthday. On May 1st, 1922, he celebrated his 65th year in the same firm, which is a unique record.

Mr. Chaput still attends to his duties in his office and refuses to relinquish his executive position. Every morning finds him busy at his desk as in years gone by, and his hobby is his business. He claims that the interest he still enjoys in the grocery business is the power that keeps his vitality up and gives him the energy to go about as he did in his younger days.

Ontario

J. B. McMilne, Smithville, has sold his store to M. Harris.

The Sunny Cup Tea and Coffee Company have recently opened a new store on Roncesvalles Ave., Toronto.

James J. O'Loane, export manager, O'Loane, Kiely & Co., Vancouver, B. C., has been in Eastern Canada on a business trip. He was in Toronto last week and will return West by way of Chicago and St. Paul. Mr. O'Loane states his firm is opening an office in China.

The annual convention of the Canadian Produce Association will be held at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, on January 8 and 9.

The Carling Distributing Co. of London, Ont., have amalgamated with George G. Yorke & Co., Toronto, and distribution will in future be taken care of from the premises of the latter firm.

C. McIlhargey, who for the past seventeen years has been president of the Stratford Wholesale Grocery Co., Stratford, has severed his connection with that firm. W. D. Martin is the new president and M. W. Binkley, formally of Drumbo, is the vice-president.

M. W. Binkley, who for nearly twenty years has conducted a general store in Drumbo, has sold his business to W. S. Murray. Mr. Binkley is moving to Stratford where he has become associated with the Stratford Wholesale Grocery Co.

Simply Arranged Display of Honey Increases Sales

London, Ont. (Special).—Scandrett's Grocery has been boosting sales of honey by a very simply arranged but attractive showing of various sized jars and tins. Clover leaf fixtures adjusted so as to hold three of the smaller jars assisted materially in helping to make the display artistic. The honey was arranged on white tissue paper on the floor of the window in little pyramids and triangles with the clover leaf fixtures placed evenly between them. This plan permits of an endless variety of arrangement and the effects depend upon the skill of the window dresser. Scandrett's display was not only pleasing but a business getter and the honey commenced to move almost as soon as the window was dressed.

A pyramid of cans of salmon in an adjoining window seemed to interest housewives equally and there was a heavy call for it.

TOWN OF ORMSTOWN, QUE. SUFFERS HEAVY FIRE LOSS

Fire that broke out in the general store of McGorrigle and Son, in Ormstown, Quebec, the other night, threatened at one time the destruction of the entire town. The Bank of Commerce building, a grist mill and three private houses nearby were badly damaged. Aid was sent from Montreal.

Must Think in Terms of Weight Instead of Measure, When Selling Potatoes

Rulings of the Root Vegetables Act Are Expounded and Made Plain to the Members of the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association—Must Sell Potatoes by the Pound

OTTAWA, Oct. 30 (Special).—An opportunity of obtaining an exact definition of the Root Vegetables Act, as well as the point of view of those in charge of the administration, was afforded the members of the Ottawa Grocers' Association by the presence of Capt. L. F. Burrows, one of the officials of the Fruit Branch of the Department of Agriculture, at a recent meeting.

"From now on you have got to think in terms of weight instead of measure when selling potatoes," said Capt. Burrows. He pointed out that the grocers would have to adopt every means within their power to educate the housewife to ask for so many pounds of potatoes instead of so many gallons. "In order to make it easy for you to figure out the retail price of a pound of potatoes, we are endeavoring to educate the wholesalers to sell by the hundred pounds instead of by the ninety-pound bag, as in the past," said the official. "What you have got to bear in mind is that there is no longer any such thing as a gallon or a bag of potatoes."

Someone asked: "How many pounds are we supposed to sell to the gallon?"

"There is the very thing I want to emphasize," replied Capt. Burrows. "We want you to forget the gallon, and we want you to educate your customers to forget it also. You are to sell them so many pounds at so much a pound. There is no such thing as so many pounds to the gallon."

How About the Hucksters?

Another member wanted to know how the Department proposed to hold the hucksters on the market to this arrangement. It would hardly be reasonable to expect every huckster to carry a set of scales on his rig.

The answer to this question was that the hucksters would be expected to weigh their potatoes at home and place them in baskets or other containers, with the number of pounds marked on the container. In this connection, he called attention to the fact that the Act compelled all who sold potatoes by the bag to: "mark the initial of his Christian name and his full surname and address, and the grade of the potatoes or onions as prescribed by the Act, in a plain and indelible manner, before the package is taken from the place where it is packed."

"Any retailer buying his supplies on the local market," asserted Capt. Burrows, "should insist upon the above provisions of the Act being carried out, because if he has any reason to suspect that he is not receiving fair weight, he will have the producer's own written statement to bear out any claims he may wish to make in any proceedings which might follow."

Must Sell By Grade

Another point emphasized by Capt. Burrows was that retailers would be expected from now on to sell by grade. The various grades, he thought, were clearly defined in the Act.

Upon the suggestion of Duncan Bell, a resolution was adopted calling upon the Government to furnish all grocers with cards calling attention to the changes in question. These cards could be placed in various parts of the store and would, undoubtedly, go a long way towards bringing the public in line with the amended regulations.

Practice of Giving Coupons

Opposition to the practice of issuing coupons was voiced by a number of the members, and a resolution was passed authorizing the secretary of the Dominion Board of the Retail Merchants' Association to take whatever steps are necessary to have it abolished.

This system was characterized by some as a nuisance and a hindrance to business. The coupons in question are those which are included in manufacturers' advertisements and which call upon the grocer to issue a certain article to the holder, either without cost or at a reduced price. One or two dealers stated that they had refused to accept the coupons, thereby antagonizing their customers. Their reason for not accepting them was that they felt the practice was illegal.

Those who attended the meeting were: A. E. Kelly, chairman; C. J. Allan, secretary; Duncan Bell, treasurer; T. W. Collins, Alfred Walsh, A. S. Moreland, R. W. Porteous, J. Paterson, T. Bowman, W. Neate, T. A. C. Kennedy, D. G. Cowan, R. A. Wright, A. Thompson. K. L. MacIntosh, H. J. Hill, J. Gladstone, James Regan and P. G. Allan.

Young Woman Head of Large Wholesale and Retail Business

Quebec City, Oct. 30. (Special).—In Quebec City there is a unique example of a grocery business entirely under the control of a young woman. Miss A. Guerard, although a mere girl, is the manager and buyer of Georges Patry & Co., wholesale and retail grocery, which was owned by the late Georges Patry who, while attempting to save one of his children from drowning, lost his life a little over a year ago.

Since then Miss Guerard has taken full control of the business for the widow of the deceased owner. To a traveller or salesman who has not known Miss Guerard before she took control it is somewhat of a surprise to be ushered into this young woman's office when he asks to see the manager of the store, which is one of the largest in Quebec City.

She has spent eight years in the business and, as she told a Canadian Grocer representative, she likes every detail of it. "If I did not," she said, "I could not make a success of it. One must take a real interest in the work to make it go and to me it has a fascination. I like buying and I thoroughly enjoy working out systems and plans to keep the sales up. The main feature of a successful grocery business to my mind is a system that keeps the grocer accurately informed of the true condition of the business and its weak and strong points. One can not do it blindfolded."

U.F.O. Closing Retail Stores That Are Not Showing Good Results

Toronto, Nov. 1. (Special).—"We are closing out our retail stores that are not showing a satisfactory volume of business," H. B. Clemes, manager of the United Farmers' Co-operative Co., of Ontario, told a representative of Canadian Grocer, in commenting on the closing of the retail store at 130 King Street E. Stores at Harrowsmith, St. Thomas, Dorchester and Plattsville have also been closed. Asked as to whether it was his intention to close all stores operated by this company, Mr. Clemes stated that such was not the intention at present. Stores showing a profit will be continued for some time.

"This is in line with your policy, closing out the retail stores, it is not?" Mr. Clemes was asked.

"Yes, it is. I still believe that if we stick to the livestock end of our business and the creamery we will find the greatest success."

It will be remembered that Mr. Clemes made the statement at the annual meeting of the United Farmers, last winter, that retailing was not in their province and if they devoted all their attention to the marketing of their livestock and continued conducting the creamery business, they would find it to their advantage.

The Dominion Live Stock Branch of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, has received a report from England that Gunns Ltd. have been awarded a bronze medal in the Colonial bacon class at the Royal Dairy Show in London. The bacon was made from the Yorkshire type of hogs.

Over 146,000,000 Bus. of Wheat Already Have Been Marketed

Winnipeg, Nov. 1.—Movement eastward of the Western Canadian wheat crop continues very heavy and is breaking all previous records. Up to Friday night, Oct. 20, farmers had delivered at country elevators 146,721,445 bushels. Of this amount 45,000,000 was still in country elevators, and 95,920,800 bushels had been inspected. It is estimated that 16,000,000 bushels are en route now to the head of the lakes.

There has been shipped from Fort William and Port Arthur, up to Friday night, lake and rail, 60,163,672 bushels, and the amount still in store at the lake terminals was 24,828,793 bushels, an increase of 5,377,479 from the previous week. There is also in store in the lake terminals the following coarse grains: Oats, 2,194,183; barley, 2,553,894; flax, 283,487; rye, 2,149,406 bushels. The total capacity of the lake terminal elevators is about 50,000,000 bushels, and the total grain now in store is 31,809,793 bushels.

Shippers say that every effort will be made to get every bushel possible across the lakes during November or before the close of navigation, but eastern port channels are plugged with grain, boats are scarce and are being badly delayed from discharging their cargoes, and unless there is a distinct improvement in shipping facilities in the immediate future, it is feared the close of navigation will find large stocks in terminal elevators which will quickly become filled, and there will be a backing up in the western movement and possibly an embargo placed against loading cars for Fort William and Port Arthur. The shipping facilities at Vancouver are now plugged and an embargo has been put in force today against further car shipments to that port.

Want Higher Fees Put on Peddlers in City of Calgary

Calgary, Nov. 1.—Retail grocers of Calgary, represented by H. M. Jenkins, J. Shenkmin, F. Tankston, W. Batten, L. Irwin and H. J. Fleming met the legislative committee of the city council the other day to complain that pedlars are permitted to sell fruit and vegetables on Wednesday afternoons and after 6 p. m. other days when the grocery stores are compelled to close. They said the city receives a license fee of $50 each from 63 pedlars, while there are 160 grocers in the city paying business tax. In some cases this business tax from one merchant would equal the total received from the pedlars.

They ask that the license be increased and that the pedlars be confined to the same hours as the merchants. It was stated that some pedlars sell sugar, tea and spices and even fruit sealers.

The committee consisted of Aldermen A. McTaggart, chairman; George Webster, Andy Davidson and Mrs. Annie Gale, most of whom expressed the opinion that it hardly seemed fair for the pedlars to have privileges denied the merchants, for while the merchants might sell fruit after hours, the Factory Act hindered them from keeping open to do so. The delegation was assured the condition would be remedied if possible.

AN END TO THE WEEKLY HALF HOLIDAY IN BRANDON

Brandon, Man. (Special).—At the request of 75 per cent. of the grocers of the city, a by-law was recently passed by the city council putting an end to the weekly half holiday. The early closing on Saturday nights is also done away with. The hour for closing on that night is now 11 o'clock. It is claimed by the former advocates of the early closing that this change has been brought about by the fact that other stores in a different line of business have been going in largely for groceries, making competition very keen.

Plays Heroic Part In Recent Disaster In Northern Ontario

Many stories have come out of Northern Ontario relating to the presence of mind and heroism of traveling salesmen who happened to be in the Haileybury district at the time of the disastrous fire. Another one tells of the splendid assistance that Robert W. Vout, a Red Rose Tea salesman, rendered to a number of the destitute. "Bob" was chased by flames for hours. At times he was apparently hemmed in completely with little prospect of surviving. His clothes were burned. At one time he sought refuge in a stone and cement church with slate roof, only to dash out later as the structure burst into flames. He was knocked down by a flaming telephone pole and rescued by a friend. Then he helped to evacuate a hospital.

When finally he got through these horrors, the only thing he had intact was his sample case with a quantity of tea. A fire was built on the beach and dozens of women were soon served with hot tea. Mr. Vout had arrived in Haileybury about 4 o'clock in the afternoon from North Cobalt with the idea of getting out by the next car, but there was no next. It then became a life and death struggle and he not only won out but helped a large number of others to escape the flames.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

CONTINUED strength marks the sugar market this week, the price basis being $7.75 per cwt., Montreal delivery. There is a much better demand reported, and altogether, the situation is firmer. Some sales, however, are being made under the listed price. Refiners' prices in the United States have advanced 10 points, the price basis there being $7 and $6.90 per cwt. A recent estimate of world production of sugar for 1922-23 places it at 17,824,000 tons as against 17,461,668 tons for the preceding season.

An advance in flour is reported this week. In view of the strong position of the wheat market, higher prices on flour were inevitable. Certain cereals, too, are also very strong. Rolled oats are quoted higher this week, and cornmeal is very strong. Shipments of western oats are held up on account of the heavy movement of wheat from the West, and this is said to be the reason of the stronger market for rolled oats. Canned goods are moving in good volume with prices showing little change as compared with a week ago. Dried fruits are selling freely. New currants to arrive in the course of a week are quoted. Prices are strong for the same. New California raisins are now available. Advices received by importers in this country from their houses in the far East indicate that the remaining crops of Sultanas and figs in Smyrna and the interior have been definitely lost for the season. There will, therefore, it is declared, be no arrivals of these fruits on this continent following the small supplies that got out of Smyrna at the beginning of the new crop during the last days of August.

Coffee is a very firm market at the present time. Teas are continuing their upward trend, and the market on spot is generally stronger. Nuts are for the most part steady. Rice is in moderate demand and is firm. Fruits and vegetables are much the same as a week ago.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Nov. 1.—Grocery markets continue to show an improvement in general with more activity and interest noted in both retail and wholesale circles. Buying shows a marked improvement since restocking is absolutely necessary in many lines which, with the firmer tone evident, has been on a better scale than for some time. Sugar took another 25c jump and the list price, which is being fully maintained is now $7.75 a cwt. for granulated. The raw market also shows an advance. Canned goods are firm with a strong future and comparatively heavy buying. The dried fruit market is in a healthy condition with a tendency towards an advance in prunes and raisins. Many retailers are ordering prunes to meet future requirements. There is nothing of note in the spice market. Primary markets in coffee show strength but there is no sign of an immediate change locally. Teas are strong and only keen price competition is avoiding an advance in wholesale prices. The nut market is firm with another advance in jumbo peanuts. There is no change in rices. The cereal market shows particular strength with another advance in the miller's price on rolled oats.

Montreal.

COFFEE.—There is no change in the local coffee market but in New York a stronger note is evident with some advances. Coffee dealers state that the local demand has shown a marked improvement but that they do not look for a change in price in the near future.

ROLLED OATS ADVANCE

Montreal.

CEREALS.—Further advances have been made by the millers on rolled oats but the wholesale trade has not yet made the change. Competition and price cutting has staved off the advance so far but the change is due to come since the strength in the cereal market appears to be permanent. Millers state that there is a good supply of milling oats in the west but that deliveries have been poor and at the same time there has been a big demand for the finished product. Congestion in shipping and railroad handling is the main cause of the strength in the market through scarcity of supplies at the mills. Wheat products are in the same position for the same reason and other cereals show strength in sympathy. The cereal market is in a good condition in this province.

RICE MARKET STEADY

Montreal.

RICE.—There is no change of note in the rice market. Advice from England is that Oriental rices are firmer and the easier trend that had been expected did not materialize. American rices are also firm. The local market shows some improvement in buying. Millers state that the present price on rice is about 25 per cent above normal values.

CANNED GOODS ACTIVE

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—The canned goods market is active with good buying and a firm note throughout. List prices are well maintained locally and the retail trade has taken a keen interest in buying. Tomatoes in particular are firm and orders from the United States have been placed with Canadian canners. The demand has been even greater than was expected since the retail stocks were very low and replenishment was absolutely necessary just as soon as the new goods were on the market. This heavy buying has placed the canned goods market in a healthy position.

DRIED FRUITS FIRM

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—The dried fruit market is in a healthy condition with a marked improvement in buying. As compared with a year ago prices are lower but there is a strong tone almost throughout that gives the retail trade confidence in buying. The Prune and Apricot Association of California have this week withdrawn their prices on shipments from the coast and state that they are sold out for the next ninety days at least. This is an indication of the strength of the market. Santa Clara prunes are in a strong position locally and buying is heavier since many retailers are ordering now in anticipation of their future needs. The same strength is evident in raisins. The currant market stands firm.

W. C. Macdonald Reg'd Announce Declines

W. C. Macdonald Reg'd., Inc., have announced a drop of 50c. per thousand in the price of Macdonald's Cigarettes. This decline follows the recent drop recorded in the wholesale price of Brier half-pound tins. Other price reductions are a 10c. drop in "Honeysuckle" the new Bright Chewing, and a further 20c. drop in "Pilot" package smoking.

SUGAR UP 25 CENTS

Montreal.

SUGAR.—Another advance came in the price of granulated sugar early this week making the list price for all the refineries $7.75 a cwt. The raw market has also strengthened and the latest sales have been made at 3 7/8c. c. & f. New York. The wholesale trade does not show much confidence in the advancing market and many wholesalers still express their intention to limit their buying to small lots to meet immediate requirements. The retail trade is liquidating stocks which were bought at the lower levels. Opinions on the future of this market vary but refiners state that the offerings of raws are small and that the trade, from the standpoint of the refiners, is steady with a strong tone.

STRENGTH IN TEAS

Montreal.

TEAS.—As far as price changes are concerned there are no new developments in the tea market locally but the position is steadily gaining strength. The trend is undoubtedly upward for the future and in this market only keen competition prevents an immediate advance in some grades. Some wholesalers predict marked advances for next month. Green teas also maintain a strong position.

GOOD DEMAND FOR NUTS

Montreal.

NUTS.—The wholesale trade reports a good demand for nuts. Pecans and peanuts are the feature with some advances in both. Walnuts are unchanged and almonds have an easy tendency, although since the new arrivals there has been a firmer tone. All the new nuts are now in except filberts which are expected on Nov. 5th. Jumbo peanuts are ½c. higher and Spanish have gone up 1c.

IMPROVEMENT IN PACKAGE GOODS

Montreal.

PACKAGE GOODS.—Some improvement is noted in package goods, particularly in package cereals where price cutting has upset list prices in the past few weeks. Some of the wholesalers have adjusted their prices slightly although cutting still remains. The demand, however, shows a marked improvement all around. One manufacturer stated that in the past four years the sale of their package line has shown an improvement of four to one and that the improvement has been most marked in the past year. Kraft-Maclaren cheese loaf and Pimento loaf has been advanced one half cent per lb., on account of the higher values on Canadian cheese.

ORANGES LOWER

Montreal.

FRUIT.—There is little of interest in the fruit market. Oranges are easier in price and California fruit is selling at from $9 to $10 per box. Malaga grapes in kegs are quoted at $7.10. Apples are in good supply and prices are easy. The first Florida grapefruit on the market were slightly off color and the season for the better grades is just opening.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Nov. 1.—There is a moderate movement of groceries at the present time, wholesalers state, but buying for the early Christmas trade is not heavy as yet. Rolled oats are quoted in a stronger market this week. The slow movement of Western oats to market is responsible, it is stated, for the stronger situation. Cornmeal is also very firm, and some dealers quote higher prices. Both flour and millfeeds are advanced this week, the former 30 cents per barrel, and the latter one dollar per ton. Sugar is higher and the market is strong for the same, and there is a better demand. Canned goods are for the most part steady, with some wholesalers quoting canned lobsters higher. Dried fruits are in good demand. Prices on new crop currants to arrive about Nov. 10, are quoted. Hallowee dates are quoted slightly lower. Shipments of new Californian raisins are now available. Teas continue to show strength and coffee is firm.

BETTER DEMAND FOR BEANS

Toronto.

BEANS.—Prices show no change as far as beans are concerned this week. There is a very good inquiry for the same at present values. Canadian hand picked and 1lb. pickers are quoted at from 3 to 3.25 per bus. Cal. limas are from 11 to 11½c per lb.

CEREALS IN A STRONGER MARKET

Toronto.

CEREALS.—Considerable strength is manifested in the market for rolled oats and cornmeal in the past week. The heavy movement of wheat from the West, it is stated, is responsible for a curtailed movement of oats, and this fact has stimulated values of oat products. The corn market too is very strong, and higher prices are consequently named on corn products. Rolled oats in 90s are still quoted by some dealers at $3.25, but other wholesalers are asking as high as $3.50. Corn flour is quoted at from $3 to $3.10 for 98s. Split peas are somewhat easier in price at from $5.50 to $5.75 per bag and the Marrowfats are from $7.75 to $8.50.

NEW RAISINS ON THIS MARKET

Toronto

DRIED FRUITS.—New currants to arrive about November 10, are quoted, Filiatras, ½ cases, 17½c to 18c; ½ cases Amalias 18c to 18½c and ½ cases

Patras 18 to 19c. New California raisins are quoted on this market this week. Thompson's seedless in bulk, 25s, are quoted at from 13¾c to 14c per lb. Standard evaporated apples in 50 lb. boxes are running at 14½c. Lower prices are ruling on new Hallowee dates, some dealers quoted down to 9½c per lb. There is a very good inquiry for raisins, currants, dates and all kinds of peels at the present time. According to advices from New York, shipments of new crop California dried fruits are held up on account of the poor transportation facilities, cars in sufficient number not being available to get supplies out from the coast. Citron peel is quoted higher this week at 52c per lb., and cut mixed peel in cases of 36, no. 1 cartons is quoted at $3.55 per doz.

FIRM MARKET IN NUTS

Toronto

NUTS.—Business is moving in fairly good volume in the market for nuts, although buying for the holiday trade has not commenced with any pronounced activity as yet. The feature of this market this week is the strength of shelled pecans, which are quoted at $1.05 per lb. According to advices from primary centres, the failure of this season's yield has made comparatively few offerings and old crop pecans are being bought up as long as they are available. Shelled almonds are quoted at from 43 to 45c per lb. Other nuts are unchanged.

SUGAR MARKET IS STRONG

Toronto.

SUGAR.—The sugar situation is stronger. An advance of 25 cents per cwt. is named by all refiners making the Toronto quotation now $8.09 per cwt. In the raw market, sales of new crop sugars, January and February delivery are reported at 3c and 3.10c f.o.b. Cuba. Holders are now asking 3.15c but no business is reported at this figure. Visible stocks of sugars at Cuban ports are said to be approximately 260,000 tons. U. S. refiners have advanced their price 10 points, four refiners quoting $7 per cwt., another one $6.90, and one is withdrawn from the market for the time being. One Canadian refinery is also closed down temporarily.

LOWER GRADE TEAS ARE ADVANCING

Toronto

TEAS.—There does not seem to be any deviation from the strong position held by teas in the past few weeks. Importers state that they continue to pay high prices for new teas, and while customers have been getting the benefit of stocks bought at the lower levels higher prices must necessarily be asked for new teas. Importers look for a very strong situation in teas for the next few months, that is, until the new crop comes on. Present world supply is said to be seventy million lbs. short of requirements.

FLOUR IS QUOTED HIGHER

Toronto.

FLOUR.—Higher prices are quoted on flour this week. The strength of the wheat market has resulted in quotations on flour being stimulated to the extent of thirty cents per bbl. First patents, in cotton bags, are quoted at $6.90 per bbl. and second patents are $6.30 per bbl.

Candy Dept. Near Cash Register Gets Business

London.—A small but well arranged little candy department placed at the end of the counter adjoining the cash register is proving a big business getter in the store of Frank Smith. The display is not large but it is arranged with the idea of attracting both the women and the children. Mr. Smith having found that a great many women have a sweet tooth and when buying something for themselves do not mind spending ten cents or more for the children. The plan also works the other way as children frequently see the candy and clamor for some, and the mother often buys some for herself as well. The section comprises only four small compartments of glass but its location right up at the main end of the store and alongside of the cash register makes it a winner and has resulted in a large turnover.

Pat was helping the gardener on a gentleman's place, and, observing a shallow stone basin containing water, he inquired what it was for.

"That," said the gardener, "is a bird bath."

"Don't ye be foolin' me," grinned Pat. "What is it?"

"A bird bath, I tell you. Why do you doubt it?"

"Because I don't belave there's a burrd alive that can tell Saturday night from anny other."

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, Nov. 1.—Practically all lines of grocery commodities are showing a firm tendency. Canned lobsters are scarce and prices have advanced. All lines of new canned vegetables have arrived and the volume of business passing is satisfactory. The feature of the dried fruit market is the stronger tone shown in prunes. Further arrivals of new crop prunes have been held up by the shortage of cars in California. Rolled oats are ruling firm. Cornmeal has advanced while split peas are slightly easier. Jam sales are light but with the approach of cooler weather an improvement is expected. The shelled nut market is ruling firm. Small shipments of new shelled Bordeaux walnuts are expected to arrive before Christmas. New shelled almonds at slightly lower prices are expected about the middle of November. New Southern rice has arrived and at the low prices sales are reported good. Sugar shows no change, but syrups are showing a firmer tone. Spices continue to move freely and quotations are moving upward. Teas continue to advance and the trade has been advised that it is to their advantage to purchase now as higher prices later on will prevail. Coffees maintain a firm tone. There is a seasonable demand for all lines of fruits and vegetables. Large quantities of the winter varieties of apples are arriving from B.C. and Ontario.

COFFEE MARKET STEADY

Winnipeg.

There is no change in the primary coffee situation. The market is reported quiet and inactive but quotations are well maintained. Locally there is a good demand but buyers are purchasing only in sufficient quantities to meet their necessary requirements.

CANNED LOBSTERS ADVANCE

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—Canned lobsters are reported scarce and prices have advanced. Quarters are quoted at $3.25 to $3.55 and halves at $5.35 to $6 per case. As the new winter pack does not arrive on the local market before March indications point to the fact that prices will be well maintained. The market on canned salmon of all grades, especially pinks is reported firm. The demand for this line is showing a steady improvement due largely to reasonable prices, and it is thought that the better grades of pink will be absorbed before the new year. English canned herring is now on the market. The canned fruit market shows little change. Opening prices on the new pack fruits have been named on practically all lines and the general opinion is that prices are reasonable. Sales are not up to the average in some districts while in others sales are reported good. Some merchants are booking the usual fall orders which will carry them over well into March, thus avoiding heating charges and loss by frost. New canned vegetables are arriving and practically all lines are now on the market. Prices are lower than last year's. The pack is opening up well and the volume of business passing is satisfactory. Merchants feel that at the low quotations there will be little likelihood of any declines, and the market is likely to strengthen as the season advances. This applies particularly to tomatoes and peas.

FIRMER TONE TO PRUNES

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUITS.—The feature of the dried fruit market is the stronger tone shown in prunes. The California Prune and Apricot Growers' Association has withdrawn all offerings stating that the crop in California is shorter than expected, and that futures are all sold up until December. There is a good demand locally and new prunes are reported scarce as further arrivals have been held up by lack of cars in California. Evaporated apples are quoted at 15¾c per lb. in 50 lb. boxes, and 16¼c in 25 lb. boxes, and indications point that these prices will remain so for some time. Quotations on imported lines are slightly lower. No Turkish figs are expected on the market this year. Raisins on primary markets are firm but inactive. The Apricot Association report that they have only a limited quantity of standard, choice and extra choice. Peaches are quiet as buying is not extensive. Currants are firm on both primary and stock markets.

JAM SITUATION QUIET

Winnipeg.

JAM.—The demand for jams is reported light by the trade, many merchants not having bought their requirements as yet. The market is reported firm from all sources as manufacturers claim they cannot sell below present basis except at a loss and as only sufficient pack was prepared to meet the demand they feel justified in maintaining their present prices. With the approach of cooler weather the sale of jams is expected to show an improvement.

ROLLED OATS FIRM

Winnipeg.

CEREALS.—A firm tone features the rolled oat market. 80 lb. bags are quoted at $2.55 to $2.70. Cornmeal has advanced; 98 lb. bags are now quoted at $2.50 with 49s at $1.30. The market for beans shows no change. There is a good demand and offerings at country points are plentiful. Dealers are quoting Ontario hand picked at $3.40 per bushel. Madagascar lima beans are quoted at 10c per lb. Split peas are slightly lower, bags of 98 lbs. are quoted at $7.45. Barley is showing a firm tone and the demand is fair. No change is reported in quotations on package cereals. There is a good seasonable inquiry for same.

NUT MARKET FIRM

Winnipeg.

NUTS.—The Bordeaux shelled walnut market maintains a firm tone for immediate shipments although quotations on shipments arriving around the first of next year are somewhat easier. A carload of fine quality new cracked shelled Bordeaux which arrived recently have been picked up rapidly. Small shipments of the new crop are expected on the market before Christmas. Old crop shelled almonds are practically cleaned up and the new crop is expected to arrive around the middle of November. Prices are easier under an active demand. Shelled pecans are scarce and quotations are higher and are expected to continue so as the crop this year is only about 25 per cent. of last year. Shelled Brazils have advanced from 5c to 6c per lb. and there is an active demand for this popular nut as they are considered good value at to-day's quotations. The old crop of shelled peanuts is practically cleaned up and no offers from shippers except new crop which is rather too green to purchase as the shrinkage is rather heavy on this line. New arrivals are expected around January.

SOUTHERN RICES ARRIVE

Winnipeg.

RICE.—The rice market is active and is in a healthy condition. Rains in the South have delayed the new crop and with supplies curtailed the situation is much stronger. Southern rices have arrived on the market and the quality is well up to the standard. Carolina is quoted at 11c per lb. with Blue Rose at 8½c. There is a good demand although buying is in limited volume. The demand for sago and tapioca is reported seasonable. Sago in sack lots is quoted at 9c per lb. and pearl tapioca at 8½c.

SPICES AT FIRM LEVELS

Winnipeg

SPICES.—The spice market generally is fairly active and supplies are getting into small compass. When these goods are exhausted higher prices no doubt will have to be paid for new supplies. Grinders are purchasing only in sufficient quantities to meet their necessary requirements, and the outlook for the balance of the year is gradually towards higher levels. The Spanish olive crop will be about 50 per cent. of last year's and it is thought that Manzanillas and Queens will be much higher this year.

TEA MARKET STRONG

Winnipeg.

TEA.—Latest reports from primary tea markets state that all lines of Indian, Ceylon and Javas are showing a stronger tendency. The trade has been advised by tea growers that it is to their advantage to purchase now as the market will be advancing steadily for the next six months. Spot stocks are in limited supply and the demand for tea is improving as the cold weather approaches.

Reduces Operating Costs One-Fifth

W. Sanderson, Preston, Ont., Installs Ice Freezing Plant and Reduces Cost of Refrigeration—Makes Possible Attractive Displays of Meats and Produce Under Glass—Believes Good Equipment Reduces Expenses and Increases Sales

"WE HAVE cut our operating costs just one-fifth since we installed that system of refrigeration," W. Sanderson, of Preston, Ont., told Canadian Grocer recently. Mr. Sanderson conducts a combined grocery and butcher business. His store represents one of the finest equipped in Western Ontario. Last Fall, he had installed this new ice freezing plant, and he is more than convinced of its success, and its ability to cut down expenses. "We find there is absolutely no waste with this equipment. We maintain it at a temperature of from 33 to 38 degrees all the time, and we have kept produce anywhere from a month to six weeks. Frequently at the week ends we have had heavy shipments of fruit come in, and finding it impossible to dispose of it all on Saturday, our refrigeration plant takes care of it for us, keeping it absolutely fresh until such time as we can sell it. Recently we had a truck load of tomatoes come to us on a Saturday. We felt we could not sell them all that day, and so put them away, and on the following Tuesday when they were finally sold, they were as fresh as when they arrived."

Mr. Sanderson first opened in Preston in the meat business seven years ago, buying out Hope Bros. The grocery department was added only four years ago, but during that period it has developed to such an extent, Mr. Sanderson states, that it is bringing trade to the meat section. The two branches work well together to the mutual advantage of both.

Transients Become Permanents

"I have built my business on transient trade that has developed into permanent customers," Mr. Sanderson stated. "I put great faith in effective window displays, and from my own experience know that they have done more to increase the volume of my trade than any other factor that I might mention. I change my windows frequently, sometimes as often as every day, making them as attractive as it is possible to do, with the idea, of course, of attaining the greatest results. A good window will bring the transient trade into the store, and once inside, it is not a difficult matter to sell customers of this kind. Service and attention given them on occasions such as this, often result in retaining them as regular customers for the store. Our business is steadily growing, and this year it has shown an increase every month."

A staff of five clerks in addition to Mr. Sanderson is kept busy all the time. The service of both delivery and credit is given. Loss from bad accounts is practically nil, and the large majority of the people who buy at this store expect to have their goods delivered, and prefer to pay their accounts weekly, fortnightly or monthly, as the case might be.

Reduces Expense and Increases Trade

Mr. Sanderson believes that the installation of first-class equipment in a store of this kind not only saves a great deal of labor, but reduces expenses, and increases trade. In his meat department he has thirty-two feet of refrigerator counter, where under glass it is possible to show all kinds of provisions, fresh meats and produce, in the best possible way. The increased trade resulting from a display such as this more than recompenses a merchant for the outlay involved in installing the same. The volume of turnover in bacon is on a large slicer, that, Mr. Sanderson believes, is an ries chiefly one brand, and finds it gives first class satisfaction. He has a meat slicer that. Mr. Anderson believes, is an economy in itself. "It not only facilitates service in attending to customers'

Economy in Marketing Keeps Prices Down

Well Equipped Store of Phillip Morin, in Montreal, Increases Turnover—Little Business is Done in a Credit Way, But the Service of Delivery is Given

WHEN a man goes into a business not merely for the money he hopes to make by it, but because he has an ideal which he is bent upon putting into practice and a real delight in working out that ideal, that business is sure to thrive. That man has invested not only his money but his heart, and the two make a mighty dynamo which will keep the wheels of trade whirling.

Proud of Achievement

This is how Phillip Morin accounts for the elaborate and efficient way in which he has fitted out his butcher store at 202 Bernard Ave., Montreal. Mr. Morin has been in the butcher business for sixteen years and in that time he has built his ideal and made his store conform to it. He says that for seven years he waited patiently to get the site he now has. It was formerly occupied by a bank but he knew that some day the bank would move and that the deep and wide floor space and wide lane beside the store would afford him the opportunity of making just such a store as he had planned in his mind. Finally the opportunity came and the ideal speedily took form. To-day there is no prouder man in Montreal than Mr. Morin.

The interior of the store is pure white in every detail except for the two large refrigerators and the cashier's desk. A long refrigerating counter of marble, with glass front and cooled by an ammonia plant that also serves the refrigerators, stretches from the front to the back of the store. This counter divides the width of the store in two, giving a large space for the butchers, their tables and blocks and yet ample aisle space for the customers.

Customers He Never Sees

Mr. Morin told Canadian Grocer representative that he has for years served customers whom he has never seen. This is a testimonial of which any grocer might be proud. He claims that his ideal is to so serve the people that they will not hesitate to order by telephone or through their children. Sixty per cent. of the trade, according to the proprietor, is done over the telephone and by C. O. D. delivery.

Little In Credit

"Years ago I learned my lesson about credit," said Mr. Morin. "I have practically cut it out since. I found that customers had run up big bills with me and then being unable to pay and ashamed of their predicament, they had gone to other stores to pay cash. I lost both ways and now I have but few credit accounts.

"As far as prices are concerned I endeavor to ask the fairest price possible and not charge my customers for waste that might be avoided. Many meat prices are high because the butcher himself is wasteful. When I buy a piece of meat or fish I manage to use every part, even the bone which I grind up for chicken feed, so that I can average my price and so afford to sell the best cuts for less than the usual price."

In this store the parts of the beef, pork or veal that do not sell readily are made into cooked meats which have a ready sale. Mr. Morin makes his own sausage which he features, and renders his own beef dripping. In that way he eliminates as much of the usual waste of butchering as possible. Then too, as the owner pointed out, these lines all help to gain trade for the store.

Mr. Morin says that a butcher above all other tradesmen needs co-operation from his staff and that he has now men with him who have served thirteen years behind his counters. This, he claims, is one of the most important factors in making a success of the trade, the clerks must have the same ideals that the proprietor holds and they must have a real interest in seeing that service and quality predominate. "It takes money to hold good clerks," says Mr. Morin, "but it is a good investment."

Who Knows.

"What's the charge?" demanded Squire Ramsbotto of Jetunia.

"Loitering," replied Constable Slackputter, the arresting officer.

"Your honor," spoke up the offending motorist, "I was merely cranking my Ford, and—"

"Yes, and I timed you at it," interrupted the guardian of the peace and dignity of the community. "You kept at it thirty-four minutes, and didn't 'pear to be any nearer through then than when you began. And if that wasn't loitering I'd like to know what it was?"

These Merchants Find Sausages a Good Line to Boost at Week-End

Fall and Winter Months Are Opportune Time to Increase Sales of This Line—One Merchant Sells 150 Lbs. Every Week—Another One Disposes of 100 Lbs.

SPECIALIZING in sausages in the fall and winter months is certainly good business, according to the experience of several grocers who are increasing turnover by devoting some special attention to the sale of them. "We are selling on an average of 150 lbs. a week in our main store," George H. Sherwood, of George H. Sherwood & Co., grocers in St. Catharines, told a representative of Canadian Grocer the other day. "Most of the sausages we sell are disposed of at the week end, although we have inquiry for them throughout the week. However, I think most sales are made on Saturday. We sell one brand, and we believe it is a very high-class sausage. It sells at a high price, but this fact is no detriment in increasing the turnover of the same. I find that quality is the first essential. Price is secondary. A merchant should be able to sell more high-priced goods than the cheaper grades. We think the sausages we handle are among the finest made in Canada, and because of this fact we have no hesitation in boosting them."

John M. Boyle is another merchant in St. Catharines who is meeting with a fair measure of success in the way of selling sausages. He, too, carries a high-grade line, and only the one kind. He sells them chiefly at the week end, and since he inaugurated this plan of "pushing" the sale of them at the end of the week, he finds now that he has regular customers for them. Mr. Boyle also sells the brand of bacon made by the same manufacturer who makes the sausages. He sells anywhere from fifteen to twenty sides of bacon every week. This particular bacon is generally favored by his trade, and he declares that it represents a good profit, and also gives entire satisfaction.

A Good Source of Revenue

John Muir, grocer of Niagara Falls, Ont., is another merchant who finds in sausages a good source of revenue. His sales at the week end average 100 pounds. "Sausages constitute a good week end special," Mr. Muir states. "My customers are discriminating and buy only the best, and I believe the line I am handling cannot be excelled."

Adulterating Butter Through Use of Cocoanut Oil

Ottawa, Oct. 30. (Special). — The Health Department at Ottawa is aroused over recent revelations regarding the adulteration of butter by the use of cocoanut oil. Of late there have been several prosecutions in this regard in Montreal, and a number of convictions have been secured.

Quite a number of retailers upon whose premises quantities of the adulterated butter have been found, have received summons to appear in court, but in most of these cases the Department is co-operating with the retailer in laying the blame at the door of the manufacturer. The view taken by the Department in this respect is that where the retailer buys the product in good faith and sells it just as it is received, it is hardly fair to hold him responsible for any discrepancy. It is necessary, however, in such cases, for the retailer to appear in court, plead not guilty to the charge and ask that the manufacturer be summoned to answer to the charge.

Evidence of the extent to which the law has been violated in this respect is found in the fact that in one warehouse 844 pounds of adulterated butter were seized by government inspectors; in another warehouse 84 boxes and in still another place 31 boxes.

South African Fruit Grower Visits Canada

Montreal, Nov. 1.—Sir J. Percy Fitzpatrick, K.C.M.G., of Johannesburg, South Africa, who had fame thrust upon him at the time of the Jamieson raid, spending six months in jail for his share in that escapade, recently arrived in Canada.

Sir Percy Fitzpatrick is today one of the largest land owners in South Africa, and engaged extensively in the fruit-growing business.

In the course of an interview, Sir Percy Fitzpatrick said he was on his way to California to study the business methods in the American state in regard to the handling, packing and export of fruit. He will later return to Canada in connection with business interests.

Sir Percy said that South Africa was destined to become a great fruit-growing country. On his farms he grew abundance of fruit, his specialties being oranges, grape-fruit and apricots. He said it was the desire of all business interests in South Africa to trade within the British Empire, especially with Canada, that they were now buying largely in the Canadian market, and, naturally, they wanted reciprocation in trade.

He said they could sell to Canada grape-fruit for less than $6 a case, and he would guarantee his fruit to be of the highest quality.

Salmon Supply in Antipodes a New Factor

Vancouver, B. C.—That Australia and New Zealand may soon become competitive factors in the salmon and quintat canning industry on the Pacific Ocean, was the announcement of Martin Dumweller of Wellington, N. Z.

Mr. Dumweller stated that for years both Australia and New Zealand have been conserving their fish supply, but in 1923 it is expected that trolling for quintat will be permitted, and about 1925, he thinks, the salmon will be ready for netting.

For 45 years the governments of New Zealand have been endeavoring to climatize salmon. The first shipment of fry went from Scotland in 1868, and the baby salmon were liberated in the streams of New Zealand. Fifteen other shipments were made without any indication of the fish returning when fully matured.

Some years ago the Atlantic salmon were adopted, and good results have followed, as the homing, or parent river instinct is stronger in American fish than in those of Great Britain.

Mr. Dumweller is interested in the canning industry of this province, and is studying conditions with an idea of applying them on his return to the Antipodes.

Making Shipments of Live Eels From Quebec to New York City

Fish and Provision Merchant in Quebec City is Interested in New Venture—Finest Fishing Grounds for Eels Are Around Isle of Orleans

QUEBEC CITY, Oct. 31.—For the past months six long narrow looking barges have stood moored to one of the piers along the water front. On Nov. 2 these barges will be taken in tow and started up the river to the Oswego canal and then along this waterway to the Hudson River and New York city. As they stood at their pier below the old citadel they drew a curious crowd for they were so much unlike any other type of craft that frequent the St. Lawrence.

Shipping Live Eels

They were designed to meet a peculiar demand, that of live eels for New York city. The Italian and Jewish trade in that city is very fond of eels, particularly so at Christmas time, but they require that they be live when bought. In the past it has been exceedingly difficult for Canadian fishermen to take advantage of this demand, since express shipments are costly as well as unsatisfactory, and it is hard to ship live eels in barrels. Around the island of Orleans in the St. Lawrence are the finest fishing grounds for eels in the north Atlantic for which practically the only market of any consequence is found in the larger cities of the United States.

For this venture, for such only is it as yet, Canadian and American capital has been combined. John Martin, owner of a fish and provision store on St. John St., Quebec, is one of the Canadians interested in this business of supplying live eels to the New York market. He stated that so far the project has proved very satisfactory and that the catches have been larger than they had expected. The catch for one day amounted to 37,000 lbs.

Use False Bottom Scows

The eels are caught in traps and then collected by the fishermen every day, to be deposited in the big screen bottom tanks that form the hulls of the scows. These scows are about eight feet wide and are about sixty feet long, with about six inches above the surface of the water. The bottom of the scow is of perforated metal so that fresh water is flowing continually through the tanks which hold the eels. Every day the squirming masses are carefully examined by the men in charge of the barges and sickly or dead eels are taken out.

A Profitable Business

Those who have studied this business claim that the eels have a strip of fat along their underside upon which they can live for some time when no other food is available. Then too, it is the claim of the fishermen, that these fish are in a better condition for the market when this fat has been used up. Although these features are in the favor of those who are seeking to meet the demand of the New York market in this line, there are features which make the venture a hazardous one. According to a statement made by Mr. Martin to a Canadian Grocer representative, insurance companies have refused to assume a risk on the enterprise. Should even part of the planking on one of the barges get loose it would not be long before the whole swimming cargo would discharge itself into the river or canal, wherever the barge might be. Then too there is the risk of an early winter closing up navigation before the caravan of barges reaches its destination. However the men interested in the venture are confident that it will prove a profitable experiment and that it will become a permanent outlet for one of Canada's natural resources.

Dairy and Cold Storage Dept. Open Offices

A recent dairy news letter, issued by the Market Division of the Dairy and Cold Storage Branch of the Department of Agriculture, at Ottawa, announces that in order to carry on the work of this branch, outside offices have been established in Montreal, Truro, N. S., Halifax, N. S., Toronto, and Edmonton, Alta. Also that field officers have been appointed in Peterboro, Ont., Brandon, Man., Beauport, Que., Vancouver, B. C., London, Ont., St. Joseph, N. B., Kensington, P. E. I., Kemptville, Ont., Shawinigan Falls, Que., London, Eng., Liverpool, Eng., Manchester, Eng., Glasgow, Scotland, and Bristol, England.

No. 1 Common Street, Montreal, is the headquarters for the cargo inspectors and for the refrigerator car inspectors at Montreal terminals. The dairy produce graders for Montreal are also attached to this office under the chief dairy produce grader, Joseph Burgess.

The inspectors of dairy products and dairy promoters are the field officers in charge of the work at the places named in Canada; those in England and Scotland are cargo inspectors.

J. T. Menzies, manager Crosse & Blackwell (Canada) Limited, Toronto, left on Wednesday night on a business trip to Winnipeg. He will be west about ten days.

TURKEY EIGHT CENTS PER LB.

TO BE ABLE to buy the Thanksgiving turkey at eight cents a pound seems almost like a fairy tale, yet that was an actual fact twenty-six years ago. Potatoes, too, were pretty cheap as compared with the prices of the last few years. Butter was selling at 20 cents a pound on the first of November 1896 although during the summer of that year, butter was selling over the retail counter at 2 pounds for 25 cents. Apples were 10 cents a peck but apples of a fair quality to-day bring 50 cents a peck and those of fancy quality considerably more. But looking over the following list of prices for the year 1896, the most remarkable item is that of vinegar, which in that year was selling at 40 cents a gallon. To-day a fair quality of vinegar can still be bought in some stores at the same price.

Canadian Grocer is indebted to D. W. Clark, Avenue Road, Toronto, for the 1896 list of prices which are an exact copy of an order received on November of that year.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Nov. 1.—Almost throughout the provision and produce market there is a strong note evident that has a stimulating effect upon business. The feature of the week is the big advance in the price of new laid eggs. The egg market in general is stronger and storage eggs are higher with an increased demand upon supplies. Butter and cheese both advanced, under a good export and domestic demand. Live hogs are unchanged in price, although the market is unsettled. As a result smoked meats are easy but there is no change. Cooked meats are steady in price but the demand is light. Lard and shortening are weak, following the trend of the hog market. The supply of dressed poultry on the market is larger on account of the duty imposed upon Canadian supplies going into the United States. The Thanksgiving demand has to some extent offset the weak tendency but lower prices are expected next week after the holiday demand has passed. The supply of fresh fish is good as is also the demand and prices are steady.

BUTTER ADVANCED ONE CENT

Montreal.

BUTTER.—Butter quotations advanced one cent per lb., making the price 37c and 38c a lb. for creamery. The market is strong with a more active demand for both domestic and export trade. Many of the retailers have started to buy for future requirements on account of the strength of the market.

CHEESE PRICES ADVANCED

Montreal.

CHEESE.—The cheese market advanced after some weeks of continued strength and a more active market both at home and abroad. The feature of the cheese market is the export demand that has developed of late which has stressed the firm tone of the market already evident through the decreasing receipts and the increasing local demand.

BIG ADVANCE IN EGGS

Montreal.

EGGS.—The market for new laid eggs shows another big advance and some dealers are quoting as high as 65c a doz. on this grade while fall fresh are quoted at 50c and selects at 40c. There is a wide margin between the quotations on the different grades but wholesalers expect that with the heavy demand now evident on storage supplies, the prices on these grades will also advance. The production of eggs is steadily falling off while the domestic demand as well as export is fairly heavy. The whole market is in a strong position.

WEAKNESS IN SMOKED MEATS

EASY TONE TO POULTRY

Montreal.

POULTRY.—The receipts of poultry show a steady increase and a weak tone is evident with some reductions The farmers' market of last week offered much larger supplies of dressed poultry than heretofore and prices were easy. The chief reason given is that supplies of poultry that have in other years been going into the United States are now offered on Canadian markets on account of the higher U. S. duty. Produce dealers look for low prices on poultry this winter but also expect an increased demand. This week prices are steadier on account of the Thanksgiving market but dealers expect a drop after that is over. The offerings this year show a much bigger proportion of dressed poultry.

FISH PRICES STEADY

Montreal.

FISH.—There is considerable more activity in the fish market. Prices are steady and the supply is good. Haddock and cod are in fair supply and prices are easy. Fresh fall mackerel is on the market at 13c a lb., a little higher in price than it has been. Dressed cohoe salmon is in good demand. National Fish Day brought a marked increase in the consumption of fish.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Nov. 1.—Few changes are reported in the market for produce lines this week. There is a good volume of business moving in these lines. The hog situation is still inclined to easier levels, and fresh pork, provisions, and other pork products are holding at prices unchanged with a week ago. Butter is steady, with a good demand, but there is a firmer market in cheese, some dealers quoting higher prices this week. Arrivals of fresh eggs are of course in very small volume, and prices are steady. Supplies of storage eggs are ample for the demand. Indications point to a fair supply of turkeys for Thanksgiving, as well as chickens and ducks. Fish is moving in better volume, the colder weather stimulating the inquiry.

NO CHANGE IN BUTTER

Toronto.

BUTTER.—No change is reported in butter this week. Dealers report the market very firm, and the volume of trading is on a fairly good scale. There appears to be plenty of demand for domestic consumption. Creamery prints number one are quoted at from 38 to 40c per lb.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, Nov. 1.—There are few changes in the produce and provision market this week. Live hogs continue to rule easy and this is reflected in lower quotations on pork products. The butter market is firm and an advance is expected. Cheese shows higher prices. Supplies of fresh eggs are in small volume with practically none arriving from the country. Prices on storage stock have advanced. Poultry receipts show an increase and prices are steady. There is a good demand for fish and quotations remain unchanged. Cooked meats are in light demand at unchanged quotations. Prices on bacon and ham remain unchanged.

BUTTER MARKET FIRM

Winnipeg.

BUTTER.—The butter market is ruling firm and an advance in quotations is expected shortly. Creamery prints No. 1 are quoted at 38c to 40c and No. 2 at 36c to 38c. There is a good inquiry for same.

EGG PRICES ADVANCE

Winnipeg.

EGGS.—The stronger tendency in the egg market has developed into an advance in some cases. Practically no fresh eggs are arriving from country districts and orders are being filled from cold storage. Eggs in cartons are quoted at 44c per doz. with No. 1 candled at 31c.

CHEESE IS FIRMER

Winnipeg.

CHEESE.—The market for cheese is slightly firmer this week, wholesalers quoting Ontario large at 21½c, twins at 22½c, triplets at 24¼c and Stilton at 26¼c. The demand locally is light but the general feeling of the trade is that higher prices will prevail within the next two or three weeks.

The grocery department is fitted throughout in oak, and at once impresses one with its attractiveness. Interior displays are well arranged, and here too, as well as in the meat section, equipment of the best type is installed. An electric coffee mill has increased the turnover in coffee, which is showing steadily higher figures from month to month.

Introduces New Lines

Every effort is put forth by the staff of this store to sell goods. Mr. Sanderson told the representative of Canadian Grocer that if new lines come on the market, and they sufficiently recommend themselves to him as reputable articles, he does not hesitate to get behind them and boost their sale. He aims to carry only goods of high quality, and believes that in doing so he is establishing a reputation for his store, the value of which cannot be underestimated.

A. H. Wetmore of St. John, of Puddington, Wetmore and Morrison, Limited, North Wharf, St. John, is president of the newly organized Canada Spice and Specialty Company. This company has taken over the spice and extract manufacturing business on Water Street, St. John, operated for more than sixty years by Dearborn and Company. The Dearborn products are being manufactured and sold by the new company, with Puddington, Wetmore and Morrison as the distributors.

PROFIT and LOSS on DELIVERING 10,000 DOZ. EGGS

The Star System for Safe Egg Handling Costs Grocer Less Than Nothing!

STUDY the chart above carefully. It is a simple but graphic presentation of what it means to be with and without the complete STAR SYSTEM for SAFE EGG HANDLING.

First, study the black blocks below the line. Do you use bags for delivering eggs? Then your loss is $140.90 on 10,000 dozen eggs; the loss with cartons is $184.30; shoe boxes and sawdust, $221.60; berry boxes, $245.60.

The user of STAR EGG CARRIERS and TRAYS on the other hand adds $155.00 to his profit in handling 10,000 eggs—more, if he grades and candles eggs with STAR equipment. Never a broken or cracked egg. Never a spoiled egg.

When you use bags, cartons, shoe boxes, berry boxes and the like, not only is your loss through breakage heavy and not only is the loss of time expensive, but such unsafe and inefficient methods cause dissatisfaction among your trade and loss of customers.

The figures in the chart are conservative both as to loss and profit. The grocer who uses the complete STAR SYSTEM not only prevents breakage and saves time, and not only does he please the customers he has, but, by building a reputation for efficient merchandising methods and for delivering eggs in unspoiled condition, he makes new friends for his store. The STAR SYSTEM leaves a trail of prestige for you wherever you deliver eggs.

Write, giving us the number of dozen eggs you deliver approximately each year, each month or each week, and we will show you in dollars and cents what you lose by not having the STAR SYSTEM and what your profit will be by having the STAR SYSTEM.

Speculation Versus Investment!

SPECULATING in customers' possible choice of food products is a risky business policy. If the customers' choice runs contrary to the dealer's, the latter is left with shelves full of unsaleable foods.

ROSE BRAND PRODUCTS are not a speculation but a first-class investment. Customers are influenced by three things: Firm-prestige, quality, and price. In all three ROSE BRAND PRODUCTS satisfy. Nearly 70 years of conscientious, skillfully directed effort backs them up, guaranteeing highest quality, not in one ham, one pail of lard, one pound of butter, but in every product bearing the ROSE BRAND—and the price is right.

Dealers who handle ROSE BRAND PRODUCTS are assured of our fullest co-operation; prompt and efficient supply service; attractive window display and store advertising; and the help of our own wide-spread publicity outside.

Specialize in ROSE BRAND PRODUCTS and your volume of business will increase.

"A Sudden Loud Noise and then—dead silence"

From the May 1st issue of "Marketing," the well-known magazine of business published in Toronto, we quote from an article on advertising:

> "Too often a firm makes up its mind to spend $5,000 on a big bang of an advertisement. It does so. There is a sudden loud noise and then—dead silence. Nothing much has happened."

Our object in quoting this statement to the grocers of this country—a statement that might cause many a grocer to nod his head, look over certain slow-moving stocks and sigh—is merely to emphasize the Canadian Postum Cereal Company's Merchandising Policy.

Which is this:

Protection for every grocer who handles POST TOASTIES, GRAPE-NUTS, INSTANT POSTUM and POSTUM CEREAL by absolutely guaranteeing the sale of these products.

It is not a new policy.—Over 25 successful years stand back of it.

POST TOASTIES, GRAPE-NUTS, INSTANT POSTUM and POSTUM CEREAL advertising never "blows hot and cold." It's a steady, year-round schedule in the recognized media that reach your customers.

The slogan "There's A Reason" has as much significance to the alert grocer who specializes in and pushes the Postum Company's Line as it has to the millions of consumers who buy POST TOASTIES, GRAPE-NUTS, INSTANT POSTUM and POSTUM CEREAL.

EGG BOXES

We have a quantity of Egg Boxes, which were printed for a firm who have since gone out of the egg business. We will cover the printing on these containers with paper and sell at reduced price.

They are a particularly opportune and attractive buy—for any grocer or jobber who desires to give his customers just a little better service—the prices are very attractive.

Please inquire, stating quantity required.

TABLE SALT

THERE is every good reason why you should push "Regal" to the limit in preference to all other salts. It is without equal. Both the salt and the package are perfect. "Regal" is the very finest grain of the Famous Windsor Salt. It is the leading product of the most modern salt plant in Canada. It is favored by the consumer because it is positively pure and it positively will not cake.

The "Regal" package is moisture proof; keeps the salt in perfect condition. It has the "handy little spout."

"Regal" leads all its competitors, domestic and foreign, for quality — and it pays a really good profit.

Do your customers go to Brown's?

"Go to Brown's, Marie. Black's don't carry Keepsweet Cream and Milk!"

Are you a Mr. Black? Is your competitor getting your customers' business because you've not yet stocked the new Keepsweet Table Cream and Milk?

Housewives must have cream and milk, and they are fast learning that it is far more convenient to order Keepsweet Table Cream and Milk direct from the grocer — than to depend altogether on the milkman.

Keepsweet Table Cream and Keepsweet Milk are nothing more nor less than pure, rich cream and milk sterilized by a scientific process so that it will keep sweet as long as the can remains unopened. After the can is opened, it should be poured into a pitcher and kept cold like ordinary milk or cream.

Try it First—Then—
You Can Honestly Recommend it!

Try Keepsweet yourself—then you can honestly recommend it to your customers. Then, too, you'll realize why Keepsweet is here to stay—what a long-felt want it fills—and how necessary it is that every housewife — every customer of yours — should have Keepsweet Cream and Milk always on hand.

Don't hesitate—any longer. Send a trial order at once—to your wholesaler or to us direct. You will be creating a new source of business that will help your gross turnover.

CROP OF CHILE LENTILS WILL BE LATE THIS YEAR

It is reported that the new crop of Chile lentils will be rather late this year owing to some unusually heavy rains in the growing districts all through September and the early part of October. Owing to this wet weather it is not expected that the crop will be of as good size and quality as the past one. The first shipments from Chile will probably be made early in 1923.

Did you play safe on sugar or were you caught with large stocks on hand when the market began to drop early in September. Much depends on your knowledge of the sugar market as to whether you make or lose money on this important food product.

On July 28 last, sugar on the Toronto market was $7.84. At the end of September it had gone down to $7.09, making a drop of 75c per cwt. On 100 sacks that would mean a loss of $75.00. Followers of Canadian Grocer market reports did not have this loss because they were kept in touch with conditions and were warned in time. Send for a sample copy to-day.

MILK-O

REGISTERED TRADE MARK

is just what is needed. MILK-O is WHOLE MILK POWDER, whole milk with the water taken out. MILK-O contains all the food values of fresh milk, nothing added, nothing removed but the water.

Milk contains ⅞ water and ⅛ solids. Our patent process removes the water without injuring the solids, or breaking up the fat globules of cream. Liquid milk is reconstituted by adding 7 parts water by weight to one part powder. This makes a milk equal to Government Standard.

MILK-O brand has unsurpassed keeping qualities.

Put up to suit the large users in 5-lb., 10-lb. and 50-lb. tins.

Our propositions and prices will interest you. Write us at once.

Features of Milko

Milk powder with the cream left in.

Perfectly soluble in cold water.

Whole milk made from rich pure cow's milk.

Can be used for all purposes where fresh milk is required.

Economically produced.

No ice. No waste. No worry.

Increasing Turnover on Kerosene Business

You know the importance of turnover in the retailing of merchandise. You know that stock can be sold on a very narrow margin provided the turnover is great enough.

Now, the margin on kerosene is slight. If you are to sell it as a profit maker and not just as a matter of accommodation, you must have a rapid turnover.

One way to increase your turnover on kerosene is to display it as you do other merchandise, to sell it without muss, spillage, or waste, and to measure it accurately and quickly.

With a Wayne Kerosene Storage System you can do all these. The system can be placed where people will see it and be constantly reminded that they can buy kerosene from you. In this way it will stimulate your kerosene sales.

A Wayne Kerosene Storage System delivers an exact, mechanically-measured quantity, without spillage, waste or overflow. It sells kerosene quickly and accurately, leaving in the mind of the buyer a feeling of having received honest measure.

Now that the winter season is coming your kerosene business will naturally increase. By installing a Wayne Kerosene Storage System you can get your normal volume of this business plus the increased turnover which will result from better methods of selling.

Can YOU Say This For YOUR Refrigerator Equipment???

Read what Mr. F. S. Onn, 143 King St., London, Ont., says:—

"I am entirely pleased with my 12 ft. long Eureka Freezer Counter Case, model No. 116, that I bought from you in August 1921. It has now been in use for fourteen months and is satisfactory in every respect.

"One remarkable thing I find in this Counter is the way it keeps my butter; for I have no difficulty whatever in keeping butter when necessary, for three weeks in the very choicest condition, and always properly displayed under sanitary conditions.

"The result is that proper displaying of goods in my counter attracts sales and I find the Eureka Freezer Counter Case to be efficient, economical and satisfactory in every way."

Doesn't This Tell you Something?

We have hundreds of testimonials such as above from satisfied customers. Why not join their ranks by equipping your store with Eureka Refrigerator Equipment.

"Have you heard about the new system of selling Eggs by Grade?"

"I WAS down at the grocery store to-day, and Mr. Williams told me he is selling eggs according to grade now."

"What does that mean? According to size, or age, or what?"

"Well, it means both. The Government has established standard Canadian grades for eggs, and up-to-date stores sell eggs marked 'specials,' 'extras,' 'firsts' or 'seconds.' The largest, freshest, nicest eggs are the 'specials,' the next are the 'extras,' and so on down."

"I think that's a splendid idea. Why, when you buy a dozen eggs now, you'll know what you are really getting. Many a time I have bought so-called fresh eggs, and thrown out about half of them."

"So have I, Mrs. Smith. But now, Mr. Williams says, all his eggs are graded. They have a way of holding them up in front of an electric light, which makes the interior of the egg visible. You can tell exactly the quality of the egg and the grade to which it belongs."

"Oh, I think that will be a wonderful improvement! Think of getting eggs of the quality you pay for."

"Yes, you can buy 'specials' or 'extras' for boiling, and 'firsts' or 'seconds' for other cooking purposes. You won't have to pay as much for the cooking eggs, of course, and you'll be sure the boiling eggs are every one of good quality."

"Isn't that splendid! I'm going to ask our grocer for graded eggs after this. We'll use eggs more freely now."

Little Difference in These Prices

Selling to the Consumer at So-called "Wholesale Prices" Proves Upon Investigation to be More or Less a Myth—Sample Bros., Kerrobert, Sask., Use Advertising Space in Town Paper to Compare Prices

SELLING groceries at wholesale prices to the consumer appears to be still a favorite get rich scheme with a certain class of citizens. Such firms operating on this plan pop up from time to time in various parts of the country. They advertise to the consumer using the daily press and also house to house canvass, claiming that they can supply groceries at "wholesale prices, eliminating the middleman, thus saving the consumer a vast amount of money." They endeavor to get the confidence of the public by appealing to their thrift and leading them to believe that the grocer is a profiteer, charging them a price for their table necessities that is out of all proportion with the wholesale cost.

Another scheme to get the interest of the public, is to take certain well-known branded articles, cut the price below manufacturers' costs and make up the difference on bulk goods or lines which the public are not so familiar with.

At Wholesale Prices

In order to finance the scheme, some concerns sell stock in the business to the public and to stimulate these sales, they give the buyer the privilege of buying their groceries at "wholesale prices." Needless to say there are always some persons only too willing to fall for any scheme which will give them the privilege of "wholesale prices."

The concerns operating such schemes, as a rule do not continue in business for any length of time, but nevertheless during the period they operate, they are very disturbing to the retail trade. They demoralize business to a certain extent, creating some distrust and leading certain people to believe that perhaps after all there might be something in the talk that is often heard on the street that the retail grocer is the reason why foodstuffs are not cheaper in price.

"It Pays to Pay CASH at Sample Brothers"

The above is a reproduction of an advertisement, eleven by sixteen inches in size, which recently appeared in a daily newspaper. It shows how Sample Bros., Kerrobert, Sask., are competing with firms offering goods at "wholesale prices direct to the consumer."

Says Manufacturers Partly to Blame

President A. Langlois of the Wholesale Grocers' Guild, Quebec City, Declares That Offers of Free Goods Encourage Price Cutting—Will Not Allow Special Commissions to Travellers—Thinks Travellers Should be Paid on Salary Basis

QUEBEC (Special).—Various attempts have been made to state a cause for the price cutting that has brought so much trouble and petty strife into the wholesale grocery trade in recent months. Some attribute its over-emphasis to "turnover."

Encouraged by Manufacturers

A. Langlois, director and general manager of Langlois Paradais, wholesale grocers of Quebec City and President of the Wholesale Grocers' Guild of that city, expressed the opinion to a Canadian Grocer representative that some of the blame at least rests upon the manufacturers. It is his claim that manufacturers have not taken what steps they might to curb the practice and that on the other hand many manufacturers have adopted methods which have tended to encourage price cutting.

Free Goods Offered

"In the first place free goods offers, while they do not hurt directly the wholesale or retail trade, are bad. Virtually it means price cutting," said Mr. Langlois. "When one manufacturer makes such an offer a competitor in the same line must adopt a similar policy. The result is that the price on the line is temporarily cut. If a retail grocer can buy five cases of goods for the price of four, then the real price of goods is reduced and there the trouble generally starts. The influence, to say the least, is bad. Neither the wholesaler nor the retailer can have confidence in the condition of the market. The retailer never knows when some special offer is going to be made and when he buys, his buying is tempered with the thought that before he is ready to buy again the price may be lower or there will be some 'free goods offer' that he will miss. These methods tend to keep buying down to a minimum.

Special Commissions

"There is one thing that we positively will not allow in our firm and that is the paying of special commissions to our travelers by the manufacturers. We think it is one of the most unfair practices that there is in merchandising. All our travelers are paid on a salary basis and we refuse to allow any other firm to step in and contribute anything to their earnings. In the first place we maintain it is unfair to the manufacturers themselves and equally unfair to the retail trade. The goods should be sold on their merit alone and not through any personal gain that the traveler will get. I say that these practices are the initial stages of price cutting, for they give the traveler some reasons to make sales regardless of price and give him some grounds on which to make a cut. I must say that in this city we are not so troubled as in other centres.

No Favoritism

"As a wholesale grocery firm we are opposed to any favoritism in any direction, for only as a wholesaler deals fairly with the various manufacturers can he in turn deal fairly with the retail trade. I am of the opinion that the manufacturers could do much to stabilize conditions in the grocery trade if they would make a real effort to exercise the powers they have to bring prices in line. There is only one result to rash price cutting and that is ruin, in which manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers will share alike."

U.S. Duty on Imported Almonds and Walnuts Will Help Canada

Montreal, Nov. 8.—(Special).—The United States has seen fit to impose on the importation of almonds and walnuts into their country a tax, designed to protect and cultivate the nut growing industry in California. At first glance it might seem that this additional taxation might affect the price of walnuts imported into Canada both from the United States and through it since so much of the brokerage business in nuts is done in New York.

According to the nut brokers in Montreal this extra duty had no effect upon the prices in Canada, in fact, some claim that what effect it may have will be for the good of Canada. One thing at least that they are all agreed upon is that higher prices have not and are not likely to result from the tariff policy of the U. S. Most of the buying of European almonds and walnuts is done direct and shipments are made direct to the Port of Montreal. One broker stated that what nuts were brought through the United States to Canada were carried in bond and therefore on these the tariff does not apply.

A local broker in nuts and dried fruits told a Canadian Grocer representative that this plan will virtually mean lower prices on imported nuts for Canada. If the big market for nuts in the United States is cut off from the European supply, European countries will have all the more to offer Canada and the competition to sell will be keener with easier prices resulting.

Another feature of the situation which is beneficial to Canada is that this new tariff will encourage trading through Canadian ports and help Canadian importers. A local wholesaler said to a Canadian Grocer representative: "No ill effects of the new tariff in the United States will be felt in Canada as far as nuts are concerned. It will help Canadian business and have a tendency to ease prices on these lines.

LITTLE DIFFERENCE IN PRICES

Saskatchewan, hit upon a splendid idea which should go a long way in getting rid of "wholesale prices direct to the consumer" pest, and tend to set the public right on the delusion that they can buy groceries cheaper from such a concern than from their regular grocer.

Sample Bros., were convinced that if they could procure an invoice of goods sold by the firm operating in their town and claiming to sell at wholesale prices direct to the consumer, they could do a great deal towards eliminating such practices. After a great deal of trouble, Sample Bros., were able to procure a copy of such an invoice, which they proceeded to analyze. They found that by comparing prices on a list amounting to $152.11, with their own, the customer made an actual saving of just 84 cents. They also found that if this order was given to them under the same conditions, they could have saved the customer $11.75 which was the amount charged for freight on the "wholesale" invoice.

An Advertisement in the Daily

Sample Bros., then prepared copy for an advertisement in the daily newspaper, in which they inserted a copy of the "wholesale" invoice together with their own prices and showing just the amount saved to the customer by purchasing from the outsider.

A copy of this advertisement is reproduced on this page and should prove interesting to other merchants who have similar problems to contend with.

Sells 100 Gals. Bulk Oysters Each Week

Quick Turnover is Secret of Successful Oyster Sales—Montreal Merchant Tells How to Make Effective Window Displays of Oysters—Represent a Good Profit and Constitute a Good Advertisement for the Store

MONTREAL, No. 8.—(Special).—A grocer who sells ten barrels of oysters in shell and one hundred gallons of bulk oysters a week, when asked by a Canadian Grocer representative what was the most important point in selling oysters, said, "Be sure that they are sold quickly. The more quickly they are sold, the more profit there is in them. There is nothing that will kill a sale of oysters faster than the selling of stock, the quality of which is even doubtful. If a dealer can build up a reputation for having only high quality oysters he can soon build up a big demand that will yield a good profit and serve as a splendid advertisement for his store.

Making Oysters a Feature

"It is worth while during the oyster season to make it a feature and put energy and time behind their sale. People will talk about them. They will be quick to tell their friends that at such and such a store you can get good oysters. This will bring new business to the store and establish a reputation. The difficult part, however, is to make displays of oysters. Those in the shell can be easily arranged in a window on cracked ice. The bulk oysters are a problem.

Dressing a Window With Oysters

"During the winter months the containers can be left outside, but during the fall and spring they must be kept in the refrigerator or packed in ice. A window display will add much to the sales if it can be accomplished. For one day in the week a shallow tray can be covered with chopped ice and spread over with shell oysters. In the centre can be placed a large glass bowl, similar to a gold fish bowl, filled with bulk oysters and surrounded with pieces of ice. With this can be featured lemons, biscuits, cheese and vinegar, or any other lines that are served with oysters. Showcards and price tickets will serve as the final link. Sales and good results are sure to follow."

Necessity of Quick Turnover

This grocer stressed the importance of a quick turnover. He advised that a merchant, wishing to build up a trade in oysters, should calculate the requirements of his customers for a period of three or four days and then order just a little more than that. By putting a little thought and energy behind their sale he can turn these over in the stipulated time and then order just a little more the next time. By again featuring oysters he can get rid of these and so on. By slow degrees he builds up a big trade in a line where there is a real profit.

Limited Oyster Season Requires Concerted Action to Build Sales

Some Hints on Advertising Oysters to the Consumer—Manner of Serving Oysters Should be a Feature in Advertising—Profitable Trade Can be Built With Little Effort

MONTREAL, Nov. 8.—If there were only one way of serving eggs, there would not be as many sold as there are. Perhaps, for the same reason, if people were acquainted with oysters apart from oyster stew, there would be a much improved demand. This should be a hint to the grocer who wishes to build up his sales of oysters. People will tire of the best things in life if there is no variety.

There are as many ways of serving oysters as there are grades of oysters. A little educational advertising, either through the window of the store, showcards, or in newspapers, will increase the demand for the succulent bivalve. Perhaps the most reasonable plan for the retailer is to make his suggestions through showcards. The profit in the sale of oysters warrants the spending of time and energy upon increasing sales and those merchants who have made the effort state that the results have been good.

As the season for oysters is limited to about seven months something has to be done to stimulate the sale just as soon as oysters are on the market. There is no doubt that the demand is there but since during five months of the year they are unobtainable, people are apt to forget all about them. To get the full benefit of the trade a system of advertising must be established that will get the trade into full swing in short notice else by the time the demand is cultivated the season will be over.

Show Cards Stimulate Sales

One method of achieving this is for concerted action on the part of the retail trade. The retail grocers can appeal more surely and more directly to the consumer than any other medium. If the individual retail grocer will take hold of the oyster trade during the early part of the season, that is in September and October, he can build up a big trade for himself in this line that will keep on growing until April and will show good returns.

The window cards are the grocer's best medium for advertising and a persistent and artistic featuring of these cards will get business. As an example of the type of card that will attract attention there is a well-known verse from "Alice in Wonderland" that, printed on a dainty card, will do much to get business. The verse runs:

"A loaf of bread, the walrus said,
Is what we chiefly need.
Pepper and vinegar besides
Are very nice indeed.
Now if you're ready oysters dear
We can begin our feed."

The verse expresses the very idea that the grocer wants to give his customers. In a pretty way it features oysters and at the same time suggests other lines that go with them at the dinner table.

Canada's Fisheries for Six Months Are Valued at $8,365,880

Ottawa.—(Special).—For the six months ending June 30th, 1922, the total fisheries of Canada, as tabulated by the Fisheries Department was valued at $8,365,880 as compared with $7,842,008 for the same period of 1921. Values by provinces for the first six months of the present year were as follows: Nova Scotia, $4,259,923; British Columbia, $2,132,437; New Brunswick, $1,189,958; and Prince Edward Island, $442,197. Of the kind of fish caught in Nova Scotia the value of lobsters exceeded all other varieties, being $1,856,353 with cod and mackerel valued at $1,223,974 and $447,400 respectively.

The Oyster and its Many Varieties

How the Oyster is Cultivated in Different Countries, and the Methods That Are Employed to Procure Them—Special Growing Has Been Required to Keep Pace With Enormous Annual Consumption

OYSTERS have been enjoyed as a food almost as far back as history takes one. They are served in restaurants of all descriptions, and oysters both in and out of the shell and also canned are ready sellers with retail merchants.

There are many varieties of oysters but perhaps the better known ones are, Blue Points, Rockaways, Lynnhavens, Saddle Rocks, Cape Cods, Buzzard Bays, etc.

These titles have in many sections lost much of their significance by trade misuse. "Blue Point," for instance, is often, though incorrectly, applied to all small oysters, irrespective of their geographical source, and "Rockaway" and "Saddle Rock," particularly the former, are similarly employed for larger sizes. As a matter of fact, there are both small and large oysters of all varieties, the difference in size being chiefly that of age.

Every country has its own particular method of cultivation, for within the last century even those sections where the natural crop is largest have been compelled to resort to special growing to keep pace with the enormous annual consumption.

Growing Oysters in England

In England, the most popular method consists in spreading the brood-oysters over smooth, hard, clean areas. In Holland and France, they are bred on tiles ranged sideways in rows along the shores and thence later removed to the deeper waters from which they are dredged for the market. In this country, the seed-oysters are generally spread on a carefully laid bed of old shells—oysters shells, mussel shells, etc. The growing period intervening between the first setting and the final shifting, is ordinarily three years, but is subject to variations in accordance with the size of the seed when planted, its rate of growth, the size desired, etc. On some grounds the rate of growth is much more rapid than on others.

Between March 1 and July 1, the planter shifts the oysters he intends to market in the fall from beds of soft bottom to those of hard bottom. This change has been found beneficial to the oyster, as it clears it of mud and other extraneous substances and improves its color and flavor, and it also gives an opportunity for separating the clusters, when necessary, into single oysters. The bed thus cleared by shifting is replanted with seed-oysters, obtained generally from natural beds.

Marketing Season Opens in September

The season for marketing opens with September. The oysters are taken by means of dredges and tongs and are prepared for the market by "culling," or sorting by sizes, the dirt and attached shells being removed during the process.

The three sizes chiefly recognized in the trade are "half-shells," the smallest usually preferred for eating raw; "culls" medium size, for consumption raw, stewing, etc.; and "box," the largest, generally for frying—although true oyster lovers take delight in large Lynnhavens or other deep sea oysters "on the half-shell."

The eating of oysters raw is as correct from a hygienic standpoint as from that of the epicure. Raw, the component parts of the oyster practically digest themselves in the human stomach. Cooked, the human stomach must do the work as for other food.

The California Oyster

California oysters are very much like those of the Mediterranean and other parts of Europe—small and of the same coppery taste. Those found further north, on the coasts of Oregon and Washington and British Columbia, are similar to the Atlantic varieties.

Large quantities are grown also in Japan and China, and in the latter country there is a heavy trade in dried oysters, the bivalves being cooked and then sun-dried.

The oyster is peculiar in the fact that age makes no difference in its tenderness. Custom and trade demands result in its being consumed while still young and comparatively small, but if left to live until old and very much larger, the flesh is just as tender and fresh.

By almost universal custom, oysters are tabooed during the months of May, June, July and August, but there is really no good reason for thus banishing them from the bill of fare. The oyster is not a desirable article of diet when spawning, which period covers from three to four weeks, but as the time of spawning differs in various localities, no elimination of certain fixed invariable months can ensure protection against their use in that condition, and the same care that is now exercised during eight months in the year could certainly be extended to cover the remaining four.

Sustaining Life in the Oyster

A valuable peculiarity of oysters is the ease with which their lives can be sustained for a long time after being removed from their native element. Placed in a cold damp place, with the

One Pint of Oysters Meat For a Family of Five

FOR thousands of years, oysters have been recognized as a nutritious and wholesome food, not only for the delicious and delicate flavor but also because for the food value. One pint of oysters is said by one authority on food values to be sufficient for the meat portion of a meal for a family of five.

There are innumerable methods of preparing the oyster for the table, the most popular styles being in the raw state, stewed and fried and scalloped. The following recipes have all been tested and have been found to be excellent.

OYSTER COCKTAIL

For each glass, take six small oysters, two teaspoonfuls lemon juice, one teaspoonful Worcestershire sauce, two tablespoonfuls tomato catsup, a dash of tabasco sauce, a pinch of salt and a little sugar. Serve ice cold.

FRIED OYSTERS

Take one pint large oysters and cover with rolled cracker crumbs seasoned with salt and pepper. Let them stand half an hour and then roll again in meal. Fry brown in deep olive oil, lard or butter.

OYSTER POT PIE

Put one pint oysters, with cup of water, into saucepan. Put on stove and heat slowly, adding one tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of sherry, salt and cayenne. Thicken with a little flour and allow to cook six minutes, stirring gently. Have ready light biscuit dough, cut into small squares, drop them in and boil until they are cooked through. If preferred, this dish may be baked in the oven with a top crust.

OYSTERS IN CREAM

Take 24 oysters, put them into a saucepan, add the strained juice of one lemon, two tablespoonfuls of butter, salt and pepper to taste, and bring to boiling point. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter; add two teaspoonfuls of flour, one cupful of white stock, a teaspoonful of mushroom catsup, and cook for five minutes, stirring all the time. Blend the yolks of two eggs with half a cupful of cream, add to the sauce and pour over the oysters.

OYSTER STUFFING

(For turkey or goose.) Take one pint oysters, melt ¼ cup of butter and mix with 1½ cups of cracker crumbs, two teaspoonfuls of lemon juice, one tablespoon of chopped parsley and season with salt and pepper. Roll each oyster in the buttered crumbs, etc., and then fill the turkey or goose. The oysters may be chopped up coarsely and mixed with the crumbs if desired. For a large fowl it will be necessary to increase the proportions of this recipe to obtain a sufficient amount of stuffing.

OYSTERS IN SAUCE

One solid pint oysters; one cup oyster liquor; one-fourth cup butter; four slices carrot; one slice onion; one sprig parsley; one-third cup flour; one-half teaspoonful salt; a little cayenne; one-half cup cream; one egg yolk and one-half cup mushrooms.

Scald the oysters and mushrooms together in the oyster liquor and drain. Saute the onion, carrot and parsley in the butter; add the flour with the salt and cayenne, and cook until well browned. Add the oyster liquor gradually; strain over the oysters and mushrooms, reheat, and just before serving add the cream scalded and combined with the egg yolk. A teaspoonful of lemon juice may be added if desired.

Oysters thus prepared may be served in Swedish Timbale cases, patty shells, bread croustades, green pepper, vol-au-vent, or on toast.

FANCY ROAST

Put ½ pint water in a saucepan with a lump of butter, salt and pepper. When it comes to a boil, drop in one pint of oysters. Have a few slices of bread and butter ready in a shallow dish and the instant the oysters boil up, pour over the bread. Garnish with parsley and serve instantly.

PHILADELPHIA FRY

Take one pint large oysters, dry and dip in a rich mayonnaise dressing. Dip them in cracker crumbs and then again in the dressing, rolling them a second time in the cracker crumbs. Fry brown in deep olive oil, lard or butter. Do not handle the oysters more than you have to and be sure to have your fat very hot.

STEWED OYSTERS

In proportion to one pint of oysters use three pints of milk. Put milk in a saucepan and bring to the boiling point, but do not boil. Add your oysters with a lump of butter, bringing it to the boiling point again, and allow to simmer for five minutes. Add seasoning to taste just before serving. Keep hot until served but never allow milk to boil.

OYSTER CHOWDER

Chop fifty good-sized oysters. Prepare one cupful of finely chopped celery and two cupfuls of cold boiled rice. Put a layer of celery in the bottom of the saucepan, then a layer of rice and a layer of oysters. Season with salt and pepper. Repeat these layers until all the materials are used. Pour over one cupful of boiling water. Cook slowly for 25 minutes. Beat up the yolks of two eggs, with one cupful of milk; add this to the chowder; stir carefully for a few minutes and serve hot.

SCALLOPED OYSTERS

Take one pint oysters. Dip in cracker crumbs seasoned with salt and pepper. Take two tablespoonfuls cracker crumbs and mix with the same quantity of melted butter. Grease a shallow baking dish and fill with cracker crumbs and oysters in alternate layers. Pour in two tablespoonfuls of water and sprinkle bread crumbs and bits of butter over top. Bake 20 minutes in a hot oven.

OYSTER BALLS

Stew one quart oysters and chop fine. Take six large potatoes, boil and mash them and rub through a sieve, then add one-half cupful thick cream, yolks of four eggs, the oysters, one tablespoonful chopped parsley, and seasoning of salt, pepper and grated nutmeg. When well mixed, form into small balls, then flour them and fry in smoking hot fat. Drain and serve hot.

Question of How Many Items a Merchant Should Carry is Dealt With in a Further Reference to Chain Stores—Grocer in Alberta Writes in Regard to Savings

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

BEFORE I start my story for this week, I want for a moment to refer to one point touched on last week.

I said that this chain store proprietor's stock was limited to 2,000 items while the other much larger chain worked with 450 items. You might carelessly think that one of these must be wrong, but the fact is that both systems evince the keenest analysis of conditions and appreciation of their limitations.

The big chain operates in many cities, but works among those who labor mostly for a weekly wage. Those are known as "the poor." Included are those who let go their money exactly as fast as they get it and the others who are careful to accumulate a little out of any wage, no matter how small or intermittent. That means, these are the folks who live closely, buy staples, use few luxuries and habitually are confined to a narrow range of diet.

In the first man's clientele things are very different. He operates where people of all kinds from everywhere congregate. His customers had something like $432 in the savings banks of their county on the average in 1917. That is the highest average of any community in the country. That means they are well within the lines of safety from want — yet the fact that they have savings accounts shows that they are careful, thrifty people.

Those are ideal customers to serve with a nice little variety of foods and household conveniences and appliances. They want — and readily pay for — all the necessities. In addition they demand a moderate assortment of semi-luxuries.

That is why the one concern properly limits stock to 450 items and why it is just as proper for the other man to carry 2,000. It is a case of knowing exactly what conditions must be met in both cases, and working strictly within limitations. And that's another good thought for all grocers.

A Charming Story of Foresighted Thrift

From Alberta, the vast, productive region of short, hot summers and tight, long winters — the land of green valleys and lofty mountains — comes this tale of fine accomplishment. It speaks clearly, in an epic of 136 words, of sturdy labor, self-denial and foresight. Read it!

Dear Mr. Johnson: I always enjoy your articles and profit also. The recent one on Systematic Investment was excellent. Now I am going to state my problems and ask your advice. I am aged 43; have a wife and six children, aged 19, 17, 15, 12, 10, 3. I carry $3,000 straight life insurance, cost $100, and $7,000 term insurance, cost $107, which will expire about 1927 unless converted into something else. I pay $240 a year also in to the Canadian Government annuities, which will give my wife and me an income of $50 per month for life, starting at age 55. Now, I can save a little more than this: perhaps $200 per year. What would you advise me to do with it? I may add that three of my children will be self supporting in about one year's time.

Yours: Inquirer, Alberta.

Recently I read an old book of Bulwer Lytton's called "What Will He Do With It?" Men are shown who have talents, health, bodily strength, opportunities, money both inherited and coming unexpectedly; and always as each advantage is recounted, the question runs, "What Will He Do With It?" When the book is ended, the impression remains that not one of the characters came remotely near to an adequate use of any of the good things he had.

In its propaganda to promote thrift through thoughtful expenditure, a national manufacturing concern says: "Think before you spend — not afterwards." What a fine idea that is, come to think of it.

Perhaps those two suggestions will work their way along if I leave them there!

Now to try to fulfill the task imposed on me by my friend who asks me what he shall do with the remainder of his savings possibilities. Surely, he is on the right course: asking, thinking in advance of parting with his money — not waiting until afterwards!

The Splendor of An Annuity

Before I go further, however, I want to point out a few of the fine features of what this general merchant has done. He has protected his family to the limit of his ability as a primary consideration through life insurance. This is evinced by the $3,000 straight life policy. He has thrown a wall of protection, plus some accumulation, around them by means of the term policy. Then he has safeguarded the declining years of himself and wife by that wonderful institution, a life joint annuity.

I do not believe in much paternalism in government; but if there is any activity suitable for any government, it seems to me that one like the admirable arrangement whereby the Canadian government furnishes annuities, safeguarded with all the resources and credit of that splendid country, is the most useful and worthy.

It is said among insurance men that "an annuitant never dies." That is perfectly natural, too, come to think of it. Just picture the condition of this man and his wife after he reaches the comparatively young age of 55. He will know — and so will his wife — that thereafter, as long as they live, $50 will come to them automatically each month. Why die? To die is to cut off that income! To live is to enjoy things with freedom from stress, worry or even thought.

They may go where they please, live in any climate of their selection, travel if they have any means to do it—or migrate in instalments if they have no other means! — sure that the income will be forthcoming at each successive monthly date. To my mind, this is ideal protection for folks to provide for their latter years.

And of course, what he has related as items of worldly goods is not all he has. He has six children! He has cared for them, and they will be his choicest investment as time passes.

Now, "What Will He Do With It?"

For the remaining $200 a year he can save, I recommend that he consult his neighbor bankers. I do not know how near he is to Calgary. If near, I'd go there. That is a fine little city with all the facilities of any town for the conservative investment of such sums as his. Let him see several of the best bankers in any good town, unless already he knows one in whom he feels the utmost confidence. Let him weigh recommendations most carefully. Then when he has lined up about what he thinks may be suited to his needs, he can send me details and I will take pains to make a careful investigation and perhaps can make specific recommendations. I shall be glad to do that — yes, shall esteem it a privilege.

Take time. Go slowly. Be sure you are right before you take any step. I fell sure I do not have to say that what you want and must have is a strictly investment proposition. You want safety first. Income is so secondary that it must have no special thought until first the indubitable solidity of the security is insured.

But, inasmuch as whatever you invest in is for keeps — that you want

"Window Night" a Boon for Merchants

Novel Idea as Carried Out by the Chamber of Commerce, St. Thomas, Ont., is a Complete Success, According to the Statements of Merchants—Displays Bring Forth Much Admiration—Grocers Who Won Prizes

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Nov. 2.—A novel idea to get citizens more interested in their home town was brought to a successful climax last evening. The idea was a "Window Night" among the merchants and was suggested by L. O. Pearson, grocer, Talbot Street. He put it before the Better Business Committee of the St. Thomas Chamber of Commerce. This was then put before the merchants who gave it their enthusiastic approval.

That the idea was a complete success was evidenced by the thousands of people who filled the streets, looking at the windows. It was like several Saturday nights rolled into one. Many of the merchants had hidden their window dressing behind curtains all day, and when all were set and the lights turned on at 7.30, the displays were worthy of unqualified admiration.

The sightseers were so many in the early part of the evening that it was difficult to see anything of some windows. Particularly was this so where living models were engaged and demonstrations given of particular selling lines. There, the sidewalk was jammed and those who wanted to pass had to diverge into the roadway along which there was a constant stream of autos.

A Great White Way

All along the two main streets, Talbot and Ross, the merchants went to no end of trouble to dress their windows and with the lights turned on both in the windows and the stores, the streets were converted in to a great white way.

All the stores were closed, it not being the idea to do business that evening, but rather to get the people interested in the goods on display and to have their whole time given over to examining the merchandise on display in the windows. Every occupant of a store on the two streets went into the scheme. Even offices, hotels, and barber shops had their places illuminated and there was not a dark spot on the streets.

Smaller Stores Participated

One thing noted in the event was that many of the smaller stores furnished themselves up in quite a heroic way, and the lesson they derived from Window Night, will give them a new interest in this branch of their business. Flowers, fruit, grain, colored paper, leaves, table lamps, etc., were utilized in many schemes, and it was evident that most painstaking effort had been taken to arrange the most prosaic kinds of goods in the most attractive form. Particularly was this so in regard to nuts and raisins, tens of thousands of which were employed in fancy patterns without so much as a single one being out of alignment.

Prizes were offered for the best display and the grocers who got a share of the honors were Reeks & Co., Talbot St., and E. McCane, Ross St.

Idea of Window Night

In commenting on the objects for launching this idea, L. O. Pearson stated to Canadian Grocer that, "it was to get the public in the habit of paying more attention to the merchants' windows, to get the merchant in the habit of paying more attention to his own windows, to show to the merchant how much better his own store looks at night with the lights left burning, and how much brighter the streets look at night on account of his lights being left burning, to show many merchants how little the expense, and what splendid returns are received by illuminating their stores each evening."

Judges' Comments

"Prominent men of the city who have been in Europe, state that the display equalled any European showing."

"The evening spent as judges was, we feel, an evening which proved a wealth of experience and a pleasure."

"On Ross Street a fruit store displaying several kinds of fruit which were 'foreign' to the party caused much interest. Honey dew melons that were grown especially for breakfast, ripe olives from Italy and various other imported fruits collected especially for Window Night display."

"We found that it is far more difficult to be a judge of windows than to be a window dresser."

"Most noticeable of all was the care and general interest by every merchant. Never were the city store windows so well decorated, and we believe that never have the merchants done as much to further their interests in any one effort. The grocers excelled themselves—in fact so tempting were the grocers' displays that we were only sorry that we were not invited to test the edible qualifications to prove the prize-winning points."

"Many very attractive novelty windows were worthy of prizes, but owing to the fact that six prizes only for all lines were offered it was impossible to issue more than one prize to a novelty display."

"The display will be held every six months or at least once a year."

to accumulate the income and add it to principal — the element of marketability may be in some measure compromised: and that will mean a higher rate of income than otherwise could be obtained. You could get Victory Notes, I belive, on a basis of around 4½ per cent., and there is no better security on earth, but I believe careful study and selection will enable you to get 5 per cent.

Suppose you succeed in getting 5 per cent., how will the $200 per year work out? At the time you are 55, 12 years hence, you will have accumulated $2,400 of principal and $942 in compound interest, approximately. You will have in this fund around $3,342.00 which, invested at 5 per cent., will give you just about $14 per month additional income.

Accumulation Wonderfully Progressive

Of course, it is very probable that you will not stop at 55. Likely you will continue to work until you are at least 60. In that case, all income will be added to principal — including annuity income — and when you are 60 you will have a splendid line of securities in addition to the annuity. You will be independent, safeguarded and still have such active interests that there will be no danger of the rest which is rust coming into your declining years. Then they won't be so much declining, as gently reclining and enjoying life!

My feeling is that in twelve years from now, my friend will have a lot or resources not now in sight. It is the way of savers that they get the habit of laying by countless little sums instead of spending them. They have everything they need. They enjoy themselves wholesomely. But they learn to enjoy the satisfaction of making some steady progress every day. They end with that wonderful sense of independence and security we all should aim for.

William H. Newman, for thirty years in the grocery business at Niagara Falls, died very suddenly in that city on Monday of this week. He was 51 years of age and had served on the aldermanic board.

No "Easy Money" in Retailing

NEWS COMES from Winnipeg that the United Grain Growers Limited will pass up the current dividend for the year ending August 31 on account of losses. One reason given is that "substantial losses were incurred in the machinery and supplies department."

This information, following on the closing of several Farmers' Co-operative stores in Ontario, once again brings home this point that farmers' organizations would be safer to stick to their own marketing problems and to keep away from the supposedly "easy money" in the retail business. The successful operation of a retail store requires expert knowledge same as does succesful farming.

A Better Perspective on Business

A LUCID review of the fundamentals underlying present business movements, such as given in Toronto by Roger Babson, statistician, gives business men a better perspective on developments in business in general and their own line in particular. The dishonesty, indolence, extravagance and loose methods which invariably develop in the latter part of every period of inflation were shown to be responsible to some extent for the recent condition of business incident to deflation, but it was the opinion that we are approaching a normal stable era in business which will be accompanied by honesty, profitable activity and thrift, the concomitants of adherence to moral standards in business.

The chain store development in business was referred to by Mr. Babson as a necessity in the present system "but," he stated, "they are fraught with tremendous national dangers and before long the country will be rocked by a discussion of this problem." Some brief opinions on certain points were given which may prove of assistance to retail merchants. Farmers, it was said, would have thirty per cent. more money to spend as result of this year's crop than at this time last year, and they are expected to be much larger purchasers than heretofore. Automobiles would reach their lowest price "sometime in the future," and more money would be spent on autos next year than on clothes. There would be a revolution in living conditions in the next ten years and suburban properties will be in demand. According to Mr. Babson there is said to be more oil in storage to-day than ever in the history of the world because the industry is in the hands of fewer men.

These remarks give business men something to think about. Obviously they are more or less general statements, but by a process of deduction every business man can establish the extent to which they apply to his own local business and then plan accordingly. There is no doubt that business is passing through a stage where the improvement which has already taken place has led to some price inflation. The dangers of another depression worse than the last one, following such a practice, cannot be overestimated.

Grocers Want Guarantee

THE action of the Dominion advisory committee of the Grocers' Section of the Retail Merchants' Association in seeking an amendment to the Food and Drug Act, as referred to on another page of this issue, will meet with the approval of grocers generally. The grocers in this instance are seeking some guarantee that when they buy food preparations, the same will be up to standard, and not leave the grocer, in selling the same, liable to the penalties for infractions of the above Act. Recently reports have come to light of merchants who have been heavily fined for selling articles that were proved to have been adulterated, and for which adulteration they were in no way responsible. The onus, however, was on the merchant who was selling them to the public and he had to pay the fine.

In the amendment now being sought, the responsibility will be placed on the proper persons, and the grocer in buying certain commodities asks for a guarantee from the wholesaler or the manufacturer, as the case may be, that the same is in strict accord with the regulations of the Act, as regards adulteration and misbranding. If the amendment is approved by the government, it will be a decided advantage to the average retail grocer.

Where Business Papers Can Assist

INCREASING appreciation of the value of the co-operation between the U. S. Department of Commerce and the editors of business newspapers was expressed by Julius Klein, director of that department, at the convention of the Associated Business Papers Inc. This sympathetic attitude has brought much intelligent assistance to the government's efforts and it is no secret that the editors so consulted are regarded as authorities.

With the changing aspect of both domestic and foreign trade the business newspaper is assuming an even more important position. The need is for specialized effort as applied to specific problems. This applies in a very real sense to export trade where much educational work must be done among business interests at home as well as abroad. Oftentimes possibilities in export markets might be so developed as to relieve acute merchandising conditions at home such for instance as the recent orgy of domestic peddling of various commodities due to shortsighted buying. The situation regarding export trade is rapidly changing. Whereas formerly it consisted largely of self selling staples it now runs more extensively to manufactured goods. Such business must be handled with thorough understanding of facts and efficient methods, hence the need for close relations with the business men through the business newspapers.

In this connection Dr. Klein states "by indulging in such alliances with business paper editors we are sending the message to the merchants and we feel that one of the most important parts of this work is our close association with editorial pages such as yours."

The liberal use of show cards inside the store will help to indicate to customers where everything is, and they will attract attention, also, to goods not otherwise thought of.

SALADA EMPLOYEES HAVE ENJOYABLE DANCE

Toronto, Nov. 8.—The Salada Tea Company last Friday night held the first of their winter euchre and dances in their club room. P. J. Thomas, secretary of the company, was the guest of honor. The decorations were skilfully executed. Many colored streamers were suspended from the ceiling, and the lights, hooded by rose and amber colored silk, combined to give a unique effect. Ted Ross' dance orchestra supplied the music.

MANAGER FOWLER CANADIAN CO. MEETS TRAGIC DEATH

Charles G. Cooper, for the past three years manager of the Fowler Canadian Company, Hamilton, Ont., and formerly with the Armour Company of Canada, for a period of eighteen years, was instantly killed in Hamilton a few days ago, when he was run over by a freight car on the Grand Trunk siding. No person saw the accident but it is believed that Mr. Cooper approaching the train from the north side of the street crossing on his way to the office, tried to pass between the slow moving train and slipped, thus meeting his death.

He was 42 years of age, and was born in Hamilton. He had been an alderman of the city and was prominently identified with the business, church and social interests of Hamilton. He is survived by his wife, three sons and a daughter.

deep shell down, they may be kept alive and in good condition for weeks. This tenacity is attributed to the liquor in the shells, which serves to sustain the respiratory currents.

When removed from the shell or "shucked," the oyster may still be kept in edible condition for several days, but it is then necessary to remove its liquor, for, although this is the medium by which existence is sustained while in the shell, it has been found to have the opposite effect after shucking.

Shucked oysters which are to be transported any considerable distance, are carefully washed, frequently in five or six waters, until no particle of any substance but the bivalve itself remains. Thus prepared, packed in air-tight receptacles and kept cold, they may be held eight to ten days without injuring their flavor or otherwise affecting them as an article of food.

Unsettled European Conditions Affect Sockeye Market

Vancouver, B. C., Nov. 2.—(Special). —Discussing the salmon situation with a packer recently, Canadian Grocer was informed that sockeye stocks have not been cleaned up as rapidly as other years. This is acounted for by the unsettled national affairs in Europe and the unfavorable weather conditions in England which have tended to curtail consumption. This packer stated, however, that all sockeye supplies will likely be cleaned up after the turn of the new year.

He pointed out that the pack of Cohoes this season was much lighter than last and that the French market is absorbing a great quantity of pinks. Up to the present time some 200,000 cases of pinks of this year's pack have been shipped to Havre and Bordeaux. The pack of chums has been very light and it is expected that all supplies will be out of first hands before the spring months.

New Goods

Seeded Raisins in Cans

The Sun-Maid Raisin Growers, Fresno, California, announce they are now packing seeded Muscatel raisins in cans, under the Sun-Maid brand. The packers claim this method of packing better preserves the natural flavor of the raisins and provides against spoilage. The cans are round in shape, packed in two sizes, eight and twelve ounce, and lithographed in five colors.

FIVE HUNDRED LBS. OF BUTTER ARE STOLEN FROM CREAMERY

A robbery occurred at the Scotland Creamery, Brantford, last week. The creamery is owned by a Hamilton firm and is being taken over by the Brantford Cold Storage Company this month. Five hundred pounds of newly-churned butter composed the loot of the robbers.

It appears that the manager of the firm was working over the office books preparatory to them being taken over by the Brantford firm until a late hour. On completing his work he locked everything up and went to his rooms, which are above the creamery, for the night.

Toronto Merchants Celebrate 26th Anniversary Retail Merchants' Association

E. M. Trowern, Dominion Secretary, Attends, and in a Reminiscent Speech Reviews the History of the Association From Its First Inception—Many Entertainment Features

TORONTO, Nov. 8. (Special).—The twenty-sixth anniversary of the founding of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, was fittingly celebrated here on Thanksgiving night at the Prince George Hotel. A large number of Toronto retailers were present with their wives and lady friends. The chair was taken on this occasion by J. P. Tweddell, president of the Toronto branch, Retail Merchants' Association, and the Dominion Secretary, E. M. Trowern, was present and gave an address.

Following dinner, an interesting toast list was presented. Ed. Mack, Toronto, proposed the toast to the city, which was responded to by Mayor Maguire and Controller Gibbons. The toast to Canada was proposed by T. M. Humble, Toronto, and replied to by F. K. Hardy, Toronto. Hugh Blain, honorary president of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association, in proposing the toast to the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, coupled with it the name of the Dominion Secretary, Mr. Trowern. In his remarks, Mr. Trowern reviewed the history of the retailers' movement in Canada from its first inception. He cited the functions of the association, and told what it had accomplished in the interests of the retail trade in the past twenty-six years. Other toasts were "Our Guests" proposed by the toastmaster and responded to by R. F. Fitzpatrick, and "the ladies" proposed by Mr. Tweddell, and responded to by F. C. Higgins.

A splendid musical programme was given, the Johns family of Toronto contributing several vocal and instrumental numbers. The appearance of one of the troops performing at a Toronto vaudeville house, was an interesting feature of the entertainment provided. Dancing concluded a very enjoyable evening.

Grocers Want Guarantee That Food Preparations Are Up to Standard

Recent Prosecutions Under Food and Drug Act Call for Resolution by Advisory Committee, Grocers' Section, Dominion R.M.A., Suggesting an Amendment to Section Regarding Misbranding and Adulteration

OTTAWA, Nov. 8. (Special).—At a special meeting of the Dominion advisory committee, grocers' section Retail Merchants' Association, held here last week, a resolution was passed suggesting the following amendment to the Food and Drug Act:—

"No dealer shall be prosecuted under the Food and Drug Act, as it relates to adulteration and misbranding, when he can establish a guarantee signed by a wholesaler, jobber, manufacturer or other party residing in Canada from whom the goods were purchased, to the effect that the same were not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of the Act. This guarantee is for the purpose of affording protection to the dealer, and for this reason should contain the name and address of the party or parties making the sale of such articles to dealers, and in such an instance the said party or parties shall be amenable to prosecutions, fines and other penalties which would attach in due course to the dealer under the provisions of this Act."

This action on the part of the Dominion advisory committee follows the complaint of several grocers who recently have been summoned for selling preparations that were below standard, and for which they were in no way responsible.

The advisory committee also recommended that a questionnaire be sent to the retail grocery trade in an effort to ascertain its views regarding the retention of coupons issued by manufacturers and if the trade was opposed to them, legislation be prepared to prevent the issuing of the same.

Letters To The Editor

Grocery Store on Wheels

Editor Canadian Grocer:

A considerable time ago I had a letter from you wanting some information regarding a grocery store on wheels. I might just state that I have been operating one in this district for one and a half years and find that it has proved a great success.

The one I have is built on a Reo Speed Wagon chassis and I drive it and attend to the customers myself, as when I started this it was just trying a means of cutting down the overhead expenses.

My entire trip each day covers about thirty miles, my gas and oil each week cost me between $5.00 and $5.25. Since I started I have bought two oversized tires for the rear wheels, but still have two fairly good tires which I took off for spares, as I changed them before they started to give me any trouble, as trouble means time, and time money in this business. I work as nearly on schedule time as possible and the customer does not have to be on the lookout for me an hour or two before I arrive.

As to the depreciation on truck, I figure the best way to handle that is to estimate on the same scale as fixtures in a store, 10 per cent. off each year, but if I were going to sell today, I would not consider a cent less for the truck, than I paid for it, including business.

My daily sales the year around would easily average $90 a day.

It is not necessary to sell at lower prices than the stores. The people at first thought our prices would be higher than the store as the stuff is brought right up to their door and they have been accustomed to pay for that service and are therefore well satisfied if the price is as low as the store.

In fixing selling prices I stick as close as possible to a 20 per cent. mark up, but this is bound to vary, as with fruits the margin is larger, for one has to figure on losses, but in doing business this way I find that the losses are extremely small. One just buys what he thinks he can handle each day and by paying the cash he gets the lowest possible price on that line.

I carry fresh meats all ready cut more as a drawing card than anything else, though I see that we make enough profit on it, too, to pay me well for my trouble.

I might go on telling you a thousand things I have learned about this line as it is one way in which a person gets right into the homes of his customers and finds out how they live and what lines he might expect to sell in each home. Only experience teaches, and I would like to say to anyone who is contemplating this line, if you are easily discouraged, stay away from the Rolling Store, for it means plenty of hard work and lots of disappointments. However, you get well paid for these in the end. I often became discouraged, but the money I had put into it kept me there and I had to stick to it, and now I am glad I did.

If there is anything else that you would like to know, which I may have omitted I would be glad to hear from you.

Yours truly,
Weir Eckenswiller.

Business is Now Definitely Climbing the Road to Normal Conditions

According to Roger W. Babson, Statistical Expert, Corner is Turned in Business—Stresses the Importance of Business Cycles

TORONTO, Nov. 7.—Business has definitely turned the corner and is now climbing the road that leads to fundamentally normal conditions. Attaining that level, conditions will enter an era of prosperity again. Speaking in Toronto the other day, Roger W. Babson, American statistical expert, analyzed business conditions and made this summary of the present situation.

Mr. Babson stressed the importance of business cycles. They divided themselves into four parts which he compared to summer, autumn, winter and spring. Summer was the period of inflation—of prosperity. Then came autumn, a period of declining prices, of collapsing business such as was experienced in 1920 and 1921. Followed the winter of depression which in turn has always given way to spring, a period of upward readjustment but under the normal line of business. That was the period we were now entering. It would continue until the amount of deflation equalled the amount of inflation of the prosperous period.

Mr. Babson gave an interesting theory as to the importance of difference divisions of personnel, in the different periods. In periods of prosperity importance should be attached to the activities of buying; the purchasing agent was the key man to prevent loss and save money. In the period of reaction that followed the man in charge of the finances—banks, loans etc.—was all important. In the period of depression it was Mr. Babson's opinion that the credit manager was the pivotal officer. Business men should grant credits more freely in times of depression. Experience had shown that credits granted in the period were usually sound. Now that we have entered upon the phase in the cycle analagous to the spring of the year, Mr. Babson felt that the men connected with selling and extensive advertising were all important. Aggressive selling and extensive advertising were needed to make this period a good one for business.

The Importance of Retailers

In connection with selling the importance of the retail merchants should not be overlooked. In the retailers of Canada there was a mighty latent force awaiting exploitation by the manufacturer. The retailers were the men who could make sales to-day; who could make markets. Every effort should be directed towards making the greatest possible use of the tremendous retail selling organization of the country.

All the factors in present business situation were favorable, said Mr. Babson, with one exception—the European situation. Fundamental, economic, and spiritual conditions were sound; employment had increased greatly; labor was producing more efficiency; monetary and credit conditions were greatly eased and money was abundant; crops were excellent; there were good crops at fair prices insuring a 30 per cent. increase in the purchasing power of the country.

All These Vegetables Must Now Be Sold On Basis of Weight

A subscriber writes Canadian Grocer requesting that a list of the various vegetables showing their respective weights per bushel be published.

According to the Inspection and Sale Act the following are the weights per bushel:

Artichokes, 56 lbs.; beans 60 lbs.; beets 50 lbs.; Carrots, 50 lbs.; Onions 50 lbs.; parsnips 45 lbs.; potatoes 60 lbs.; and turnips 50 lbs.

The section of the Act covering the above, however, is now amended by the Root Vegetables' Act, so that at the present time all the vegetables mentioned above, with the exception of beans, must be sold by weight, and not by the bushel or bag, unless such as are in the green state.

The section of the Act covering this point is as follows: "All potatoes, onions, parsnips, carrots, artichokes, beets and turnips offered for sale shall be sold by weight, and the standard pound avoirdupois shall be the unit of weight used. Provided that when any of the foregoing vegetables are offered for sale with the top leaves attached, commonly termed by the trade as 'green vegetables,' or when potatoes are sold or offered for sale by the closed barrel, this section shall not apply to the same."

When Oyster Ships Used to Sail Up the St. Lawrence

Montreal.—Twenty-five years ago oyster ships used to sail up to the old wooden docks of Montreal every Friday afternoon and from the rail of the vessels sell oysters in the shell either by the peck, the barrel or by the basket. In those days, according to a local fisherman, there was a big demand for shell oysters. Business men used to go down to the docks in the afternoon and for twenty-five cents buy all the oysters they could eat on the spot. The rail of the vessel was fitted up with a long plank and each man was given a sharp tool for opening the oysters. The crew of the vessel supplied the pepper and some enterprising hotel men not far away were ready to supply other refreshments. Friday afternoon always found a gay crowd of business men on the docks having their feed of oysters. This day has passed and the oyster vessels no longer sail up the St. Lawrence River.

The U.S. Will Endeavor to Eliminate Rebates in Any Form

The Commercial Standards Council, an organization established in the United States "to develop the highest commercial standards and to eliminate harmful business practices," has a bill before Congress "for the further protection of commerce against bribery." It is claimed that secret rebating has been going on against the American law which provides that both giver and receiver of a bribe are equally culpable. The bill is being put through to eliminate the practice of giving rebates in any form.

In an article in the Old Colony Magazine, H. R. Heydon, president of the Council, says:

"Unfortunately, the evil is spreading. From its verey nature, if it is not checked, it will honeycomb all American business, because the most sincere and honest seller of goods is powerless, no matter what the quality or price of his product may be, to sell to a buyer whose purchases are controlled by graft. It takes many forms; not only the direct payment of a cash bribe, but special rebates, double invoices, coupons redeemable in goods, elaborate presents, extra commissions of quantity orders or quantity sales. It is found most commonly in connection with the sale of basic commodities used in manufacturing and in foodstuffs; but it is reaching throughout the manufacturing industries and even into the retail trades. Some industries, notably the paint and varnish manufacturers and the shipping interests, have had the high moral courage to admit the evil, but many industries where it is common do not acknowledge the fault."

Alfred Goulet who was recently elected to the Ontario legislature at a by-election in Russell County, is the proprietor of a general store at Bourget. Mr. Goulet is also vice-president of the Eastern Ontario branch of the Retail Merchants' Association. He has also served as reeve of Clarence Township for a period of two years.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

BUSINESS is moving in good volume in the grocery trade, according to reports from wholesale houses. Buying of commodities for early Christmas preparations has commenced, but of course is not at its height as yet. However, there is a very much better demand, and the trade is evidencing a very good improvement. The sugar market remains at the recent advance, no change in quotations being announced this week. Demand for sugar on the domestic market is said to be light, the present strength in the market being altogether due to the situation in raws. Strong prices continue to rule on dried fruits, particularly raisins and currants. Buying of these lines is increased and importers state that values are likely to continue at strong levels. Cereals are very firm at the present time, and rolled oats particularly are strong. The movement of oats from the West is still very much retarded, and this fact is chiefly responsible for the strong market in oats. The strength of the corn market is also pronounced, with quotations on practically all corn products showing firm levels. Prices on the new pack of gal. apples, and also on canned pumpkin are announced this week. The former are slightly lower than last year, but in the case of canned pumpkin, quotations are much the same. Other canned goods show little change this week. Teas continue their upward trend, and fresh advances are reported in the past week on both the London and Calcutta markets. Dealers state that low priced teas must necessarily be higher on spot, in view of the strong prices that are now being asked for them. As present stocks diminish, advances are bound to take place, and already some wholesalers have marked up their teas. Coffee is a firm market, with a very good demand. Rices are unchanged this week, and there continues an active market for spices at steady values.

Another advance is reported in flour this week. This market is very strong, and reflects the present strength in the market for wheat. Millfeeds are also marked higher. There is a big demand for the latter. Potatoes are holding at steady prices, and supplies appear ample for all inquiry. Fruits and vegetables are much the same as a week ago.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Nov. 8.—The grocery market is rather quiet after the holiday. There is little change of note but a firmness and more healthy feeling is evident. There is not the price cutting that has unsettled markets in past months. The general buying shows improvement which has put competition on another basis. Sugar still maintains its strength after the recent advance. Molasses is steady with strength lent by the high values of sugar but no change in price is expected. Syrups are in good demand with prices firm. The tea market is strong with a good movement. Coffee is unchanged but is backed by a stronger primary market. The spice demand is limited and prices show no change. Canned goods are strong with an advance in canned apples and one in choice grade corn on cob. Package goods are unchanged. The cereal market is strong, particularly rolled oats. Millers claim that deliveries are slow and that they find difficulty meeting the demand. This has created a strong market which they feel will hold. Price cutting in rolled oats has practically ceased. Currants are advanced and a steady firming up is evident in raisins. Dates are easy with a good demand. Layer figs have been practically cleaned up on this market. Nuts are unchanged except for a half cent advance in roasted jumbos. Oranges are reduced and Florida grapefruit are on the market. Imported vegetables are being offered at high prices but local vegetables are unchanged.

CEREAL MARKET STRONG

Montreal.

CEREALS.—There is a strong tone to the cereal market with prices on the verge of a further advance. The local wholesale trade has not yet shown the full advance that has been recorded by the millers on rolled oats. Competition prices are keen and this factor to some extent nullifies the general strength in cereals. Millers still complain of late deliveries which hamper them in production in view of the fact that they find a heavy demand from the retail trade for cereal supplies. The market for the future is strong.

CHANGES IN CANNED GOODS

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—The canned goods market is strong with a good demand all round and prices are well maintained. Golden bantam corn on cob 2⅛s are advanced to $2.75 per doz. Standard apples 2½s have been advanced to $1.50. The market for canned tomatoes in particular is strong in view of the heavy demand for local and export trade. It is expected that the consumption of canned tomatoes will be much heavier this year in view of the lower prices and for that reason a strong market is expected in the future.

CURRANT PRICES HIGHER

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—On the whole there is an easier tendency to the dried fruit market. Big supplies of evaporated apples are now offered and prices are lower, with some variation in the quotations made by the wholesale trade. Dates are easy and in a good demand. There has been a big demand for layer figs this year and local supplies have all been cleaned up. There is, however, a good-sized shipment of Smyrna bag figs now in New York and ready for rail to Montreal. These figs got away from Smyrna before the trouble, but have been transhipped at many points before reaching this continent. The currant market is stronger and a half cent advance has been made on Greek currants. The local wholesale trade is now quoting 18c. per lb. for Greek cleaned currants.

SYRUP MARKET STEADY

Montreal.

MOLASSES.—The molasses market is firm with strength lent by the high values of sugar. A change in price is unlikely on account of the system of marketing molasses. There is a good demand for other syrups and prices are steady.

Montreal.

NUTS.—There is no change of note in the nut market. Prices are steady and although the demand for nuts has been good in the past few weeks the market is rather slack at present. Roasted peanuts show an advance of ½c. per lb. and the best grade Jumbo roasted are now quoted at 14½c. per lb.

STRONG POSITION OF TEA

Montreal.

TEAS.—The tea market is now in a position where a further advance in the price can hardly be expected although primary markets are strong and London has recently shown a further advance on black teas. The local wholesale trade feel that since all grades of tea are now at a high level a further advance would only hurt business. Nevertheless, the tea market has a strong position for the future. The wholesale trade have now on hand their requirements in Japan teas and prices are expected to remain steady.

RICE PRICES STEADY

Montreal.

RICE.—The rice market has no special feature, but a steady tone is evident with fair buying. In primary markets Oriental rices are stronger, but on account of inactivity in this market the advance has not been felt yet. There has, however, been some improvement in the local demand and both retailers' and wholesalers' stocks are low.

SUGAR HOLDS FIRM

Montreal.

SUGAR.—The sugar market is steady without any indications of a change since the recent advance which brought the price up to $7.75 per cwt. The raw market is strong and all immediate influences bearing on the market tends towards a firm position. The trade, however, is not buying heavily and the resale prices in the majority of instances are below the wholesale price.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Nov. 8.—Few changes are reported in the markets for groceries this week. Dealers report a good steady demand, with prices for the most part strong. Cereals are particularly strong at the present time, with rolled oats especially tending towards higher levels. The movement of oats from the West is still much retarded, and this fact is responsible for the strong situation. Canned goods are moving in good volume. Prices on the new pack of canned apples are now available, and are slightly easier, in comparison with a year ago. There is a better demand for dried fruits, raisins and currants selling freely. Prices are strong for the same. Currants are quoted at from 17½c to 20c per lb. New Valencia raisins to arrive are quoted this week, and these should be available in the next week. Package goods are steady, and there is a good demand. Flour is again higher this week.

BEANS ARE UNCHANGED

Toronto.

BEANS.—The market for beans is steady and unchanged with dealers reporting a very good demand for the same. Prices quoted to the trade are on the basis of from $3 to $3.25 per bushel for the Canadian hand-picked and 1 lb. pickers.

CEREALS CONTINUE STRONG

Toronto.

CEREALS.—The market for cereals is very strong at the present time, the situation showing little change as compared with a week ago. The movement of oats from the West is still very slow, owing to the heavy shipments of wheat. As stated a week ago this fact is responsible for the strong market prevailing in rolled oats. The corn market is equally strong, and prices of cornmeal are firm on spot. Other bulk cereals are holding at unchanged levels.

CANNED GOODS ARE STEADY

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—Prices on the new pack of canned apples are quoted this week, and are slightly easier as compared with a year ago. Dealers are quoting apples 2½s, in water, on the basis of $1.65 per doz., the tens being offered at $4.90 per doz. Apples, 10s, solid pack, are quoted at $6.70 per doz. New canned pumpkin is quoted in 2½s at $1.45 per doz. The tens are quoted at $5 per doz. There is a very good inquiry for most lines of canned goods, with prices holding at steady levels. One dealer is quoting a reduction this week on one brand of sockeye salmon at $2.40 per doz. for halves.

SUGAR MARKET IS STEADY

Toronto.

SUGAR.—Sugar prices are unchanged this week, the market being steady on the basis of $8.09, Toronto delivery. The market is reported quiet in spite of the stronger prices, and buying is more or less restricted. There is no heavy demand, as far as the domestic trade is concerned, one representative of a Canadian refinery stated. The strength of the market at the present time is due to the position of raws. New York refiners are not more than a week's supply ahead, and Cuban supplies for Atlantic ports are said to be not more than four weeks supply.

TEAS STRONGER AGAIN

Toronto.

TEA.—Tea importers here state that another advance was made in low priced teas in London and in Calcutta last week. The tendency in the market is altogether towards higher prices, and the situation is generally strong. One detler told Canadian Grocer this week, that teas could not be bought that will sell lower than 50c per lb. to the trade. Some wholesalers now, it is stated, are quoting their low prices teas at 45c per lb. Prices on spot are very strong, and advances by dealers on new stocks are more than likely.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, Nov. 8.—The grain movement has been exceptionally heavy but congestion at the head of the lakes has caused difficuty in handling the situation. This is having the effect of slowing up business and holding back money from going into circulation. Collections are spotty, improving in some districts and slow in others. With the fine weather continuing it has an adverse effect on fall business and with the little colder weather an improvement is anticipated. Changes in the markets for groceries this week are not many, as prices for the most part are holding steady. Sugar has advanced and is now quoted at $8.75 per cwt. Teas are strong and another advance in wholesale prices is expected. The coffee market is ruling firm with no change locally. Canned goods are moving satisfactorily and the tone of the American market is firmer.

COFFEE MARKET QUIET

Winnipeg.

COFFEE.—Reports from Brazil state that the coffee market is ruling quiet and prices continue to advance. The crop is expected to be one of the largest ever produced. Buyers continue to buy in a conservative manner and spot stocks are light. The new crop will arrive around the first of the year.

CANNED GOODS FIRMER

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—All lines of U.S. canned goods are showing a firmer tone and prices are advancing. Many California canners are out of the market and are not making offerings. The Canadian market is ruling steady and new pack vegetables of splendid quality is arriving and the volume of business passing is satisfactory. The canned fish situation shows little change. Salmon is in fair demand. Lobsters are reported scarce and prices are higher.

California fruits are ruling firm and an improvement in tone is noted. Peaches are moving upward. Sliced pineapple is reported scarce and prices are advancing. The demand locally for fruits is quiet, but later on as cold weather approaches and with fresh fruits off the market an improvement is expected.

OREGON PRUNES ARRIVE

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUITS.—The market in dried fruits is characterized by strength in practically all lines. A few carloads of Oregon prunes have arrived and have been picked up rapidly by the trade as stocks carried by retailers and wholesalers are low. The raisin market is steady and indications are that higher prices will prevail. Currants are ruling firm and lower prices are not looked for this year, due to the situation in Greece, and the small quantities arriving. The demand locally for all lines of dried fruits is good.

WINNIPEG MARKETS

STRONG TONE TO RICE

Winnipeg.

RICE.—Reports from primary markets state that rice is firmer. The car shortage is bothering rice distributors. The new rice crop will begin to move some time during the month.

SPICE MARKET ACTIVE

Winnipeg.

SPICE.—The spice market is active with an upward trend in peppers and cassias. There is little speculative interest in the market as buyers are purchasing in small quantities just sufficient to meet necessary requirements.

TEA MARKET ADVANCING

Winnipeg.

TEA.—Advices from primary markets state that prices on all lines of teas are moving upward. While values are higher locally, prices have not shown any change, but dealers are of the opinion that with new arrivals higher prices will prevail.

NO CHANGE IN FRUIT

Winnipeg.

FRUITS.—There is no change in the fruit market. Apples are in good demand and are ranging from $1.75 to $2.25 per box. Ontario barrel apples are quoted at $5.50 to $6. Emperor grapes in kegs are in good demand at $7.50. Australian valencia oranges are selling at $7.50 to $9 per case according to size. Florida grapefruit has arrived and is quoted at $8 per case. Cranberries continue at $8 per box.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Nov. 8.—The produce and provision market shows a general improvement both in prices and in demand. Butter advanced another cent per lb., on account of the falling off in production. New laid eggs advanced. On account of the demand now turning towards storage stocks the trade is expecting an advance in those grades since the demand continues heavy with also a good export movement. Cheese prices are strong but unchanged. Poultry is weak and the feature is the reduction in the price of turkeys. Hogs are unchanged but there are lower prices quoted on beef. Smoked meats are unchanged. The market for cooked meats is quiet. Lard and shortening prices are steady. The demand for fish continues good and prices are unchanged.

BUTTER AGAIN HIGHER

Montreal.

BUTTER.—Butter prices advanced another cent last week and local dealers are quoting 38c and 39c per lb. for creamery print and 37c and 38c for solid. This comes as a result of the gradual, but steady strengthening up of the butter market on account of the decrease in the production and a good demand for domestic and export account.

NEW LAID EGGS HIGHER

Montreal.

EGGS.—The only change in the egg market is a further advance in the price of strictly new laid eggs, which are quoted at 70c per doz. Fall fresh and select are unchanged in price. There is a good demand for storage eggs both for the domestic and export trade. As the production of eggs in the country is falling off and on account of the high price of new laid eggs the demand is turning towards storage supplies, a stronger market for this grade of eggs may be expected.

BACON PRICES UNCHANGED

Montreal.

SMOKED MEATS. — The smoked meat market remains steady with a good demand and a better basis seems to have been reached after the recent weakness. The export market shows little or no improvement. The holiday demand has been responsible for an increased demand which has given a better tone to the market.

BEEF PRICES EASY

Montreal.

FRESH MEATS.—The hog market shows no material change in prices. The trend of the market is easy on account of the dullness of the export market although the demand for the domestic trade is good. The most marked weakness is in beef. Dealers look for a downward trend in beef until December when they expect a reaction.

TURKEY PRICES LOW

Montreal.

POULTRY.—The poultry market is weak and despite the good holiday demand prices were reduced last week. Turkeys are particularly weak with a big supply on the market. Wholesale prices dropped as low as 40c per lb. Still easier prices are expected this week after the Thanksgiving trade is over. Dealers are pleased with the improvement in the demand following the lower level of prices.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Nov. 8.—The feature in the produce market is the continued strength and activity in cheese. This commodity has been firm for several weeks but was somewhat accentuated this week by reports of keen bidding at considerably higher prices at country boards. Butter is also firmer at a shade higher quotation while eggs show little change except a decided lack of new laids. Lard is quoted higher and shortening remains firm. Fresh, smoked and cooked meats are unchanged. Poultry is easy with lower prices expected.

BUTTER MARKET FIRMER

Toronto.

BUTTER.—The market for butter continues to indicate a firm tone. Quotations advanced one cent per pound during the week, making No. 1 creamery prints 39c to 41c. There is no change in second grades some of which is offered as low as 35c per lb.

CHEESE PRICES HIGHER

Toronto.

CHEESE. — The strength in cheese which has prevailed for several weeks is more pronounced this week. Dealers are predicting a strong market for some time to come. Sales are reported on the Brockville Cheese Board at 25 13/16 cents. This figure, however, is said to be due to the active bidding by dealers and not through real market conditions, Sales are reported by other boards at a higher figure around 21c to 22c. Local quotations to the retail trade are higher at 23c to 24c.

U.S. IMPORTS BOTH DANISH AND CANADIAN BUTTER

Not many weeks ago the United States was exporting butter, but it seems that new conditions have placed this country on an import basis, says the New York Journal of Commerce. From reliable sources it was learned that several cars of fancy Canadian butter were en route to New York and that small quantities of butter are on the way from Denmark and England. It is reported that the steamship United States, which is scheduled to arrive at New York on November 6, is carrying twenty-five casks of Danish butter. The butter reported en route from England is said to be cheap undergrade American butter, which, under a declining English market, is being returned. The quantity is not large, possibly two or three cars. The total amount of butter about to be imported is too small and of too high cost to be of much influence to the market, but it is important to know that butter is now coming this way.

Did you play safe on sugar or were you caught with large stocks on hand when the market began to drop early in September. Much depends on your knowledge of the sugar market as to whether you make or lose money on this important food product.

On July 28 last, sugar on the Toronto market was $7.84. At the end of September it had gone down to $7.09, making a drop of 75c per cwt. On 100 sacks that would mean a loss of $75.00. Followers of Canadian Grocer market reports did not have this loss because they were kept in touch with conditions and were warned in time. Send for a sample copy to-day.

When you buy oysters—buy the brand of the Producer. The Producer controls his supply, and his brand guarantees to both dealer and consumer a high standard of quality and condition. The difference in the assurance of the Producer's brand as compared with the local private brand is a matter of contrast.

"Yes, Mrs. Brown, we sell Graded Eggs now."

"YOU understand that if eggs can be graded for export, we can grade them for home-consumption, and you will now be sure of the quality you are getting. We used to depend entirely on getting our eggs fresh from the country. But 'fresh from the country' doesn't mean 'fresh' in the way the consumer means 'fresh.' The meaning to the consumer is eggs of high quality. And we could never be sure that our country eggs were uniform as to quality. We just sold them as we got them—'fresh from the country,' 'new laid,' etc., and passed on the risk to our customers."

"Yes, and many a time I made up my mind I'd never buy eggs in your store again. Why, sometimes, two and three out of a dozen would be positively unfit for use—others were weak and watery and weren't worth the price."

"Yes, but we tried to do the best we could under the old system of marketing eggs. The new system will be much more satisfactory. Eggs will soon all be sold by grade. They will be graded according to the Canadian standard grades, the same as eggs for export or interprovincial shipment. We will buy them according to grade and sell them according to grade. The very freshest, largest, nicest eggs will be graded 'specials.' The next grade will be called 'extras.' Then will come 'firsts,' and last 'seconds'."

"Well, it will be satisfactory to know what one is getting. I think the grading of all eggs will be a big, long step in the right direction. And I for one will use more eggs."

Ask your grocer for graded eggs, and be sure that they come out of a container marked "specials," "extras," "firsts" or "seconds."

Note to the Public

"No person shall ship eggs or cause eggs to be shipped or delivered or displayed for sale in cases or containers which are marked or labelled with the name of any class and grade specified in these regulations, unless the quality and weight of the eggs contained therein is equal to or better than such class and grade."

Quaker Talks

The Most Important Package In Every Case

IN EVERY case of Quaker Oats there is one package which is all important to you, one package in which you should be especially interested—the last package in the case. The last package is the one that completes your profit on the whole case—it is the one which you want to sell as quickly as possible.

It is true Quaker Oats never stay on your shelves long. This old favorite is a steady seller—but the more you can speed up your turnover of Quaker, the more "last packages" you can sell, the more profit you will enjoy. Bear this in mind, too. Quick turnover is not only a term of significance to you and to us, but it has an important bearing upon the consumer and his goodwill. In other words, Quick Turnover means that Quaker Oats reaches the consumer when it is assuredly in as fresh a condition as it possibly can be.

We urge you to order from your Wholesaler in reasonable quantities and to use every means of selling more Quaker Oats—of increasing your turnover and your profits—of moving more "last packages." You can easily secure a quick turnover by making a good display of the Quaker package on the counter, and in the window.

Eureka Refrigerator

Here is what Mr. C. O. Gardner, 121 King St., London, says, who knows by experience the superior qualities of Eureka Refrigerators.

"My Eureka Grocer's Refrigerator Model No. 012A that I bought from you in March, 1921, has been in use in my store continuously for over a year and a half and in that time has given me the best of satisfaction and service.

"Previous to buying this new Eureka I have used other Refrigerators, but for real satisfaction in every way none of them ever beat the Eureka. I find it very easy on ice and can still keep my butter, cooked meats, etc., in the finest condition.

"If you would like to show any of your London customers my refrigerator they are welcome to call and inspect it and I'll be glad to put in a good word for the Eureka, for it is a worth while refrigerator, dependable and economical."

Such evidence as this is only another reason why you need a Eureka Refrigerator.

MORE THAN 50 MILLION PACKETS ANNUALLY

Cleanliness, order and precision are everywhere apparent in the "SALADA" plants; the surroundings for the employees are pleasant and congenial. These facts, to a certain extent, explain why it is possible for the SALADA TEA COMPANY to produce and distribute annually, more than fifty million packets of "SALADA." The expensive and most efficient equipment of the SALADA TEA COMPANY for the scientific packing of tea, and the skill of their men, suggest the reason for the invariable PURITY and RELIABILITY of this famous blend.

Sales of Extracts Must be Recorded

Recent Convictions of Grocers in Police Court for Infractions of These Regulations Indicate a Lack of Knowledge in Regard to the Same—Only One Bottle of 2½-oz. Can be Sold to a Customer at One Time

FROM time to time Canadian Grocer has published articles and editorials on the regulations in regard to the selling and labeling of extracts in conformity with the Ontario Temperance Act and the Dominion Pure Food and Drug Act. Apparently there are still some merchants who have not become familiar with them, as several convictions in police courts have recently taken place. A couple of weeks ago a grocer in a western Ontario town was fined $50 for selling a larger quantity of lemon extract than the law allowed. Another grocer was fined $37 because he sold a bottle of extract which was not properly labeled. Pleading ignorance of regulations did not help the merchant's case in any way as the court, in both instances, claimed that it was the business of all merchants to be familiar with the goods they sold and with any laws or regulations in regard to the selling or handling.

A Grocer's Query

A subscriber to Canadian Grocer recently wrote as follows:

"Reading your article, warning merchants re the sale of extracts, would you kindly answer the following:

"1.—Is there a limit to the sale of bottles of extract to a consumer a day? Can he buy a bottle in each store in town?

"2.—Can a retailer buy a five-gross lot and sell part to another retailer? Has the sale of the same to be written in the record book or is the invoice sufficient for inspection?

"3.—Does the sale of extracts with a small portion of alcohol have to be recorded?"

What the Regulations Say

The subscriber was answered as follows:

1.—Only one bottle or 2½ ounces of extract can be sold at one time to the consumer, unless the sale is made to a hotel or restaurant for which there is a special clause in the Act permitting the sale of not more than three eight-ounce bottles at one time. There is nothing to prevent a consumer buying several bottles a day at different periods nor to prevent him from making a purchase in every store in the town, providing a record is kept of each sale.

2.—A retailer can buy in five-gross lots and sell part of it to another retailer. This transaction, however, should be recorded in the sales record book. If this is not done, an inspector might raise the point of what has become of them.

3.—Every sale of extract must be recorded. This applies to extracts containing only a small portion of alcohol and also those classed as non-alcoholic. On this point the Act is quite clear, providing "that all extracts commonly known as flavoring extracts must be recorded in a special book, indicating the date of sale, name and address of purchaser, quantity, etc."

There is another point in regard to the selling of extracts that is very important. It is the regulations regarding labeling under the Pure Food and Drugs Act and is an entirely different Act than the one regarding the sale of extracts. The Pure Food and Drugs Act is Dominion-wide in its application while the other pertaining to the selling and recording of same is only in force in Ontario.

In Regard to Labeling

The Act in regards to labeling of extracts says:

1. A flavoring extract, intended for the purpose of flavoring food, is a solution of correct strength, as hereinafter defined, of sapid and odorous principals derived from an aromatic plant or parts of a plant, with or without its natural coloring matters, and conforms in the name to the plant used in its preparation.

2. The usual solvents employed in the preparation of flavoring extracts are ethyl alcohol, water and glycerine. In the event of any other solvents than ethyl alcohol, water and glycerine being used, such solvents shall be harmless to health, and their names shall be plainly stated on the label.

3. Solutions of natural or synthetic preparations such as vanillin, coumarin, benzaldehyde, methyl salicylate or other sapid and odorous compounds, more or less resembling substances found in plants, or absolutely identical with these, if harmless to health, may be sold for flavoring purposes, if properly labeled so as to make it quite clear that they are not extracts as above defined.

The word "Artificial" or "Imitation" shall appear on the main panel of the main label in type as large and conspicuous as that used in any other word on the label.

4. If an extract be fortified or strengthened by having such natural or synthetic preparations as are referred to in the immediately preceding paragraph added to it, the fact of such addition shall be clearly stated on the label, or the word "Compound" or "Mixture" shall be used to describe it.

The word "Compound" or "Mixture" shall appear on the label in type as large and conspicuous as that used in any other word on the main label.

Claiming to Sell Public at Wholesale Prices

More on the Subject of Firms Styling Themselves Wholesale Grocers Selling to the Consumer in Western Canada—Appoint Agents or Representatives in Various Towns and Villages in Manitoba

WINNIPEG, Nov. 15.—(Special)—Action on the part of the Retail Merchants' Association here has recently been directed towards the practice in certain parts of Western Canada, of firms styling themselves wholesale grocers selling direct to the consumer. As referred to in last week's Canadian Grocer, Sample Bros. of Kerrobert, Sask., met this unfair competition through advertising in their town paper, showing a comparison of these so called wholesale prices with their own price list, indicating to the consumer what a really small saving, if any at all, he was making.

On the opposite page will be found a circular that is entitled "Fiction versus Facts." It sets forth some of the claims made by these selling agents as against the real facts in the matter.

Operate Through Agents

Discussing this practice with the members of the Retail Merchants' Association in Manitoba, Secretary J. H. Curle, in a letter to them, states in part:—

"A number of concerns who style themselves as wholesale grocery firms, have appointed agents or representatives in many towns, villages and districts throughout Manitoba. Orders are taken from consumers for future delivery by freight. A draft is attached to the Bill of Lading. The customer upon payment of the draft to the bank gets delivery of the goods.

"The enclosed circular (reproduced on the opposite page) is well worth reading as it describes the instructions given by one firm in their 'Manual for Salesmen.' Will you read it carefully and then tell your customers something of the selling methods adopted by these agents?

"Often these agents have not fulfilled the requirements in taking out licenses for the right to take orders for goods. They are required under the Transient Traders' Act, (1918) to secure a provincial license and pay $5 to the Deputy Municipal Commissioner, E. M. Wood, at the Parliament Buildings. They must wear a badge bearing a number so that the customer can report any misconduct.

"They must also report to the Secretry-treasurer or proper officer and take out a local or municipal license in every municipality in which they take orders or sell goods, wherever such license is required, by bylaw.

"If your town, village or municipality has not yet passed such a by-law, use your influence to have the Council do so at once. Why should you pay taxes for the right to do business if others are allowed to trade without paying anything into the local treasury?"

A. L. Smith, manager of the Brant County Farmers' Co-operative Society, has resigned.

A window such as the above is seasonable at this time, and features in display a number of lines that should appeal just now.

FICTION versus FACTS

"THERE SHOULD BE NO SENTIMENT IN BUSINESS. If your local merchant cannot supply you with Groceries at as low a price as you can secure them elsewhere, including freight charges, he is not entitled to the business.

BUT you should be sure that you are making a real saving before placing your order outside your locality. If you save a dollar on a bag of sugar, and pay 10c per lb. too much for 25 lbs. of tea, you are out $1.50 —and you are liable to pay more than 10c per lb. too much. If you get 5 lbs. of baking soda for nothing, and paid 60c too much for a 5-lb. tin of baking powder, you have lost money on the deal. If you saved 50c on a bag of rolled oats and paid 60c too much for a 16-ounce bottle of extract of vanilla, your loss is 10c, and the freight; and when you buy extracts and baking powder under private brands, you don't know how much you have lost.

The following "clippings" are taken from the book of instructions issued to their agents by a Winnipeg firm claiming to be wholesale grocers, and in this connection you may be assured that there is no Winnipeg wholesale grocery firm selling direct to the consumer. The large department stores, as well as a number of the larger retail grocers, also our local merchants, buy quite a number of lines direct from the manufacturer or packer.

The following will give you some idea of the methods suggested. It is copied from their printed "Manual for Salesmen":—

"The Necessity of Showing Your Customers a Saving"

"Naturally the first and most essential element is to show your customers a saving—to demonstrate in a convincing manner that in buying of us they are sure of better goods for less money that they can possibly obtain elsewhere.

"The quickest and most satisfactory method of accomplishing this is by the use of 'leaders.'

"To carry out this idea effectively, you should sell on a very close margin, if any, certain advertised staples, prices on which are well known to customers generally.

"For this purpose we strongly recommend our salesmen to sell the articles mentioned elsewhere in this book as the most effective leaders, at cost or even at a small loss, depending for your remuneration on other goods, especially those mentioned in this manual as the 'Cream of the Trade'."

"Why You Should Refuse Small Orders

"Such sales will not permit of your using 'Leaders,' hence the customer will be unable to see any inducement in our quotations. With this lacking, one of the greatest incentives to trade with us is lost."

These are the "leaders," but they are apparently not anxious to sell them unless they can sell enough teas, coffees, etc., to cover up the loss on the "leaders."

"The Most Effective Leaders"

"Advertised brands of tobaccos, yeast cakes, baking soda, lye, package cereals, rolled oats, matches, corn meal, navy beans, laundry starch, linseed oil, clothes pins, fruit jars, lard and sugar."

"You should exercise every effort, however, to keep your sales of the goods (especially the three latter-named articles) down to the lowest possible point, otherwise your customers may not have sufficient, if any funds left to buy teas, coffees and other groceries on which you can average up for any loss you may sustain on the Leaders.

"Where the Profit Lies"

"Teas, coffees, spices, extracts, baking powder, molasses, jams, toilet soaps, machine oils, paint, axle grease, may be truly called the 'Cream of the Trade.'

"The salesman who does not sell a large percentage of these and in liberal quantities, too, is sure to meet failure."

If he follows their instructions, he will use these methods to get orders:

1st—To quote "Leaders" such as sugar and other staple lines that most people know the values of, at cost or even at a loss, in order to create the impression that other lines are equally good value.

2nd—To endeavor to keep your order for "Leaders" as small as possible. For instance, if you wish two or three bags of sugar, they tell you that the price of sugar may go down and you should not buy too much; or if rice, beans or other cereals are used as "leaders," here is a danger of you buying too much, they are to advise you not to do so as they may become mouldy.

3rd—To induce you to order very large quantities of tea, coffee, extracts, baking powder, spices, etc., at prices that show a big profit for the agent, in order to even up for the loss on the "leaders."

4th—To sell you black pepper at a low price, because you will likely know the usual price of pepper, you will be led to believe that the other spices are equally good value.

5th—To induce you to order large quantities of the other spices—at least one pound or more of each kind —but to quote the price by the ounce in order that the price may appear less to you. For instance, 16 ounces of Jamaica ginger at 4c per ounce seems less than a pound at 64c. As you can buy pure Jamaica ginger in almost any store at 40c per pound, you can see the advantages in this plan.

6th—To sell you large quantities of flavoring extracts, and to use the same tactics as with the spices, viz:— to quote them by the ounce, as 10 cents per ounce seems cheap, although it means $1.60 for a 16 oz. bottle, and you can buy a 16 oz. bottle of the best pure extract, put up under a brand that is a guarantee of the quality, in most any store for $1.25.

7th—To try and work what they call the "sandwich" system which means to quote one or two leaders and then a few profitable lines, then another "leader" to convince you, and then some more long profit lines, and so on.

8th—To try and convince you that the quality of their lines is superior to standard lines by such silly tests as burning extracts and pulverising coffee beans in a mortar and letting you smell the "delightful aroma." All pure extracts will burn, and coffee worth 35c per lb. or over has a delightful odor when freshly crushed.

9th—To infer, or openly claim that a large portion of the lines of groceries sold in the local store are adulterated; that the so-called pure extracts are impure; that the spices are adulterated; that the coffee usually sold in stores is adulterated with all sorts of rubbish—that their baking powder is superior to standard brands; that jams sold in stores are impure, etc. They evidently take it for granted that the buyer is not aware of the fact that the government has provided a heavy penalty for marking any goods "PURE," that are not pure. As this class of "wholesale" firm does not deal with the merchants here, we are unable to say whether these tactics and arguments are being used in this locality to get business. We only know that these are the methods suggested to their agents by some of the firms. If they are used, you will know the reason, and will, no doubt, be guided accordingly.

If you are in doubt, and granulated sugar is quoted to you at one or two dollars under the market price (we understand that if it is hard to get a customer started this is sometimes done) offer to buy 100 or 200 sacks—your local merchant will handle them for you, if they come across—and see if they will fill the order.

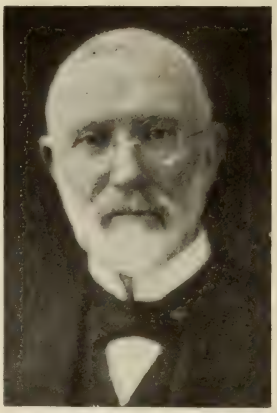
"Individualism as a Factor in Affairs"

Is Subject of an Inspirational and Most Impressive Address Delivered by Sir Joseph Flavelle, Before the Canadian National Newspapers and Periodicals Association on the Occasion of the Annual Convention Last Week

TORONTO, Nov. 15. (Special).—Speaking at a luncheon of the Canadian National Newspapers and Periodicals Association the other day, of which organization Canadian Grocer is a member, Sir Joseph Flavelle, who was the guest of honor, declared that individual effort and achievement are the greatest elements in life. Sir Joseph was speaking on "Individualism as a Factor in Affairs." His address was inspirational and remarkably impressive. It was a call for the development of the individual man. Sir Joseph spoke as follows:—



In emphasizing Individualism, I am not claiming for it a "cure-all." If we were discussing the whole broad issue I would give it its relative place, but in the time at our disposal I cannot do so. In stressing Individualism, I am only stressing one of the great underlying principles in affairs. I will introduce the subject with a few illustrations, and perhaps you will catch the drift of my thought.

In a book of Memoirs of a German Prince—one of the Hohenzollerns—the Prince tells of his experience with General Falkenhayn. The General is teaching him to ride, and after taking him across much rough country in which his heart nearly failed him, the Prince was brought up against a stiff obstacle. The General spat out: Throw your heart across, the rest will follow." I think in this statement lies the interpretation of character. Our difficulties accumulate, and when the supreme one comes at the tail end, the test of a man is his capacity to "throw his heart across."

Lord Rosebery in his book of "Miscellanies" furnishes a copy of an address which he delivered to the students of the University of Glasgow, and in which the following appeared:

"We had then (speaking of a period fifty years back) the terrible hand-to-hand struggle with learning on the one hand and poverty on the other, which embodied in a new form the competitive spirit of our ancestors, but which turned out indomitable Scotsmen, who had suffered so much, and who had done so much, that they needed and dreaded nothing in the battle of life."

He illustrates this by a fellow-craftsman of yours, Robertson Nicholl, the son of a Presbyterian minister, and now Sir Robertson Nicholl of the British Weekly. He won a bursary of £12, which took him to the University of Aberdeen. He spent £8 in fees, and had £4 left for his maintenance during twenty weeks in Aberdeen. He spent a shilling a week on lodging; his food was bread and cheese, and his drink treacle and water. Lord Rosebery says, by way of parenthesis—"I ask you to remember I am not recommending a diet, but recalling a character." Nicholl won out, even though he had to go through an Aberdeen winter without fuel or fire in his room.

"And Its Name is Courage"

Sir James Barrie, in his rectorial address delivered at St. Andrew's University in May last, said to the group of young men graduating from the University:

"I cannot provide you with a staff for your journey, but perhaps I can tell you something about it, how to use it and lose it, and find it again, and cling to it more than ever. You shall cut it—so it is ordained—every one of you for himself—and its name is Courage."

He illustrated this in a letter to him from Captain Scott of the Antarctic, written in the tent "you know of," where it was found long afterwards with his body and those of some other very gallant gentlemen, his comrades. The letter, in part, was as follows:

"We are pegging out in a very comfortless spot. Hoping this letter may be found and sent to you, I write you a word of farewell. I want you to think well of me, and my end. Goodbye. I am not afraid of the end, but sad to miss many a simple pleasure which I had planned for the future in our long marches.....We are in a desperate state..feet frozen, no fuel, and a long way from food, but it would do your heart good to be in our tent to hear our songs and our cheery conversation.....Later (It is here that the words become difficult) We are very near the end.....We did intend to finish ourselves when things proved like this, but we have decided to die naturally without."

Barrie then took these young graduates to Gallipoli, and told of a young officer "dropped overboard to light decoys on the shore so as to deceive the Turks as to where the landing was to be. He pushed a raft containing them in front of him. It was a frosty night, and he was naked and painted black. Firing from the ships was going on all around. It was a two hours' swim in pitch darkness. He did it, and crawled through the scrub to listen to the talk of the enemy who were so near that he could have shaken hands with them, lit his decoys, and swam back. He seems to look on this as a gay affair. He is a V. C. now, and you would not think to look at him that he could ever have presented such a disreputable appearance, would you?" The officer was present, so that these University lads could look at the man who "threw his heart across" and the rest followed.

"Fight on, my men, says Sir Andrew Barton,
I am hurt, but I am not slain,
I'll lie me down, and bleed awhile,
And then I'll rise and fight again."

You say "These are heroic cases, incident to the war, effected by the war spirit." Let me give you one from humble life.

Two years ago, driving from Oakville to the city, in the morning, I picked up a passenger on the highway near the Goodyear rubber plant. It transpired that the man had served in the Great War. He had been invalided home from wounds, and he still had an unhealed sore on his back from shrapnel. He had secured a position at Goodyear's when business was active, and had bought a piece of land and built a shack on the Etobicoke. Then the bad times came in the rubber business, and he was laid off. He told me he had a wife and six boys, the eldest being thirteen years old. He had secured a job at the Dome Mines for the winter, and had been out that morning to tell a chum that he could secure a place for him, and was met with
